THE TĀITTIRĪYA-PRĀTIÇĀKHYA.

WITH ITS COMMENTARY,

THE TRIBHĀSHYARATNA:

TEXT, TRANSLATION, AND NOTES.

BY WILLIAM D. WHITNEY,

PROFESSOR OF SANSKRIT IN YALE COLLEGE.

Presented to the Society October 14th, 1868.

INTRODUCTORY NOTE.

THE manuscript material on which is founded this edition of the Tāittirīya-Prātiçākhyā and Tribhāshyaratna is as follows:

1. T. A copy of the text of the treatise alone, in a modern hand, on light-colored paper. It was sent me by Prof. Fitz-Edward Hall, from Benares, in 1857, and appears to be a copy made for him from some older manuscript: but it contains no intimation of its own date or of that of its original; presenting at the end, in place of the usual colophon, the beginning of a list of words which in pada-text show a final n. It is distinctly and correctly written. On the back is inscribed "Krishna-vajuh-prātis'ākhyā, by Kārtikeya." On what ground this ascription of authorship is made, I do not know; it does not, so far as I am aware, find support from any other quarter.

2. W. A copy of the text and commentary together, each separate rule being followed by its own comment. This manuscript, like the preceding, I owe to the kindness of Prof. Hall. It is handsomely written, in a large clear hand, and fills 146 leaves (numbered 1-89, 100, 1-56), measuring about four and a half by nine and a half inches. To the end of 25a, seven lines are written on a page; thenceforward, nine lines. It has no statement of scribe, place, or date; but I imagine that a final leaf, with the end of the colophon, had been lost or destroyed some time before it was sent to me. The part remaining reads as follows: grīkṛṣṇār-pabhastu grīkālabhāiravaprasann oṃ yāyakāṇḍavidhāyordhvam rshayo rshayo rshih: ity āgīśraçīmākāpūrvam rsham ce ti svataṁ-tratā: 1 kramyādhrvano bhavaty agre pāvako rpayutīti ca. This just fills up the leaf; but another hand has written below, at its edge, what purports to be the ending of the second verse: visha- *yēṅgīra ity evāpy agra ity ādi lupyate.*2., and has added, as final benediction, śrīvīṣṇavaraprasaṇn.

This is a virgin manuscript, containing neither erasures, insertions, nor alterations. Considering that it thus presents every first fault of its scribe unamended, it is very good and correct. Through the first twelve chapters, the rules of the Prātiśākhya are distinguished from the commentary by being rubbed over with a red powder.

3. B. This authority comes from the west of India, where (see Dr. Bühler, in Zeitsch. Dent. Morg. Ges., xxii.319) the Tribhāsh-yaratna is said to be not very rare. From a manuscript there collected, a copy was made under direction of Dr. Bühler for the Berlin library, and forwarded to Prof. Weber, at whose friendly suggestion and instance it was transcribed for me, in roman letters, by Dr. Siegfried Goldschmidt, to whom I desire here to express my gratitude for a service so valuable and so kindly rendered. The manuscript contains more inaccuracies of reading than any of the others which I have used, yet they are in the main superficial, and the text given is a pretty complete and correct one.

4. O. Through the kind offices of Prof. Max Müller, I have been enabled to procure a collation (made with a copy of my own manuscript, "W.") of the incomplete Oxford manuscript (MS. Bodl. W. 478), first described by Roth (Zur Lit. und Gesch. des Weda., pp. 54, 62 seq.), and used also by Weber (Ind. Stud. iv.77 seq.). It begins in the middle of the comment upon iii.12, thus lacking somewhat less than a quarter of the entire work.

5. G. This is a romanized copy of a manuscript which belongs to the Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain and Ireland, and is written on strips of palm leaf, in the Grantham character. The copy was made for me by Dr. Julius Eggeling, who has thus laid me under deep obligation, and contributed most essentially to the success of my work. Hardly less than to him is my indebtedness to Dr. Reinhold Rost, Secretary of the Royal Asiatic Society, who notified me of the existence of the manuscripts in the Society's library soon after their discovery, and who suggested and aided their transcription. There are doubtless few other Sanskritists in Europe, besides these gentlemen, to whom works written in the southern Indian characters are not sealed books, and there can be none, I am sure, who evince a more liberal readiness to make their peculiar knowledge of service to the rest. The catalogue which Dr. Rost is preparing to publish of the Royal Asiatic Society's collection of manuscripts will give such other particulars respecting age, condition, etc., as I am compelled here to omit.

6. M. The library of the same Society also contains a second copy of the Prātiśākhya and its commentary, written on paper, in the Malayālam character. Of this, Dr. Eggeling has taken the pains to note the various readings as compared with the Grantham manuscript, in his transcript of the latter.

Both these manuscripts from southern India are so arranged that the rules of the Prātiçākhyā are given first, in a body, and are followed by the commentary, also in bulk.

As regards the text of the Prātiçākhyā itself, all these authorities agree very closely: there are but two or three cases of well-established variations of reading among them. In respect to the text of the commentary, their accordance, as was to be expected, is much less: they fall, in fact, into three well-marked classes; or, as one might say, present three different recensions of the work. The two codices belonging to the Royal Asiatic Society, the Grantham ("G.") and the Malayālam ("M."), stand in the nearest possible relation to one another, having almost all their errors, omissions, and orthographical peculiarities in common, and only by comparatively rare and inconspicuous differences proved not to be copied the one from the other. My own manuscript ("W.") and that sent by Dr. Bühler from Bombay ("B.") also offer substantially the same text, although their differences are much more frequent, and of a more important character, than those of G. and M. As for the Oxford manuscript ("O."), it is, in its earlier portions, pretty closely accordant with W. and B., having an especially near relationship to B., with whose slight variations of the text given by W. it almost uniformly agrees; later, however, it strikes off upon a track of its own, and comes to differ from both the other recensions in a much greater degree than they differ between themselves.

Such being the case, I have thought it best to adopt for publication the version offered by W., partly because this is the only one for which I possess an original manuscript (and a tolerably old and correct one), partly because it is, upon the whole, better supported than that of G. and M.—which, as I have shown above, can hardly be reckoned, both together, as constituting more than a single manuscript. I have accordingly, avoiding the making up of an eclectic text from the various recensions, followed W. as closely as I could; and especially, when it was supported by the joint authority of B. and O., or of B. alone—thus sometimes, undoubtedly, rejecting an intrinsically preferable and perhaps more original reading given by one or another of the remaining authorities, if that offered by W. was of a character to be endured. At the end of the comment to each rule are given the various readings of all the manuscripts, with sufficient fullness, I hope, to answer the desirable ends of critical comparison. Obvious and trifling errors of transcription, of course, I have not noted, but only those which made a false reading or tended to become such: I have been most liberal in overlooking the blunders of B., as being, on the whole, of least consequence.

In regard, however, to the two matters of punctuation and euphonic combination, I have taken liberties with the text of which I have given no account. The various manuscripts are in no slight degree discordant with one another, inconsistent with themselves, and careless of the requirements of the sense, in the use they make of the signs of interpunction: they offer absolutely no standard to follow. For the occurrence of the signs as printed, therefore, I am alone responsible; and no one who can anywhere make a better division of clauses than I have made need be restrained from so doing by the belief that he is running counter to manuscript authority. Again, I have (except in certain cases at the end of a cited rule or passage, where a reference follows) put all the words of the commentary in euphonic combination according to the usual rules; while in the manuscripts (as is common in exegetical writings) they are very frequently, for the sake of greater clearness, separated from one another.* Here, too, the usage of the various authorities is too discordant and irregular to be followed. And to report their readings in these two particulars would burden the critical notes with a mass of useless and wearisome details.

In the same manner are treated such orthographical peculiarities of the several manuscripts as that G. and M. regularly write a final sibilant instead of visurjanīya before an initial sibilant, and often, where a m is assimilated to a following mute, write the nasal mute corresponding to the latter, instead of anusvāra. Moreover, in the representation of the nasal sounds, by the nasal consonants, anusvāra (ñ), or m̐, I have followed a consistent method, with disregard of the manuscript usage.

The text given at the foot of the page contains the whole comment, with two exceptions: citations from the Tāittirīya-Saṁhitā, being written out in full, with references, in the notes to the rules, are indicated below only by first words or letters, with signs of omission added; and again, where lists of affected words are given in a rule, in euphonic combination, and repeated, separate, at the beginning of the comment, they are replaced by signs of omission, as having been sufficiently presented uncombined in the translation of the rule. Errors of reading in the cited passages themselves are passed without notice, unless of such importance as to cast doubt upon the identity of the passage; but, on the other hand, the frequent differences of the versions as regards the extent of the illustrative passage cited are fully noted in the sequel of the reference.

I have preferred, instead of giving an express and direct translation of the commentary, to work its substance fully into my own notes upon the rules, somewhat as in my edition of the Atharva Prātiśākhya (Journ. Am. Or. Soc'y, Vol. vii., 1862). The different conditions of the case, however, impress quite a different character upon the present work. The completeness and elaborateness of the Tribhāshyaratna make its working-up by far the larger and more important part of what is to be done in illustration of the Prātiśākhya. Possessing no index verborum to the Tāittirīya-Saṁhitā, nor even a manuscript of its paṭha-text, I have not been able to try the Prātiśākhya by it with anything like the same thoroughness as in the case of the similar treatise to the Atharvan. What could be done in the way of testing and supplementing the rules given, by a careful reading and excerption of the Saṁhitā in a single good saṁhitā-manuscript (also procured for me in India by Dr. Hall, and with one or two slight deficiencies in it made up from Berlin, by Prof. Weber), I have endeavored to do. I have been able to refer points of interest connected with the text, in its saṁhitā or paṭha readings, to friends in Europe owning or having access to fuller manuscript material, namely to Professors Weber of Berlin and Haug of München, and have received from them important aid, which I desire here gratefully to acknowledge. Of referenees to the teachings of the other Prâtiçākhyas I have been much more sparing in this than in the former work, in order to avoid repetition: and, for the same reason, some matters of theory which were pretty fully discussed there receive here a more compendious treatment. The present work, in short, to a certain extent presupposes the other—not, however, in such a manner or degree as should interfere with its independence and separate intelligibility.

In making reference to the Tâittirîya-Saṁhitā, I have used only three principal numbers, to designate book, chapter, and section, or kāṇḍa, pragha, and anuvāka. The further division of the sections or anuvākas, where they are of more considerable length, into parcels of fifty words each, is so artificial, destructive of the natural connection of passages, detrimental to the proper phonetic form of the text, and wholly ignored by the Prâtiçākhyā (see notes to the rules of chapter iii.), that I have preferred to express it by the use of "superior" figures attached to that which indicates the anuvāka. Of course, where such attached figure is wanting, the anuvāka is to be understood as composed of a single division.

In the notes of various readings, each figure refers only to the single word to which it is attached, unless a passage of more than one word is included between two repetitions of the same figure; in which case the reference figure, in the notes, is put within parentheses. The abbreviation "om." means 'omit,' and "ins." means 'insert.'

In all transliterated passages of Sanskrit, a colon stands in place of a single stroke of interpunction, and a full stop in place of a double stroke. The general method of transliteration is the same with that which I have hitherto used in the Journal of the American Oriental Society; it will be sufficiently understood from the alphabet given in the note to i.1 (p. 10).

CHAPTER I.

CONTENTS: 1-11, enumeration and classification of sounds composing the alphabet; 12-14, surd and sonant consonants; 15, list of prepositions; 16-21, 27, names of letters and classes of letters; 22-24, 28, terminology of cited words, etc.; 25, 26, 29, 30, respecting the interpretation of rules; 31-37, quantity of simple sounds; 38-40, the three accents; 41-47, details respecting the circumflex accent; 48, 49, compound words; 50-53, respecting cited words; 54-55, words consisting of a single vowel; 56-61, further specifications respecting the interpretation of rules.

THE commentator begins his work with a couple of rather awkwardly-constructed verses, as follows: "I, bowing low with devoted affection to the two feet of Gaṇeśa, as also to the gurus and to divine Voice, shall proceed to utter this comment; which, made upon examination of the exposition of the Prātiśākhya given by Vararuci etc., shines, a Treasure of Threefold Comment (tribhāshyaratna), approved of Brahmans." He adds an exposition of their meaning, explaining giraṁ devīm, 'divine Voice,' by vāgdevīm, 'Goddess of Voice,' and bhāsura, 'Brahman' (literally 'earth-god'), by cideat, 'learned man, sage.' On lakshana, which, as name of a comment, is least in accordance

The "etc." after "Vararuci" is declared to refer to Ātreya and Māhisheya, these three being the authorities upon which the present work is founded, and from which it derives its name. Vararuci and Māhisheya are, indeed, often (about ten times each: see Index) referred to in the sequel, and their discordant views sometimes set forth and discussed: Ātreya has only once (under v.1) the honor of being mentioned. Who is the digester of their three works, and author of the present commentary, which has taken their place and crowded them out of existence, we are not informed; nor, so far as I am aware, has any evidence bearing upon the point been anywhere brought to knowledge. Notice of the different authorities cited by our commentator will be put together in an additional note at the end of this work, for the sake of the light cast by them upon his age.

अथ वणसनाम्नायः ॥ १ ॥

1. Now the list of sounds.

The commentator first gives himself a great deal of trouble to explain the meaning of atha, 'now,' in the rule. He quotes Amara's definition of atho and atha (Amarakośha iii.4.32.8; p. 349 of Deslongchamps's edition), and points out that, as a variety of meanings is there attributed to atha, it is necessary to fix upon a single meaning for it here. In the first place, then, a propitiatory significance is claimed for it, by reason of its equivalence with om; "since the Çikshā-makers declare, 'om and atha are deemed propitiatory.' " Or, again, it indicates something coming next after another; "the implication being that, next after the reading of the Veda, one should gain a knowledge of the lakṣaṇa: there having been study of the Veda before the lakshana, now comes the occasion for the investigation of the lakshana." Here, lakshana appears to be used to designate the Prâtigâkhyâ itself, as above it denoted the commentary to the latter. Once more, atha is declared to have the force of an introduction or heading, according to rule xxii.6, below: "tu, atha, and eva are respectively exceptive, introductory, and limitative;" and the connection of the rule is that now the list of sounds, the order of reading (pâthakrama), is made the subject of treatment.

The composition of sumâmnâya, 'list, rehearsal,' is next pointed out, and the word is stated to mean "the collective sounds, beginning with a and ending with the svarabhakti, in their order, as taught by former learned men."

The catalogue itself follows, as understood by the commentator to be taught or implied in the rules of the treatise. First come the vowels, of which only sixteen are reckoned (see rule 5, below): a, i, and u have each a short, a long, and a protracted value, r only a short and a long, l only a short (W. and B. take the pains to write a figure 2 after the long r, and a 1 after the l, to point out clearly the number of moras they respectively contain; and B. adds after the âi and âu a 2, for the same purpose); second, the twenty-five mutes (see rule 7); third, the four semivowels (rule 8); and fourth, the six spirants (rule 9). This makes fifty-one sounds, clearly specified and counted in their order in the next succeeding rules. Of the rest, there is no so direct enumeration; the commentator has to infer them from their recognition by rules found in later portions of the treatise. Thus, he finds anusvâra acknowledged as an alphabetic element in rule 34 of this chapter, which teaches that it has the quantity of a short vowel; for, he says, "since it is made the substrate of a specific quantity, it is itself a concrete thing, and not, like nasalization, a quality." A passage from the Çikshâ, it is true, appears inconsistent with this, but finds its sufficient explanation in the circumstance that that work includes in one expression the concrete thing and its quality. The cited passage is not to be found in the known text of the

Çikshâ (and the same is the case with several of the passages quoted later: see the additional notes): it is given again, with more fullness, under viii.15. Next, for the visarjanīya, which our Prātiçākhyā does not count among the spirants, is given as authority rule 5 of the eighth chapter, a rule introductory to the euphonic changes of a final h. The commentator brings in as next constituent of the alphabet an element which he calls raṅga, and for which he cites the rule (ii.52) that “nasal quality is given by the unclosing of the nasal passage.” The word raṅga, ‘coloring,’ though a common name for the nasal tinge of utterance, is not found in our Prātiçākhyā, nor even used in the commentary excepting here and under ii.52. What is described in the latter rule is in fact a “quality” (dharma), and not a “qualified” or concrete thing (dharmin); and its inclusion in the alphabet would stultify the argument with which the inclusion of anusvāra was but just now supported. It would seem that the commentator ought to be aiming here at the nāsikya, or euphonic insertion between h and a following nasal mute, and should quote for it rule xxi.14; he does not otherwise take account of it in his list, while yet it is precisely as well entitled to a place there as are the yamas. The nasalized semivowels, it is true, into which n and m are directed to be converted before y, l, v (v.26-8), are also left out of the enumeration, unless we suppose the raṅga to be meant to apply to their nasality; and I think it altogether likely that the commentator had them in view in its definition: but this is only avoiding one difficulty by running into two worse ones—namely, by omitting the nāsikya, and by reckoning as a member of the alphabet what is really only one of the constituent elements of certain sounds. Further, rule xiii.16 is made the warrant for the lingual l, rule xxi.12 for the four yamas, and rule xxi.15, finally, for the svarabhakti: and the conclusion is reached that “by this process, the number of sixty is clearly derivable from the rules themselves as that of the letters in the Yajur-Veda.”

An objection is now raised and removed. "Considering that the Çikshâ says 'the letters are regarded as sixty-three or sixty-four, in the opinion of Çambhu' (Çikshâ, verse 3; see Weber's edition of the treatise, in his Indische Studien, iv.348-9), how is the number sixty established? Answer: there is no inconsistency with the dictum of the Çikshâ, seeing that the latter has in view the whole body of sounds, as used both in the Veda and in common life; while here the determination (of sixty) is derived from the assumption of just so many letters by the rules of the treatise."

The alphabetic scheme is, then, as follows:

With the exception of the nasal y, l, v, already referred to, this list includes all the alphabetic sounds treated of by the Prātiçākhyā. For what concerns the peculiarities of their character or classification, see the special rules of which they are the subject; as also, for the differences between the teachings of this and of the other kindred treatises with reference to them. Only the Vājasaneyi-Prātiçākhyā includes in its text a complete list and enumeration of letters, and that by an afterthought, in a later and less genuine chapter (viii.1-31).

अथ नवादितः समानाक्षराणि ॥ २ ॥

2. Now the nine at the beginning are simple vowels.

2. athe 'ti sañjñādhikārārthaḥ: asmin¹ varṇasamāmnāya ādita ārabhya nava varṇāḥ samānāksharasañjñā bhavanti: 'yathā: a ā äz i î iz u û äz². sañjñāyāḥ³ pratyojanam: dirghaṇ samānākshare savarṇapare (x.2) ity ādi. nanv īdrçī mahatī sañjñā kimarthā⁴: çikshādiçāstraprasiddhyamurodhāye⁵ 'ti brūmah.

¹ B. tasmin. ⁽²⁾ W. B. a ā äz ity ādi. ³ G. M. -jñā. ⁴ G. M. -tham. ⁵ G. M. om. -di.

Literally, 'are homogeneous syllables;' samānākshara and its correlative samādhya-kshara, 'syllable of combination,' being the current names for simple vowel and for diphthong; the latter, however, is not used in this treatise. The nine intended are, as shown in the preceding list, a ā āz i ī īz u ū ūz. The r and l vowels are denied the quality of simplicity or homogeneity, although their structure as composed of heterogeneous elements is not further described; the Rik Pr. (xiii.14), the Vāj. Pr. (iv.145), and the Ath. Pr. (i.37-9) give the details of their formation, while nevertheless the two first expressly include r and l among the samānāksharas (omitting l, apparently, because no case anywhere occurs that should test its quality), and the same classification is inferribly recognized by the last.

The commentator explains the atha of this rule as signifying the introduction of the subject of names or technical appellations (saṁjñā), and cites, as example of the use of the term, rule x.2, respecting the coalescence of two similar simple vowels into a long vowel. Finally, the unwieldiness of the long word samānākshara striking his mind, he asks "why such a big name?" and relieves himself by the answer "we say, in order to correspond with the established usage of the Çikshā and other text-books." The Çikshā as we know it, it may be remarked, does not employ the term.

3. Two and two, short and long, are similar.

That is to say, as the commentary explains, of these simple vowels, two and two short, two and two long, or a long and a short, are called "similar." The meaning seems rather to be that, of the three triplets which make up the category of simple vowels, the first two in each triplet, the short and the long, will be designated as "similar"—to the exclusion, namely, of the pluta or protracted vowels. The term is used but once in the treatise (namely in x.2, the rule last above quoted), as applied to vowels, and nothing is practically gained by denying its inclusion of the protracted vowels, since these are specially protected from coalescence by the rule x.24. The r-vowels are here again shut out, as in the preceding rule; and, in fact, no case occurs in the Vedic text in which two of them are fused into one.

¹ G. M. eteshu. ² G. M. ins. vā. ³ B. om.; G. M. ins. vā. ⁴ B. -tvād.

The word translated 'similar' means literally 'of identical color' (i. e. sound), and is several times applied later to identity of consonantal sound. It is, as the commentator points out, a self-explaining term, or one whose application is directly in accordance with its natural meaning (anvārtha); and hence no suspicion is to be entertained of the inclusion of a and i, for instance, as "similar," because of their different mode of organic production. As example of the use of the term is again cited x.2.

4. Not so, when a protracted vowel precedes.

This is an arbitrary exclusion, made to fit a particular case, which might with more evident propriety have been provided for later, where such cases are under treatment, rather than here in the preliminary definition of terms (compare a somewhat similar case in the Rik Pr., i.1, r. 4). The commentator paraphrases the rule "a simple vowel having a protracted one before it is not termed 'similar;'" and goes on to cite and explain in full the case to which it applies. In the phrase ágne: íti: áha (vi.5.8¹), the word ágne has its final diphthong protracted, and becomes ágnā'zī. By the rule (x.2) for the coalescence of two similar simple vowels into the corresponding long vowel, this would then unite with the following word to form ágnā'zī'íti. The quality of similarity, however, being denied by the present rule to the final i, it is treated as a dissimilar vowel, being first converted into y by rule x.15, the y dropped by x.19, and the coalescence of the remaining āz with the following i (as prescribed by x.4) prevented by x.24: thus is assured the reading ágnā's'ity áha.

Our Prātiçākhyā is to be commended for not including in its list of vowels the long l, and for postulating no useless protracted forms of r and l.

शेषो व्यञ्जनानि ॥ ६ ॥

6. The rest are consonants.

As example of the term vyañjana, 'consonant,' rule xxi.1, which pronounces the consonant a member of the adjacent vowel, is cited in the commentary, according to the two manuscripts from northern India; those from the south substitute for it the opening rule of the third chapter, and also omit the explanatory statement "beginning with k and ending with svarabhakti," which is given by the others.

आद्याः पञ्चविंशति स्पर्शाः ॥ ७ ॥

7. The first twenty-five are mutes.

The commentator explains: "among the consonants, the first twenty-five letters are called mutes" (sparça, literally 'contact'). The northern manuscripts add, as under the last rule, "beginning with k, and ending with m." It is next pointed out that rules 2 and 5 contain the specification ādītaḥ, 'at the beginning,' and that the different phraseology of this rule, namely ādyaḥ, 'first,' indicates a difference of meaning: it signifies that the sounds referred to are first among the consonants, not first among the vowels (better, we should say, not first in the whole list). Of this style of interpretation, which forces a special significance into very innocent variations of phraseology, we shall meet with other and more striking examples farther on.

Rule xiv.27 is given as instance of the employment of the technical term here defined.

8. The next four are semivowels.

The four semivowels are y, r, l, v. The rule cited by the commentary in illustration of the use of the term "semivowel" (anta-sthā, i. e. antah-sthā, 'standing between, intermediate [between consonant and vowel]': see note to Ath. Pr. i.30) is one (v.28) prescribing the treatment of final m before an initial semivowel.

परे पडूष्माणः ॥ ९ ॥

9. The next six are spirants.

Namely, the three sibilants, ś, ṣ, and s, the jihvāmālīya, z, the upadhmanīya, q, and the aspiration, h. As regards the sounds to which the name āshman, 'flatus,' shall be given, the phonetic treatises are greatly at variance. The Vāj. Pr. (viii.22) limits the class to the sibilants and h; the Ath. Pr. (see note to i.31) apparently adds the guttural and labial spirants and the more indistinct visarjanīya; the Rik Pr. (i.2), these and the anusvāra. We have an equal right to be surprised at the inclusion of this last in the class, and at the exclusion from it, by our treatise, of the visarjanīya.

To instance the employment of "spirant," the comment cites the rule (xiv.16) forbidding the duplication of a spirant before a vowel.

स्पर्शानामानुपूर्व्येण पञ्चपञ्च वर्गाः ॥ १० ॥

10. Of the mutes, the successive fives are the series.

The commentary paraphrases: "among the mutes, five and five sounds, in their order, have the designation 'series'; they begin respectively with k, c, t, p, and end with ñ, ṇ, n, n, m." This exposition is in accordance with the requirements of the context, the treatise being here engaged in defining its technical terms. Otherwise, we might divide ---- pañca pañcavargāḥ, and translate, like the corresponding rule in the Rik Pr. (i.2), 'there are five series, of five each.'

The illustrative rule (xiv.20) cited in the comment teaches the non-duplication of a mute of the lingual series before one of the dental series.

प्रथमद्वितीयतृतीयचतुर्थोत्तमाः ॥ ११ ॥

11. And are called first, second, third, fourth, and last.

Each series of five mutes, that is to say, is composed of a surd, a surd aspirate, a sonant, a sonant aspirate, and a nasal, as t, th, ḍ, dh, n; and these classes are named according to their order in the several series. The commentator makes no note here of the physical difference of the classes, but says "In each series, the sounds, in their order, are styled first, second, third, fourth, and last. Even though a name founded on enumeration obviously belongs to them [is assured them, without a special rule to that effect], yet, for the purpose of denying appellation on the ground of any other enumeration, the technical terms 'first' and so on are prescribed, to enjoin a certain enumeration.(?) How so? Why, to establish the designation 'first' and so on for k and its successors alone, and to deny to the vowels, semivowels, spirants, etc., designations founded on their enumeration." And he proceeds to cite four rules (ii.9; xiv.12, 24; viii.3: but the southern MSS. cite v.38 instead of ii.9) as examples of the use of the five terms defined.

10. *sparśānām madhya ānupūrryeṇa pañcapañca varṇā var-gasañjñā bhavanti: ka-ca-ṭa-ta-pādūyo² ṇa-ṇa-ṇa-na-māntā ity arthoḥ. sañjñāyāḥ prayojanam: ta vargaḥ ca ta varga paraḥ (xiv.20) iti.*³

The other Prâtiçâkhyas employ the same designations for the mutes (save that the Vâj. Pr. also calls the nasals pañcama, 'fifth'), but without taking the trouble to define them or prescribe their use by a rule.

उष्मविसर्जनीयप्रथमद्वितीया अघोषाः ॥ १२ ॥

12. The spirants, visarjanîya, and the first and second mutes, are surd.

The Rik Pr. gives (i.2,3) a similar statement; the Ath. Pr. uses the terms "surd" and "sonant" without defining which consonants form each class; the Vâj. Pr. (i.50-53) substitutes for the terms arbitrary formulas.

The physical peculiarity of the surd utterance is defined in the next chapter (rules 5,10).

The commentator illustrates the use of the term by the rule (ix.2) concerning the treatment of visarjanîya before a surd.

13. But not h.

"H is not styled a surd; this is an exception rendered necessary by the circumstance that h, being [by i.9] a spirant, would otherwise be included [by the last rule] in the class of surds," says the comment.

All the phonetic treatises treat h as a sonant. For further definition of its character, see rules ii.6,9,46,47, below.

14. The rest of the consonants are sonant.

The commentary enters into a rather lengthy defense of the propriety of this rule, which reads literally as follows: "The remainder of the consonants other than the surds is styled sonant. Even though, when the surds have already been stated in rule 12, the sonant quality of the rest, on the principle of 'remainder,' is assured—just as, when it is said, 'of Devadatta and Yajñadatta, Devadatta owns no kine,' the conclusion is assured that Yajña-datta is a kine-owner—nevertheless, the indication of the technical term is made in the text-book, for the sake of practical convenience (?). Also, because of the superiority of express mention over inclusion in a remainder. Otherwise—the name of surd is denied to h by rule 13, nor is h sonant, there being no rule to that effect; and so with the rest of the consonants; the vowels are also in like manner not sonant and not surd—this being the case, when the rule shall be given (ix.8) 'also when followed by a sonant,' the doubt would arise, 'followed by a sonant' means followed by what? Let not this be so: in this view the present rule is undertaken." It is added "In this rule, the distinctive meaning, in the form of objection and replication, is set forth by Māhisheya." And the rule ix.8, already referred to, is quoted again by way of illustration of the use of the term "sonant."

The Rik Pr. (i.3), after specifying the surd letters, leaves the sonants to be inferred pāriṣeshyāt, 'by the remainder-principle,' as is expressly pointed out in the commentary on the passage (see Regnier's edition, note to rule i.12).

The vowels are not included under the designation ghoshavant, 'sonant,' although (as is explained in rule ii.8) formed of the same material with the sonant consonants.

Our treatise does not, like the other Prāṭicākhyas (R. Pr. i.3; V. Pr. i.54; A. Pr. i.10), define the "first" and "third" mutes as soshman, 'aspirated.'

15. Ā, pra, ava, upa, abhi, adhi, prati, pari, vi, ni—these are prepositions.

These ten words are but half the number which are reckoned as prepositions by the Rik and Vāj. Prātiçākhyas (R. Pr. xii.6; V. Pr. vi.24) and by Pāṇini (see the gana prādīyāḥ). The commentator notes the discordance with Pāṇini, and inquires why the maker of this rule presumingly cuts short the list of prepositions with the word iti in it. His reply is, that only so many are recognized by the Yajur-Veda. Another objection which he raises and removes, arriving at the comfortable conclusion “therefore there is no discordance whatever,” I do not see the point of. The discordance is a real one, and difficult to explain. The term preposition (upasarga) is used in three of the rules of the treatise, viz. vi.4 (which is the cited instance in the commentary), x.9, and xiv.8: for the bearing of the restriction in number, see the notes on those rules.

That is, for example, akāra is the name of a, ekāra of e, and so on. The Vāj. Pr. (i.37) is the only other treatise which takes the trouble to prescribe this usage, common to them all. Our own refers to it also in a later rule (xxii.4). The word kāra means ‘making, producing.’ It is in the rules of the Prātiçākhyas added not only to simple alphabetic sounds (varṇa) as their names, but also to syllables like aḥ and an (see below, rules 23, 53), and the

The term nâsikya designates here, of course, the nasal figments taught in rules xxi. 12-14. All these indistinct, hardly articulate, sounds must be spoken of by their descriptive titles, not by any name founded upon their form. The commentator explains that the appending of kâra to the sounds here specified—which would otherwise be regular, since they come under the category of varṇa, 'alphabetic elements'—is annulled by the rule: adding as a reason, that they are nowhere met with thus treated. He then goes on to raise and refute a very subtle and hair-splitting objection. In rule 16, he says, kāra is prescribed to be added not to the vocable (vācaka) varṇa, 'sound,' itself, but only to the thing designated (vācya) by that vocable; so likewise in this rule it is proper to understand by visarjanīya etc. the things designated by those words, and nothing else (and hence, the rule must not be interpreted as implying that visarjanīya and the other names given are, in default of those formed with kāra, the accepted designations for the sounds in question). This being the case, the illustration given under the rule by Vararuei and others—namely, rule xiv.15, speaking of r and "visarjanīya" as not liable to duplication—is an unsuitable one. Such is the objection. The reply is: you must not think so; since the sounds designated by the terms in the rule are actually nowhere employed by themselves (as designations), the rule simply intends to include designation and thing designated in one expression; and the quoted example is proper enough.

19. Of r, however, epha forms the name.

That is to say, the technical designation of r is repha; ra being also admitted, by rule 21, below: ra is not found anywhere in the Hindu grammatical literature. This peculiarity of treatment of r, as compared with the other consonants, is to be paralleled with the way in which it is written in consonant groups, almost as if a vowel.

The Vâj. Pr. has an equivalent rule (i.40).

The word tu, 'however,' in this rule, according to the commentator, is meant to deny the application to r of both the rules 16 and 17. Some, he says, hold that it denies only rule 17, or the insertion of a between r and the appended kāra; but this is wrong; for it would imply that the name of r was made sometimes by appending kāra and sometimes by appending epha, just as an alternation is in fact allowed by rule 21 below between ra and repha, and exemplified by rules vii.11 and xxi.15; while no

20. The short vowel, with varṇa after it, is the name of the three vowels.

The "three vowels" referred to are the three quantities—short, long, and protracted—of the vowels a, i, u, respectively; varṇa, in this case, indicating only the 'color,' or phonetic complexion, of the vowel, without regard to its length. The Ath. Pr. has the same usage of this term, but without defining it by rule. As our treatise acknowledged no protracted r, and neither a long nor a protracted l, it does not admit the compounds rvarṇa and lvarṇa: of the other three it frequently avails itself. The instance selected by the commentator is rule x.4, which directs the combination of a with a following i, ī, iz into e.

21. An a forms the names of consonants.

This rule allows us to call a consonant not only, as prescribed in rules 16 and 17 above, by a name formed by adding kāra with a interposed, but also by one formed with a alone. The commentator's example is rule v.22, where t and c are referred to as ta-kāra, ca-kāra, and ç, c again, and ch, as ça, ca, and cha. If something merely additional to the kāra, instead of alternative with it, were intended in the rule, we are told, rule 17 would be made meaningless. But, says an objector, why use kāra at all for the purpose, when even along with it the a has to be brought into requisition? let this alone furnish the name. The reasonableness of the objection is conceded, but the commentator alleges as sufficient justification of the practice followed, that it is in accordance with that of the Çikshā and other text-books.

He continues: others assert that the a added to a consonant indicates (not that consonant pure and simple, but) a syllable composed of the consonant and any following vowel; as for instance in rule ix.3, "visarjanīya followed by kṣa is not assimilated;" where the examples are manah kṣeme (v.2.17), ghanāghanah kṣobhanah (iv.6.41: so all the MSS., both here and under ix.3; my MS. of the Sanhitā reads kṣobhaniḥ), and ukthagāṣaḥ kṣhāma (ii.6.124). This is unsound; for then we should have to read ishe tvā (for ishe tvā, i.1.1 et al.), by the rule vii.13, "after vāghā and śha, t becomes ṭ;" which is wrong. Moreover, in the rule (xii.

4) "ya, va, na, ha, when followed by vowels," the final specification would be useless, because already implied in the names given to the letters. Hence the opinion referred to is wrong, and the name taught by the rule indicates the consonant alone.

As for the actual usage of the treatise, it is somewhat equally divided between the two modes of designation of the consonants: names formed with a alone occur nearly sixty times; with akāra, nearly eighty times. This is exclusive of r, which is called ra four times, repha fifteen times.

22. As also, of a cited word.

The term grahana is used in only two other rules of the Prātiśākhya (i.24,50), but occurs in the commentary times innumerable, in the sense of 'citation, word taken or extracted from the Saṃhitā to be made the subject of some prescription' (root grah, 'seize, take'). The commentator, however, gives it an artificial and false etymology: it denotes, he says, either a word respecting which something is to be enjoined (lakshya), or one which is the cause (nimittu) of an effect produced in some other word. The former is called grahana because it is "seized" (i. e. "affected"); the latter, because something is "seized" or "affected" by it. It is, he continues, a part of a word, a theme or base. The ca, 'also,' of the rule brings forward, or indicates the continued implication of, the a of the preceding rule. The meaning is, then, that a forms the name of a citation, a theme, in whatever situation it may occur.

That is to say, if a word be cited in the text of a rule by its theme-ending a, all its cases or other derivative forms are to be regarded as equally had in view by the rule. Reference is twice made to this principle hereafter by the commentator (under rules vi.13 and x.14), to justify such inclusions. The latter of the cases he here brings up, as example of a nimitta, or citation of an affecting cause; the cited word is oshtha, which is declared to occasion the loss of a preceding a or ā: the only two instances of this combination which the Sanhitā contains are quoted in illustration, viz. svāh " oshthābhyām (vii.3.16¹), and upayāmam adharen ' oshthena (v.7.12). As example of a lakshya, or citation of a word to be determined by rule, he quotes the end of rule xvi.26, with its illustrative citations, kiñçilāḥ caturthaḥ (v.5.9²), and kiñçilāya cakshayanāya ca (iv.5.9¹). This latter example is not very well chosen, as the case is a somewhat difficult and anomalous one (see the note on xvi.26).

This rule, like some of those that follow, is of very small value, since final a is not the necessary sign of a cited theme in which other cases are included; and, on the other hand, parts of words not ending in a are often cited "for the sake of the inclusion of many words" (bahūpādānārtham).

23. Aḥ makes the name of an increment, or of an element suffering alteration or elision.

Here, again, is a precept hardly called for, as the construction and connection of each rule shows in what way any nominative it contains is to be understood, without such an explanation as this, which applies only to a part of the cases, and is unable to teach us which of the three possibilities it contemplates is the actuality in any given case. Moreover, it is faultily expressed, and the commentator is obliged to explain that aḥ here stands for the ending of the nominative case, in the dual and plural as well as the singular. He quotes in illustration five rules: xiv.5 exemplifies a singular increment; vii.1, a singular altered element; v.19, a singular elision; v.25, two-fold altered elements; xxi.12, plural increments.

24. Or the simple citation.

The commentator says: "Of these—namely the increment etc,—there is in some cases, alternatively, citation; the meaning is, without any ah." And he goes on to quote three rules, in which increment (xvi.29), alteration (vii.3), and elision (v.15) are taught otherwise than as prescribed in the preceding rule—which is not, however, thus amended into acceptableness.

25. In case of doubt, citation is made of the next.

This rule, occurring where it does, appears to have been interpolated by an afterthought, attaching itself to the word grahamam, 'citation,' of the preceding rule, without regard to the connection in which that word is used. The meaning is, that when the mere citation of a word from the Saṁhitā would leave a doubt as to which occurrence of the word is intended, some part of the context, a word or part of a word, is cited along with it. But the commentator's first example and its exposition are quite peculiar. He quotes svayamātrṇām ca vikārṇām co 'ttame (v.3.7³), and remarks: "There being a doubt, owing to the occurrence of two ca's in this passage, which of them is to be taken to give the pragraha-character [to uttame], the one next to the proper subject of the rule [kāryabhāj, 'the word undergoing the prescribed effect'] is to be assumed, in the rule reading co 'ttame [iv.11].” He seems to suppose that the “doubt” referred to in the rule concerns the point, which of the two preceding co's is joined with uttame in the precept that establishes the latter's character as a pragraha word, and that we need authority for understanding that the latter of the two is taken. This is little less than silly. His other example is taken from rule iv.15, where ā prshatī is made pragraha, the ā being the final letter of the preceding word yuñjā (yuñjā prshatī, iv.6.9⁴).

Under a later rule (iv.23) this principle is twice referred to, and very curiously and artificially applied. See the note to that rule.

26. Even of more than one.

The genitive in this rule is grammatically inconsistent with the accusative of the one preceding, which I had to translate inaccurately in order to make the connection evident. The commentator declares the “even” (api) here to continue in force the word sañdehe, ‘in case of doubt,’ which is hardly to be approved. He interprets: “When there is ambiguity, citation is made of more than one word or sound,” and quotes tishṭhanty ekayā (v.19) and evo 'ttare (iv.11) as examples. But in these we have only one additional word cited, though more than one additional letter; so that both are properly examples under the preceding rule. There is no case, I believe, where more than one word requires to be cited along with that at which the rule aims; of a part of a word containing more than one letter we have instances in vi.2,5 etc. I see no good reason, however, why these should not be regarded as authorized by the preceding rule, and this one, accordingly, omitted as superfluous.

28. Am makes the name of a product of alteration.

This is the correlative rule to 23, above, from which it has become strangely separated. The commentator explains, as before, that am stands here as representative of the accusative case in any number; but the two examples he gives (v.38 and vii.1) are both of them such as the rule might strictly apply to without any such extension of its meaning.

29. By preceding is meant preceding.

A rule expressed in the form of an identical proposition cannot be claimed to cast much light of itself, but demands a comment as its essential part. Our commentator explains: "Whatever word is pointed out by the qualification 'preceding,' that word is to be understood as designated by its own form in that situation alone; but not, on account of identity of form, another word standing in a different situation. Thus, by the rules (iv.12,13) 'dyāvāprthivī is pragraha;' also the preceding word,' the word yāvatī is made a pragraha in the passage yāvatī dyāvāprthivī mahitvā (iii.2.6¹); but it is not therefore pragraha in the passage yāvatī cāi prthivī (v.2.3¹)."

This is the counterpart of the preceding rule, and is explained by the commentator in corresponding terms. His illustration is taken from rules iv.49,50, where dve and the word following it are declared pragraha. In the passage, then, dve jāye vindate (vi.6.4³), jāye is pragraha, but not in the passage yonir asi jāya e 'hi (i.7.9¹: G. M. omit e 'hi).

The rule is only once referred to hereafter, namely under iv.52; and there for a purpose which it was not intended to answer.

Here again, the "also" continues the implication of the predicate of rule 31, we are told. The only vowels contemplated by the rule, further, are i and u, since there is an absence of the attribute of like quantity with a in the diphthongs. As examples from the Sanhitā are quoted ishe tvā (i.1.1 et al.), upaprayanto adhvaram (i.5.5¹ or 7¹: W. with nanu), that the matter of the three rules should have been put into this form: "A is short: also any vowel having like quantity with it;" because, as actually stated, they are liable to the reproach of saying the same thing over twice (since r and l are of the same quantity as a, and are therefore included in the prescription of the present rule). But he replies that the statement is right in its present shape; for r and l inhere in r and l; and one might therefore suppose that, being letters of more than one articulating position, they suffered an extension of quantity, and were not short: hence the special rule concerning them. The treatise, as was noticed above (under i.2), nowhere describes the formation of r and l, though it excludes them from the category of simple vowels.

The rule of the Vâj. Pr. (i.55) is nearly the same with this.

34. Also anusvâra.

The implication being the same as in the preceding rules, anusvâra is here defined as having the quantity of a short vowel. The commentator explains the occasion for the rule as follows: rule xxi.6, which teaches that anusvâra and svarabhakti are to be attached to the preceding vowel in syllabication, implies the consonantal character of the former; whence, by rule 37, below, it would have the quantity of a half-mora, and its true quantity of a mora requires special definition.

The Vâj. Pr. (iv.147,148) allows anusvâra to make with a preceding vowel, either long or short, two moras, oddly enough distributing the time between the two elements, vowel and nasal, in such a way that the latter has a mora and a half after a short vowel, the vowel being itself shortened to a half-mora, while after a long vowel the nasal is itself cut down to a half-mora, and a mora and a half are assigned to the vowel—a highly artificial arrangement. The Rik Pr. gives no special statement respecting the quantity of the nasal element, but leaves it to be included among the other consonants, which have half a mora of time each.

All the "short" elements being now enumerated, the commentator quotes, as example of the employment of the term "short," rule iii.1. As example of anusvāra, he quotes tāñ haste (vi.1.37).

दिस्तावान्दीर्घः ॥ ३५ ॥

35. An element of twice that quantity is long.

The literal meaning of this rule is, says the commentator, that one of the before-mentioned short vowels, when doubled, is long; but its virtual intent is that a vowel having twice the quantity of a short is long. I have translated in accordance with the latter interpretation. As example of the use of the term "long" is quoted rule x.2, respecting the coalescence of two similar simple vowels into the corresponding long vowel.

त्रिः प्लुतः ॥ ३६ ॥

36. An element of three times that quantity is protracted.

The commentator explains the virtual meaning of this rule in the same manner as that of the preceding, and quotes in illustration of the term "protracted" rule x.24, which directs that a protracted and a pragraha vowel are not liable to combination.

All the treatises agree closely in their definitions of vowel quantity; see Ath. Pr. i.59-62, and the notes upon those rules.

ह्रस्वार्धकालं व्यञ्जनम् ॥ ३७ ॥

37. A consonant has half the quantity of a short vowel.

This, the comment reminds us, is a rule defining the length of a consonant, not one giving the meaning of the term consonant. For, if it were the latter, the word "time" in rule xvii.5, which speaks of "the time of a consonant," would be open to the charge of redundancy. We hardly need so trifling and technical a proof of a thing so obvious. As example of a consonant, the word vāk (e. g. i.3.9¹: but G. M. read instead vā) is given us.

Of the other treatises, the Ath. Pr. (i.60) alone differs from this by giving to a consonant a whole mora as its quantity.

38. A syllable uttered in a high tone is acute.

The commentator enters into no explanation of the meaning of the definition of the acute tone or accent here given, but simply refers us to a later rule (xxii.9), where the action of the organs in producing the higher tone is more particularly described. He adds as example of an acute vowel sá idhánāḥ (iv.4.4²: but all the MSS. save W. read sá iti), and quotes rule xiv.29 as exemplifying the use of the term udátta, 'acute' (literally 'elevated'). I have explained in the note to Ath. Pr. i.14-16 why I prefer, instead of transferring the terms udátta, anudátta, and svarita, to translate them by 'acute,' 'grave,' and 'circumflex,' respectively.

We are again referred to the rule in one of the last chapters (xxii.10) which defines the action of the organs in producing the lower tone. The example for the accent is avadātām (i.7.2²; but G. M. read avadātām), of which, in pada-text, all the syllables are grave; that for the term anudātta, 'grave' (literally, 'not elevated'), is, in W. B., rule iv.43; but in G. M., rule xiv.29.

समाहारः स्वरितः ॥ ४० ॥

40. Their combination is circumflex.

The commentator explains saṁāhāra, 'combination,' as from saṁāhriyate, 'it is taken together, collected, combined;' and adds, "the accent arising from the mixing of those two is the circumflex (scarita). This is a precept concerning the peculiar nature of the accent; its occurrence is taught further on, in one and another place;" and he quotes not less than three of the rules (xiv.29, x.16, and xii.9) which teach under what circumstances the circumflex arises. His example of a circumflexed syllable is tē 'bruvan (iii.2.2³ et al.).

This rule is so far ambiguous that it does not tell us in what order the acute and grave tones are to be combined to produce the circumflex accent—whether acute and grave, or grave and acute; but we may perhaps assume that the treatise consciously intends them to be taken in the order in which they are defined by the two preceding rules.

All the authorities practically agree in their general definition of the three kinds of accent (see note to Ath. Pr. i.14–16); and Pāṇini's rules (i.2.29–31) are precisely the same with those here given. As regards the details which form the subject of the following rules of our treatise, the accordance is not so perfect (see note to Ath. Pr. i.17).

acute, the first part, to the extent of half a short vowel, is uttered in a yet higher tone.

That is, higher than the tone of acute, which properly forms its first element; one is tempted to give the word udāttāt a double construction, as belonging in idea to uccādistarām as well as to anantare.

The subject of the more particular definition of the circumflex accent occupies the six following rules, and any comments upon the doctrines laid down will be better reserved until the last rule.

As example of the circumflex, the commentator cites the words sā idhānāh (iv. 4.4⁵), already once given (under rule 38); the first syllable of the second word has the enclitic circumflex, by rule xiv.29, under which the same quotation is repeated.

42. The remainder has the same tone with acute.

The plain meaning of this rule is distorted by the commentator, in an attempt to avoid a seeming inconsistency. He claims, namely, that the word "same with" here signifies "a trifle lower than," "because otherwise there would be no circumflex"—the circumflex having been defined in rule 40 as including both the higher and lower tone. But the inconsistency is not evaded by claiming for the last portion of the circumflex any thing short of the actual "grave" tone which rule 40 prescribes: if, indeed, giving to its first portion a higher tone than "acute" be not an equal offense against the same rule.

43. Along with the consonant, too.

Says the commentator—"the rule as formerly given applied to a pure vowel; now the same thing is taught of the circumflexed vowel even in case of its combination with a consonant. The circumflexed vowel along with its consonant, either the one which directly follows an acute or another, is as defined. The 'too' (api) continues the implication of the circumflexed vowel." To this explanation of api, as simply equivalent with ca, we must demur. As any one may see by referring to the various rules in which it occurs, it is always best translated by 'even,' as pointing out something which is to a certain degree anomalous, or not to have been naturally expected.

As examples of circumflexed syllables containing consonants, the commentary offers sākhā sākhībhyo vāriṣaḥ kṛnotu (iii.3.11¹: all the MSS. except W. give only the second and third words, which are the ones to which the rule applies; the second syllable of each has the enclitic svārīta, and they are to be read and divided sā-khīb-bhyo vā-rī-ṣaḥ), and tishyāḥ (ii.2.10² et al.: but G. M. omit this example).

I have not observed that any other of the treatises deems it necessary to lay down in terms the principle that the consonant shares in the accentuation of the vowel to which it is attached. Though the rule may be regarded as in a manner superfluous, it is less to be objected to in itself than on account of the place where it is thrust in, so wholly out of connection. It ought to be somewhere where it can be made to apply to all the three accents, and not to the circumflex alone.

44. Or the part following is uttered in a lower tone.

The comment explains anantara in this rule as equivalent to ṣeṣha (in rule 42), and paraphrases by saying that "the remainder of this circumflexed syllable, after the half-mora [of which the character was defined in rule 41] is in a lower tone; that is, is anudāttatara ('lower than grave')." Whether this is the true meaning, and not rather that the last part of the syllable, instead of being "of the same tone with acute" (rule 42), is "of lower tone (than acute)," may well be made a question. It would be, I should think, an exaggeration of the circumflex of which hardly any theorist would be guilty, to begin it higher than acute, and end it lower than grave. The latter of the two interpretations suggested is also (though not unequivocally) supported by the next rule, which may most naturally be regarded as letting down the concluding tone of the syllable one degree farther than the present rule, as this than the preceding.

45. Or in the same tone with grave.

The commentator does not attempt this time, as under rule 42, to show that "same" means in reality "a little different," but simply paraphrases (taking no account of the vā, 'or'): "That same remainder of this circumflexed syllable is the same with anudātta."

आदिरस्योदात्तसमः शेषो ऽनुदात्तसम इत्याचार्याः ॥४६॥

46. Its beginning is the same with acute ; its remainder is the same with grave : so say the teachers.

Or, it may be, 'so says the teacher,' the plural being used in token of respect: the word ācārya is not elsewhere found in the treatise (save at xxiv.6) except in the expression ekeshām ācāryānām, 'of certain teachers,' which occurs several times. The commentator does not give us his opinion upon the point, but he declares this to be the only rule that is approved or of force (ishṭa, literally 'desired') in the net-work (jāla) of alternative views here adduced, commencing with rule 41. It may, in fact, be looked upon as identical in meaning with the fundamental rule 40, and as presenting the only reasonable and sensible view of the true character belonging to the circumflex accent. The elaboration of the theory of the circumflex, the classification of its varieties, and the determination of their relations to one another, appear to have been quite a favorite weakness with the Hindu phonetists. The subject occupies the whole of one of the later chapters of this treatise (xx.), together with sundry rules in other chapters; and a more detailed examination of it, and criticism of the views taken respecting it, will be necessary in connection with some of those rules.

While approving this rule, for the reason that it is in accordance with the last two rules of chapter xx., which define the relation of four of the kinds of circumflex to one another in respect to hardness of utterance, the commentator rejects in advance the next following rule, as being discordant with them. The ground of the asserted accordance and discordance I am not able to discover.

सर्वः प्रवण इत्येके ॥ ४७ ॥

47. It is all a slide, say some.

The commentator says: "The word 'slide' (pravāṇa) is a synonym of 'circumflex': the circumflexed vowel, along with its consonants, starting from its beginning, is all of it a slide: so some teachers have said." And he adds the same example already more than once given, sākhibhyo vārivah (iii.3.11¹). We have seen that, in his exposition of the preceding precept, he has rejected this one, upon grounds of inappreciable value. The view here taken is one that might well enough be held by any one, as virtually equivalent with the one before presented: the voice somehow makes its descent from the higher to the lower pitch within the compass of the accented syllable; whether by a leap or a slide, is a proper theme for hair-splitting argumentation, but of the smallest practical consequence.

नानापद्वदिङ्गमसंख्यानि ॥ ४८ ॥

48. A separable word is treated like separate words, except in an enumeration.

The meaning and application of this precept may be best exhibited by means of the examples which the commentator quotes. We have a rule (iv.40) that te and the at the end of a word of more than two syllables are pragraha if preceded by ā or e. In the passages oṣhatāt tigmahete (i.2.14²) and tat pravāte (vi.4.7²), then, the final syllables would be pragraha, but that the words in which they occur are separable compounds, written in the pada-text tig-ma-hete and pra-vāte, and so are exempted by this rule from the operation of iv.40: the te is in each case the ending of a dissyllabic word. What is meant by "enumeration" is not, in itself, very clear, as the case already cited is, in a certain sense, one of enumeration—namely, of the syllables of a word. The commentator shows its intent by pointing out that, by rules iv.49–51, the word dve, the next word to it, and the next but one, are made pragraha: hence, in the passage dve savane gukravatī (vi.1.6⁴), gukravatī (padu-text gukra-vatī) must be counted as a single word only, or the i of vatī would not be pragraha.

In this, as in the Rik and Atharva Prātiśākhya, the word īngya T. W. B. and O. more usually write īngya, or īnya) means a compound word, treated as separable into its constituents in the padu-text. The St. Petersburg lexicon erroneously explains it as signifying a single member of such a compound.

Compare Rik Pr. i.25, and Vāj. Pr. i.153.

49. Of such a word, the former member is called avagraha.

The example quoted is devāyata iti deva-yate (iii.5.5³)—an instance of carcā, or repetition with iti interposed, such as is usual in the krama-texts, and, to a certain extent, in the pada-texts also. The existing pada-texts of the Rik and Atharvan would write this word simply deva-yate, reserving the repetition with iti for words which are pragraha and separable at the same time: but that of the Tāittirīya-Saṁhitā treats all separable compounds in the latter method (see, for the varying usages of different texts, the note to Ath. Pr. iv.74). In deva-yate, the part deva is denominated avagraha. As instance of the use of this technical term is given the rule (iv.2) which exempts all first members of compounds from the action of the rules prescribing pragraha.

The commentator, finally, calls attention to the mutual relation, or apposition, of the words padu and avagraha in the rule, each in its own gender (the former being neuter, the latter masculine): compare under ii.7 and v.2.

The other Prātiśākhya use the term avagraha in this sense, but without taking the trouble to define it.

identical in form with it. Thus (to take the commentator's example), tve is later (iv.10) declared pragraha except at the end of a separable word, as in the passage tve kratum (iii.5.10¹); the exception specified is necessary, because the tve of a word like adittve (p. aditi-tve) is also a pada or vocable;—but it is not therefore to be inferred that the tve of kratve, in the passage kratve dakshāya (iii.2.5²; 3.11⁴), is also pragraha.

As the commentator had formerly derived grahanam (i.22) from grhyate, so now he derives grahanāni from grhṇanti, 'they seize, take.'

The principle here taught is appealed to several times (under iv. 11.38; vii.2) hereafter, in order to the settlement of doubtful points.

It would seem possible to be still made a question whether the citation in any particular rule were a pada, 'a full word,' or a padāikadeṣa, 'part of a word,' since citations of the latter kind are also frequently made. Perhaps the commentator would settle the difficulty by asserting that no combination of articulate sounds which actually occurs in the Sanhitā as a pada is ever cited in any other character.

51. But that word, even when phonetically altered.

The commentator gives two examples. The word vāhana, he says, is cited later (vii.6) as one whose n is liable to conversion into ṇ: this conversion, then, still holds good, though the final syllable of the word have become o: thus, pravāhano vahnih (i.3.3). Again, syah, by v.15, loses its final visarga; and it does so, even when its s is changed to sh, as in ayam u shya pra devayuh (iii.5.11¹). As regards the former of these examples, it might seem to be provided for by rule i.22, above: but the commentator would doubtless plead that the rule would apply to vāhanaḥ, but not to vāhano.

52. And even when preceded by a.

The evident occasion of this rule is the frequent occurrence of words with the negative prefix a attached to them. But, it being once established, its sphere is not restricted to that class of compounds, as is shown in the very example chosen by the commentator to illustrate its working. By iii.2, grā is included among the words whose final ā is liable to be shortened; then, by this rule, aḡrā is also included: e. g. aḡrārantāṣ (p. aḡra-rantam) saḡsrīnam (iii.3.11¹).

Application of this principle is quite frequently made below (under iii.2,8; v.13,16; vi.5,14; viii.8,13; xi.16; xvi.6,19).

अन्कारादि च ॥ ५३ ॥

53. And when preceded by an.

The origin and aim of this rule are obviously the same with those of the preceding, but the instances of its application are less frequent: it is appealed to but three times in the sequel (under rules iii.7, viii.8, and xvi.29). The last case is the one selected by the commentator as his example. The word aṅḡu, by xvi.29, contains anusvāra; hence the same word preceded by an is to be regarded as included with it, as in the passage anaṅḡu kurrantāḡ (iii.2.2¹).

The commentator now raises the question: how comes kāra to be added here to the syllable an ? since offense is thus committed against the precept in rule 16, above, that kāra is added to an alphabetic sound to form its name. His answer is: true enough that it is not done by authority of this text-book; but it is done by the authority of other text-books; for example, Pāṇini's followers establish the propriety of such expressions as evakāra, apikāra (for the words eva and api). So likewise in this very treatise (in rule 23, above) we have aḥkāra for aḥ; and the same objection and answer are to be understood as applying there. See the note under rule 16.

54. A single sound composing a word is called aprakta.

The commentator explains ekavarṇaḥ after the fashion usual with him in treating a karmadhāraya or determinative compound: "that is both single (eka) and a sound (varṇa); hence, a single sound." The term aprakta means, he says, 'uncombined with a consonant.' As example of an aprakta word, he quotes sa uv ekariṅṣavarartaniḥ (iv.3.3²), where uv is, by rule ix.16, representative of the particle u; and, as counter-example, to illustrate the force of the specification "composing a word," yajñapatāśv iti (vi.6.2³), where v, though in a manner isolated, is not aprakta, being only a fragment of a word. * Rule ix.16 exemplifies the use of the term.

55. And is treated both as initial and as final.

As an instance of the treatment of an aprakta word as initial, the commentary again cites the passage sa uv ekariṅṣavarartaniḥ (iv.3.3²), and declares that in it is to be seen the effect of rule 41, above (G. M. have here a lacuna, and omit the reference to the rule, along with the other instance). This is quite unintelligible to me, since the rule referred to teaches nothing whatever that is characteristic of an initial sound,—indeed, teaches no kāryam, ‘effect,’ at all. For the treatment of such a word as a final, we have as an example the passage o te yanti (i.4.33), in which o is pragraha; with reference to rule iv.3, which teaches that only a final vowel is pragraha.

With this rule and the preceding compare Vāj. Pr. i.151-2, which are nearly identical with them in form and meaning. The Rik Pr. does not define the term aprktu, but gives respecting it a rule corresponding with the present one. Both give in illustration the same passage, indre”’hi (indra: ā: ihi), analogous with the one (bhakshe”’hi, iii.2.5¹) quoted below, under v.3.

56. Alteration and omission are of a single sound.

That is to say, not of a whole word. Where, as by v.19, more than one letter is omitted, each is specified. The cited examples are, of alteration, dhārshāhāu (i.2.8²: by rule v.10); of omission, sa te jānāti (i.2.14²⁻³: by rule v.15).

I find this rule expressly appealed to but once in the sequel (under ix.7).

57. Omission is complete loss.

As example of lopa, ‘omission,’ the commentator quotes the passage sa im’andrā suprayasaḥ (iv.1.8¹⁻²), where the initial m of mandrā is lost after im (by rule v.12: see the note there given). As example of the use of the term, he gives rule v.11, which is introductory to the subject of omissions. He then proceeds to state a very curious reason why such a precept as this should seem called for: “some have maintained the eternity of sound: in order to the confutation of that doctrine, this rule hath been uttered, in conformity with general grammar.” Pāṇini’s corresponding precept (i.1.60) is adarśanam lopah, ‘omission is disappearance from view.’

58. Continued implication is of that which was last.

The term anvādeṣa, 'after-indication,' with its corresponding verbal forms, and other equivalent expressions (especially anvākarshaka, ākārshaka, etc.), is constantly employed in the commentary to signify the continued force in a given rule of some specification made in a preceding rule. And the simple meaning of the present precept appears to be, that such a bringing forward is of the predicate last used, the word last cited, or the like. The commentator's first example is entirely accordant with this understanding: in rule vii.3, namely, to the effect that the n of hanyāt and upyamānum is changed to n̄, the implication is "after n̄iḥ," n̄iḥ being the last mentioned in a list of altering words given in the preceding rule. But he goes on to make another application of the precept: rule xv.8 says "a, however, even in saṃhītā [is protracted and nasalized];" and it is to be understood that only a "last" or "final" a is intended—as in suçlokāñs (i.8.16²), protracted from suçloka; while in brahmāzn tvañ rājan (i.8.16^{1,2}), agnāz ity āha (vi.5.8⁴), vicityaḥ somāz na vicitryāz iti (vi.1.9¹), where the words protracted are brahman, agne, somaḥ, and vicitryaḥ, and the a is not a final, there is no nasalization. Evidently, this is a wholly forced and false interpretation: no rule can mean two things so utterly different. Compare the notes to iv.3 and xv.8, where the principle is appealed to.

The comment seeks a kind of support for its double interpretation by calling attention to the distinction between an "affecting cause" (nimitta), like the n̄iḥ brought forward from vii.: to vii.3 in the first example, and an "affected" word or element (nimittin, 'having a cause'), such as is concerned in the second example. The latter (nearly synonymous with lukshya, used in the comment to i.22) he defines as "something original (? pradhāna seems to be taken here in the sense of prakṛti) suffering a prescribed effect."

No one of the other Prātiśākhyas attempts to lay down any rules as to the anvādeṣa (or anuvṛtti); and its usages are, in fact, wholly irreducible to rule—a circumstance which involves the condemnation of the sūtra style of composition, because the sūtras are not and cannot be self-explanatory, or intelligible without an authoritative comment.

59. An upabandha, however, is for that particular passage, and of constant effect.

The commentator etymologizes upabandha, 'connection, tie,' as representing the meaning upabadhyate, 'it is tied up, bound to;,' and he farther defines it as signifying a passage pointed out by the indication "in that," and one which is designated by an enumeration—referring to rules iv.22,23,48,52 as examples. An upabandha, then, is a connected part of the Sanhitā, pointed out and defined by the rules of the Prâtigākhya in various ways: by citing the first words of a single verse (iv.20) or of an anuvāka (iv.25,48; xi.3); by the accepted title of a number of anuvākas, either succeeding one another or otherwise (ii.9,11; iv.52; ix.20; xi.3); by giving the first and last words of a passage (iv.22,23); or by fixing a limit within a certain number of words from a specified word (iv.52). Respecting such a passage, we are told, this rule is intended to teach two things: first, that what is prescribed for it does not hold good in other passages—this is signified by the word tu, 'however,' in the rule;—second, that an exception which applies in other passages does not apply in it—this is signified by the word nityam, 'constantly, in all cases.'

Both prescriptions, as thus stated, the commentator undertakes to illustrate by quoted cases of their application. But his first illustration is imperfectly and obscurely set forth, and is, besides, of a very questionable character. "He tells us that the passage ity āha devī hy eshā devaḥ somah (vi.1.7⁷) is brought, by the principle laid down in the next rule but one (i.61), under the action of rule iv.25—and this is all that he deigns to say about it. The meaning is this: the passage quoted contains a series of four words, ity āha devī hi, which are also found at ii.6.7⁵ (devī devaputre ity āha devī hy ete devaputre); and, as the i of devī in the latter passage is pragraha by iv.25, so, under the operation of i.61, it should be pragraha also in the other. Such, however, is not the case; for devī in devī hy eshā is singular, while in devī hy ete it is dual. It would seem, then, as if we ought to understand the commentator to maintain that the present rule annuls the application of i.61, and, through it, of iv.25, to the case in question. But this is wholly inadmissible: for rule 61, below, is directly intended as a limitation to the present one, and has no force or value except as it applies to just such passages as the one here instanced; and with the latter are closely analogous a part of the examples adduced for its illustration, and leading to an opposite conclusion to the one here apparently arrived at. I cannot account for the way in which the commentator treats the matter. So far as I can see, devī at vi.1.77 is pragraha according to the rules of the Prātiçākhyā, and has only by some oversight escaped being specially excepted: and the first restriction is of a general character, meaning that directions given for an upabandha passage are intended for that passage alone, and have no wider bearing—except as they receive it from i.61. The same, as will be seen below, limits also the other restriction, that expressed by nityam.

Further, the citation in rule iv.11 of the compound sadoha-virdhāne as pragraha implies that the simple word havirdhāne would always be of a contrary character, as it in fact is in the passage havirdhāne khyāyante (vi.2.11¹); but this implication does not hold in the passage havirdhāne prācī pravartayeyuḥ (iii.1.3¹), because of the inclusion of the latter among the upabandhas of rule iv.52. Here, however, is brought up an objection: the explanation given is not satisfactory, because an exception made elsewhere is sometimes of force also in an upabandha passage. For instance, in the passage atha mithunī bharataḥ (vi.5.8⁶), the word mithunī, which would else be pragraha by iv.52, is made otherwise by iv.53. Again, an example of a similar class is afforded by vāyava dṛoḥaṇavāhau (v.6.21), where vāyave ought to be pragraha, because occurring in the anurāka to which iv.48 refers, while it is deprived of that character by iv.54. The answer is made, that, in the case of grāmī, vāyave, manave, and the like, the exception must be allowed to have force because those words are excepted by specific mention; while the exception of havirdhāne is inferential only, and therefore does not hold good: specific mention being of more force than mere inference.

But this suggests a further objection: why then is not the specific mention of ate and ave in rule iv.54 enough, and what is the use of adding the word nityam, 'in all cases,' in that rule? This, replies the commentator, is for the purpose of making the exception yet more strongly binding: the specific mention merely annuls the application of the upabandha rule; the addition of nityam avoids the application of any other rule. For example, in dve jāye vindate (vi.6.4³), vindate should be pragraha (by rule iv.51), because separated by only one word from dve; and in vanaspate vidvāṅ-gaḥ (iv.6.6⁵), the same character would belong to vanaspate (by iv.38) because followed by vid—and we are left to infer that the nityam renders rule iv.54 capable of reaching these passages, and taking away the pragraha character of the two words in question. This, adds the commentator, may be still further pursued; it has been thus drawn out in accordance with the view of Māhisheya.

In all this exposition is to be seen something of the artificial and hair-splitting character which is apt to belong to a Hindu comment, while upon the whole it is sound and to the point. The term upabandha is doubtless better understood actively, as representing teno 'pabadyate, 'that whereby there is binding up:' the presence of deśāya in the rule is hardly reconcilable with the other interpretation. The intent of the specification nityam is to exclude general exceptions, made in view of other passages, or of the text at large, but not at all to deny the possibility of exceptions made expressly for the upabandha passages: and such are iv.53 and others, referred to by the objector, and refuted by an inapplicable special pleading. The force which the commentator ascribes to the tu of the rule belongs rather to deśāya, and the tu has the value of a general disjunctive, bringing in a precept not connected with what has gone before.

Any additional instances of the application of the principles here laid down I have not searched for or chanced upon. The rule is appealed to but once in the sequel (under iv.54).

The intent of this rule is made sufficiently clear by the commentator, but he is unable to show satisfactorily its connection, or the implication in virtue of which it comes to mean what it does. He puts, however, a bold face upon it, and declares that the ca, 'also,' implies the negative (nañ: compare Pāṇini ii.2.6 etc.) meaning signified by tu (that is to say, the tu of the preceding rule). This is quite unintelligible. More defensible would be the continuance of nityam, 'constantly:': this, indeed, I conceive to be the real interpretation of the ca; although the rule is even thus left insufficiently explained by its context. The term srādishu points us to the sixteenth chapter, where is to be found an enumeration of all the cases in the Sanhitā exhibiting an anusvāra which is not a consequence of the phonetic rules of the treatise—of all the words which in their pada form contain an anusvāra—and this enumeration is led off (xvi.2) with the syllable sra. Many of this class of words are pointed out, as elsewhere in the Prātiçākhyā, by mentioning the words which they precede or follow; which latter, then, become in the view of the treatise their nimitta, or 'cause' (taking the post hoc or ante hoc for a propter hoc). Inasmuch, now, as the pragraha quality and the occurrence of this anusvāra belong to the word itself, independently of its surroundings, it becomes necessary to teach that, when a word has been defined by means of its surroundings as thus characterized, it retains its character even when separated from them, as it is in the pada-text. Or, in the language of the rule, the defined occasion of a pragraha or of a constituent anusvāra is of force, even when it is, or is in, another pada.

The commentator, in illustration of the action of the rule, refers us first to iv.28, where ghnī and cakre are declared pragraha when immediately followed by p; these words are pragraha also in the pada-text of the same passages, when there is a pause between them and the p. Again, he quotes rule xvi.11, where mā is declared to have no anusvāra after it when preceded by an avagraha; that is, when it begins the second member of a compound, as in ardhamāse devāḥ (ii.5.6⁶): here, too, the precept holds when the avagraha pause intervenes between the two parts of the compound: as, ardha-māse. On the other hand, the cause (nimitta) of nasalization of a sibilant or nasal, if in a different pada from the letter it affects, is efficient only in saṃhitā: for example, gucishad iti guci-sat (iv.2.1⁵), and pravāhana iti pra-vāhanah (i.3.3): and this is the occasion of the rule.

I see no reason why this rule does not need to apply also to the cases of an original lingual nasal (n) enumerated in the thirteenth chapter.

यथोक्तं पुनरुक्तं त्रिपदप्रभृति त्रिपदप्रभृति ॥ ६१ ॥

61. A repeated passage, of three or more words, is as already established.

That is to say, the reading of any connected passage is as established by the rules for the first place where it occurs: if repeated in a later part of the Sanhitā, where other rules, there applicable, would change its reading, it is exempted from their influence.

Several examples are given in illustration by the commentator. In the third chapter (praçna) of the first book (kāṇḍa) of the Sanhitā occurs the phrase devasya tvā savituḥ prasave 'gvinoh (i.3.1¹: but the same phrase is found also twice before, at i.1.4^{2,6}), and the initial a of its last word is cut off by the general rule xi.1; hence, when it occurs again in a vājapeya passage (namely at i.7.10³), where, by xi.3, the elision of the a is forbidden, the effect of the latter rule is suspended, and the passage reads as before. Again, the words supathā rāye asmān are first found at i.1.14³, where, as the anuvāka is a yājyā, the a of asmān remains unelided by xi.3; and when they occur again at i.4.43¹, that letter still maintains its place. Once more, the phrase sa jāto gurbho asi rodasyoh is read at iv.1.4², and again at v.1.5³⁻⁴; the former time in an ukhya passage, where the a of asi is retained by xi.3; and it is therefore retained in the other passage also.

The commentator applies to the rule the restriction that in the repeated passage the word respecting whose form there is question must hold the third place (that is to say, doubtless, that it must have not less than two other words before it). In support of this limitation, he cites a case: at iv.ii.8³, in an ukhya passage, occur the words prthivīm anu ye antarikshe ye divi tebhyah (W. B. omit the first two words of the citation), and the a of antarikshe is left unelided by xi.3; but at iv.5.11² (in the last anuvāka of the chapter called rudra: see rule xi.3) we read ye prthivīyām ye 'ntarikshe ye divi (W. B., again, omit the first two words quoted, and also give ye ant)—which, but for his restriction, would be a violation of the rule. I cannot but question, however, the right of the commentator thus to limit the rule, for I have noted at least three cases where, if it be admitted, the retention of an initial a in a repeated passage would be left without authority: they are pāvako asmahyam (v.4.4⁵ and iv.6.1^{3,5}), predho agne (v.4.7³ and iv.6.5⁴), and dadhikrāno akārisham (vii.4.19⁴ and i.v.11⁴). Whether there are other cases like that to which the commentator appeals, I am unable to say: but I cannot help suspecting that he devised this modification of the rule to suit that particular passage, without sufficient regard to what might be required by other parts of the text.

But he is guilty of another piece of arbitrary interpretation which is still more unjustifiable, and which he makes yet lamer work of defending. The term tripadaprabhṛti means, according to him, a series of words beginning with three words of which the third is the one whose form is in question—that is to say, a series of at least four words, of which one follows the word of doubtful reading. The case to which he appeals to establish this is as follows: the words divas pari prathamam jajñe agniḥ asmat (W. B. omit asmat) occur at i.3.14⁴, in a yājyā passage, where agniḥ keeps its initial vowel by xi.3; again, the words itaḥ prathamam jajñe agniḥ are found at ii.2.4⁸: there seems to be a repetition, and a reading of agniḥ founded upon it; but it is not proper to claim that the retention of a here has this ground; it is due to the inclusion (in rule xi.16) of jajñe among the words which do not cause the elision: for such inclusion would otherwise be to no purpose (since there is in the Saṁhitā no other passage to which the prescription should apply). Any other case seeming to require the interpretation here in question I have not noticed; and we have the right to presume that, if the commentator had knowledge of one which supported his view more unequivocally, he would not have failed to refer to it. So far as appears, then, the sole object of this forced interpretation of the word tripaduprabhṛti (one which the word may be said decidedly not to admit of) is to save rule xi.16 from the charge of repetition in a single point: we shall presume with much greater plausibility that, when the rule was made, the fact that this particular case was already covered by i.61 was overlooked.

But the commentator virtually admits the unsoundness of his own work by acknowledging that in the brāhmaṇa-passages (brāhmaṇavākya) of the Sanhitā a simple phrase of three words is enough to justify the application of the rule, "because," he says, "of the quotation in the brāhmaṇa-passages of a previously-occurring phrase:" that is to say, because the prose part of the Sanhitā is to so great an extent occupied with citing and commenting on the phrases and words of other parts—a fact which has, doubtless, been the special occasion and suggestion of the present rule. Thus, the words muryaṣṛi sprhayaḍ varṇo agniḥ are quoted at v.i.3³ (with the customary addition, ity āha), from the previous passage iv.1.2⁵; and although the nābhim which follows agniḥ at its first occurrence is not also quoted, and the quotation is not therefore a tripaduprabhṛti according to the commentator's construction of this term, the rule holds good, and the a of agniḥ has a right to stand.

The general value of this rule is that of a limitation to the last but one; it points out a class of cases in which a rule given for a particular passage is not limited to that passage, but also acts elsewhere; in which, moreover, such a rule does not govern nityam, 'against all opposition,' the reading of the passage to which it relates.

The commentator notices the fact that the repetition of the final word of the rule indicates the conclusion of the chapter. Such repetition is made at the end of each chapter, and by all the manuscripts; and, as it is thus farther ratified by the comment, I have not hesitated to admit it as an authentic part of the text of the Prāticākhya. G. M. repeat the whole rule in this case.

CHAPTER II.

CONTENTS: 1-11, general mode of production of articulate sounds, distinction of surd and sonant sounds, etc.; 12-29, special rules for the production of vowels and diphthongs; 30, nasals; 31-34, difference of vowels and consonants; 35-39, mode of production of mutes; 40-43, of semivowels; 44-45, of spirants; 46-48, of h and ḥ; 49-52, of nasal sounds.

अथ शब्दोत्पत्तिः ॥ १ ॥

1. Now for the origin of sound.

For the word atha in this rule the commentator allows us our choice between two interpretations: it either indicates immediate succession—thus, the list of articulate sounds having been given, there next arises the desire to know what is the cause of these sounds, or how they become apprehensible by the sense, and then follows the explanation here to be given—or it is introductory, signifying that from this point onward the subject of the origin of sound is the one had in hand. Compare the similar and yet more lengthy discussion under rule i.1. He then goes on to draw out the significance of the rule itself. Ṣabda he explains by dhvani: both, when used thus distinctively, mean audible sound in general, rather than articulate sound or voice (compare xxii.1,2; xxiii.3). He paraphrases: “of the articulate sounds, a etc., the cause of perception, or their origin, their birth, their apprehension by the sense—just as, even before water is seen, there is moisture in the ground, and that becomes visible in consequence of digging—this is the subject of description.” We seem to catch here a glimpse of that same doctrine of the eternity of sound to which reference was made above, under i.57: our organs do not properly produce it, but their action brings it to the cognizance of the senses, as the action of digging brings water to light.

2. By the setting in motion of air by the body, at the junction of throat and breast.

The first part of this rule (literally, 'from air-body-impulsion') is obscurely expressed, and of ambiguous meaning. The commentator gives three explanations of it, the first of which is also itself obscure. Agni ('fire, warmth'—'heat of the body?'), he says, impels Vāyu ('air, wind?'); that is what "air-body" means (but how?). From such an impulsion—that is to say, expulsion, effort at utterance—at the junction of, or between, throat and breast, comes the origination of sound. And he quotes a verse from the Çikshâ (verses 8-9 of the Yajus version, verses 6-7 of the Rik version: see Weber's Ind. Stud., iv.350-1): "the mind impels the body-fire; that sets in motion air; and air, moving in the breast, generates a gentle tone." Again (or rather, apparently, as a part of the same explanation: but its inconsistency with the rest is palpable), he makes a copulative compound of vāyu-çarīra; namely 'air-and-body': "from the impulsion of those two." Once more, he quotes as the opinion of other authorities that vāyu-çarīra means 'the air in the body,' the compound being of such a sort that that which should be its first member is put last, after the analogy of rājadanta, 'upper incisor' (literally, 'king-tooth'—that is, as the Hindu etymologists explain it, 'tooth-king, chief among the teeth'), and the other words composing that gana (to Pān. ii.2.31). And he adds the remark that, in this interpretation, the air is understood as the cause of the impulsion, not its product.

In the translation of the rule given above, the primary division of the compound is regarded as to be made after vāyu; çarīra-samīrana meaning an 'impulsion by the body,' and vāyu being prefixed in a genitive relation, 'of the air.' This is harsh, but appears to me more acceptable and less violent than the other constructions proposed. Practically, the point is of small consequence.

3. The parts which give it audible quality are breast, throat, head, mouth, and nostrils.

The commentator explains prāṭiśrutkāni as signifying 'the places of production' (sthānāni), having to do with the resonance (prāṭiśrut=pratidhvani, 'resonance'), of the aforesaid sound (gab-da).' He offers no remark upon the organs enumerated, but leaves their various offices to be derived from the rules which follow. But, in anticipation of the next three rules, he observes that they teach the three-fold quality of sound, as sonant, surd, and h-sound, rule 4 giving the definition of the first kind.

The Çikshā (v.13: Weber's Ind. Stud. iv.351) makes an enumeration of eight sthānas, or places of production of articulate sounds, dividing the "mouth" of our list into root of the tongue, teeth, lips, and palate.

4. When the throat is closed, tone is produced.

The commentator treats this rule as a definition of the technical term nādu, 'tone,' and cites rule 8, below, as an example of the use of the term.

The Rik Pr. (xiii.1) gives a corresponding definition of sonant utterance, but specifies the aperture (kha) of the throat as the part whose contraction or closure produces the tone. Compare also Vāj. Pr. i.11. It is greatly to the credit of the ancient Hindu phonetists that they had gained by acute observation so clear an idea of the manner in which the intonation of the breath is effected in the throat; but precisely how accurate a knowledge

5. When it is opened, breath is produced.

The explanation given of this rule corresponds with that of the preceding, and the rule cited for the use of the term çvāsa, 'breath,' is ii.10.

मध्ये हकारः ॥ ६ ॥

6. When in an intermediate condition, the h-sound is produced.

Madhye is explained as meaning 'in a method intermediate between closed and opened:' the rest of the comment agrees with the two preceding, and the cited rule is ii.9.

Of the other Prātiçākhyas, only that of the Rig-Veda sets up a third kind of articulated material, besides tone and breath; and that (xiii.2) derives the material from a combination of the two others, rather than their mean. I have already (note to Ath. Pr. i.13) expressed my opinion that the attempt to establish this distinction is forced and futile, and I see at present no reason for changing it. That intonated and unintonated breath should be emitted from the same throat at once is physically impossible. In loud stridulous whispering, there is a tension of the vocal chords only short of that which gives rise to sonant vibration; and if any one chooses to claim that the aspirations used in loud speaking partake of such a character, sometimes or always, we need not be at the pains to contradict him.

7. Those are the materials of alphabetic sounds.

That is to say, the three kinds of material just described—tone, breath, and h-sound, some letters having one of these as the material out of which they are made, and others another. Just so, it is added, jars and dishes have clay for their material, and thread is the material of cloth.

The commentator then goes on to raise and answer a grammatical objection to the form of the rule. Since it is the office of a pronoun to call to mind things already mentioned, and the words nāda, śvāsa, and hakāra, which are referred to by the pronoun in this rule, are masculine, why is the pronoun feminine (tāh, instead of te)? The reply is: "by the dictum of the Mahābhāshya, 'pronouns effecting the equivalence of the thing pointed at and of that which is pointed out respecting it assume at pleasure the gender of either of the two,' is established the propriety of the form used in the rule; therefore there takes place a mutual accordance, or apposition." The passage referred to is apparently that found, not in the Mahābhāshya itself, but in Kaiyyāṭa's Mahābhāshya-pradīpa, nearly at the same place as the work (I owe this reference to the kindness of Prof. G. M. Chattopadhyaya); in Ballantyne's edition (p. 7) it reads, with several variations from the text given by our commentator, ekatvam āpādayanti sarva. . . . idāta iti. Reference is again "purpose under v.2.

The Rik Pr. (xiii.2) has this rule also, in nearly identical form.

8. In vowels and sonant consonants, the emission is sound.

The term anupradāna is etymologized as representing anupradīyate 'nena varṇaḥ', 'therewith is given forth an articulate sound'; and anupradīyate is farther explained by upādīyate, 'is obtained,' and janyate, 'is generated.' As synonym for the same term is given mūlakāraṇa, 'radical cause.'

I have already (note to Ath. Pr. i.13) called attention to the praiseworthy unanimity with which the Hindu phonetists define the true ground of the distinction between surd and sonant letters. European phonetists, after long perplexing the subject with such false distinctions as are expressed by the terms "soft" and "hard," "weak" and "strong," and the like, seem now at last to be coming to a universal accordance in the correct view.

9. In h and in sonant aspirate mutes, it is h-sound.

For the quality of this h-sound, see rule 6, above. The Rik Pr. (xiii.2,5: rules 6,17) connects in the same manner h and the "fourth" mutes. Our treatise evidently regards the peculiar h-sound belonging to the sonant aspirates not as something that follows the breach of contact, but as inhering in the letter, in the same manner as tone in the simple sonants. Whether the Rik Pr. hints at a difference of opinion on this point may be made a matter of question. But the failure on the part of the Prâtiçâkhyas to recognize the essentially compound character of the aspirate mutes, the fact that these differ from the unaspirated mutes by interposing something between the mute and the following vowel, is one of their marked weaknesses.

The commentator enters into no labored exposition of the rule, but spends his strength, rather, in defending its situation. He first suggests the objection that it is not in proper place, as offending against the order observed in the definition of the three kinds of material (the h-sound is defined last, and we should therefore expect the letters containing it to be specified last); but claims in reply that it is, after all, in place, being intended to obviate an undue extension of the preceding rule, which would otherwise be liable to be made, since h and the "fourth" mutes are included (by i.13,14) among the sonant consonants, to which that rule applies.

11. And more of it in the other surd letters than in the simple surd mutes.

Here çvāsa, 'breath,' is continued by implication from the preceding rule "in virtue of vicinage" (sāmnidhyāt), as the commentator says (there being no ca, 'and,' in the rule, to indicate it directly). The other surd letters are the surd aspirate mutes and the spirants (excepting h). There is no separation made of these two classes upon the important ground that in the spirants the greater expenditure of breath inheres in the whole character of the sound, as being fricative, while in the aspirate mutes it consists in a brief emission between the explosion of the contact and the following vowel.

The Rik Pr. (xiii.6: rule 19) says "some regard the breath in the aspirates as quicker"—an ambiguously indefinite expression.

अवर्णे नात्युपसंस्कृतमोष्ठद्वनु नातिव्यस्तम् ॥ १२ ॥

12. In forming the a-vowels, the lips and jaws must not be too nearly approximated, nor too widely separated.

The plain intent of this rule appears to be to guard against an excess either of openness or of closeness in the utterance of a and ā, while at the same time these two sounds are considered as alike in quality. Such is not, however, the understanding of the commentator; he declares it impossible to follow both directions in forming one sound, and directs that a division be made: excessive approximation is to be avoided in the case of a, and excessive separation in those of the long ā and protracted āz. If his intention had been to recognize the same difference in quality between a and ā which is taught by the Ath. Pr. and Vāj. Pr. and by Pāṇini (see note to Ath. Pr. i.36), he would have been likely to apply the two directions of the rule in a contrary manner, warning against over-openness in a and over-closeness in ā.

The term oṣṭhahanu, though singular, is declared to signify the two lips and the two jaws, and a rule of Pāṇini (ii.4.2) is quoted in justification of such treatment of a copulative compound.

13. Also in uttering o.

The "also" (ca) of this rule, we are told, brings forward only the action of the jaws prescribed in the preceding rule: this appears from the fact that the one following gives a special direction with regard to the action of the lips. In forming an o, then, the jaws are not to be too widely separated.

ओष्ठौ तूपसङ्कतौ ॥ १४ ॥

14. But the lips are more nearly approximated.

"Vicinage" is here again made the sufficiently obvious ground of assuming that the direction applies to the utterance of o. The "but" (tu) of the rule, according to Vararuci, one of the three authorities from whom our comment is principally derived (see the introduction), annuls the direction formerly (in rule 12) given as to the position of the lips: but Māhisheya, another of the same authorities, has explained it as exempting from the widely separated condition the o of such words as bandhoḥ (ii.5.87). This latter interpretation is quite absurd, or else I am very obtuse with regard to it.

As regards the precise tone of the o, such directions as these can teach us nothing satisfactory. The only valuable conclusion which we derive from them is that the authors of the Prātiśākhya looked upon the sound as a simple homogeneous tone—not phonetically diphthongal, although in classification excluded (by rule i.2) from the category of simple vowels. The same, we shall see, is the case with e also.

That "they" means the lips is, we are told, sufficiently indicated by the dual number of the adjective. Prakṛṣṭa, 'protracted,' is glossed by saṁnikṛṣṭa, 'drawn down together, brought near.'

16. The jaws are more nearly approached.

The force of the comparative is explained by the usual term atiḥayena, 'with excess.'

In the utterance of e, the position of the tongue is also a matter of importance, and is explained in the next rule.

जिह्वामध्यान्ताभ्यां चोत्तराङ्गम्यान्त्स्पर्शयति ॥ १७ ॥

17. And one touches the borders of the upper back jaws with the edges of the middle of the tongue.

The "and" (ca) in this rule we are directed to regard as bringing forward the ekāra of rule 15, "on the frog-leap principle"—that is to say, by overleaping the intervening rule. The terms descriptive of the organs concerned I have translated in accordance with the directions of the commentator, although much tempted to render jambhyān by 'jaw-teeth, grinders.' I cannot doubt that jambhyān is the true reading here, although the MSS. give a curious and perplexing variety of forms to the word, and uttarāṇ jambhyānt is not once read: T. comes nearest to it, giving uttarāṇ jambhyām; W. has uttarā jambhyānt in the rule, and uttarā jambhyān and jambhyān in the comment; B., uttarāṇ jambhyāt in the rule, uttarā jambhyān and jambhyān in the comment; G. and M., uttarāṇ jambhyām in the rule; G., uttarāṇ jambhyām and jambhyām; and M., uttarāṇ jambhyām and jambhyām, in the comment. In order to complete the definition of the mode of production of e, rules 20 and 23, below, have yet to be applied; but they add nothing essential to the description of the present rule, which assures to the vowel, as clearly as any such description could do, the "continental" sound of e, or that which it has in they, short in met. There is no hint of a composite or diphthongal utterance, any more than in the case of o. A diphthongal utterance, however, as ai, au (in aisle, house), we must assume them to have had originally (compare note to Ath. Pr. i.40).

18. The jaws, also, are more closely approximated, and the tip of the tongue is brought into close proximity to the upper back gums, in r, ṛ, and l.

The construction of this rule is very harsh; the subject hanū, 'jaws,' comes into its first member again with a flying leap from rule 16, drawn by the ca, 'also;' while the second member starts off independently, "one approximates," with no connective to bind it to the other. These roughnesses are unremarked by the commentator, and I have smoothed them over in the translation. The word upasamharati, 'approximates,' is glossed in the comment by nikshipet, 'let one throw down (or apply),' and barsvās is explained as 'the high places behind the row of teeth'—that is, the swelling of the inner gums.

The commentator starts a question as to the propriety of the conversion of ṛ and l in this rule into r and l after a (ṛkārarkā-ralkāra, from ṛkāra-ṛkāra-lkāra), the cases not being covered by the prescription given, below (at x.8: no case of the combination of ṛ and l occurring in the Sanhitā, the Prāticākhyā makes no provision for it): he is compelled to acknowledge that this treatise does not teach the conversion, but claims that it is justified by the authority of other text-books; and that the same explanation applies to an earlier case (rule i.31) of a like combination.

This wholly insufficient direction is all that our treatise gives us for the utterance of the difficult r and l vowels. By i.2, they are excluded from the category of simple homogeneous vowels. For the teachings of the other Prâṭiçâkhyas respecting them, see note to Ath. Pr. i.37. However they may have been pronounced at the period of grammatical treatment of the Vedic texts, we have no good reason to doubt that, at the time when those texts were composed, they were phonetically the same with the semi-vowels r and l, differing from them only as, for example, the l of able differs from that of ably, the r of (French) aigre from that of aigri. For a theoretical discussion of this double value of the articulated sounds which lie nearly upon the boundary line between vowels and consonants, see Journ. Am. Or. Soc. viii.362 seq.

19. As also, according to some, in anusvâra and svara-bhakti.

In this case, we are told, the "also" (ca) brings down the whole of the preceding rule, and the meaning is, that there is approximation of the jaws in uttering anusvâra, and approach of the tip of the tongue to the gums in uttering the svara-bhakti, according to the opinion of some; while others hold that anusvâra is simply nasal, and the svara-bhakti (see xxi.15) equivalent to r. This, the commentator adds, is Vararuci's explanation, and its truth is questionable. We, in our turn, may regard it as matter for question whether this attribution and expression of doubt apply to the whole interpretation of the rule, or only to its concluding part, the statement of the opinion of "others." The latter is perhaps most probable.

So far as regards anusvâra, we can hardly ascribe any value or propriety to this rule; the definition of svara-bhakti in connection with that of the r-vowels is natural enough.

23. Also in e.

Here the "also" (ca) brings down the whole of the preceding precept, both the specification of the active organ (karana) and that of the passive organ or place (sthāna). The exposition of the meaning of the rule is very simple and easy; but the commentator does not fail to notice that its necessity is open to objection upon two grounds, and enters into its defense at considerable length. The first objection is, why make two separate rules (22 and 23) for a single direction?—that is to say, if the i-vowels and e are all produced by the approximation of the middle of the tongue to the palate, why not include them in one rule together? The answer given is that the degree of approximation is not the same in the two cases, but is less in the e than in the i-vowels. If it be asked, why is this so? the reply is made, because the e is mixed with a, and production of this a with the middle of the tongue is on account of its constituting a part of e, and not by reason of its own natural character (compare the comment to rule 20, above)—which special qualification is sufficient ground for the less degree of approximation. The second difficulty is stated thus: both place and organ of e have been already defined in rules 15–17, above; but here is laid down for the same letter something different: and it is not possible that both directions should be followed in the production of one sound. To get rid of this difficulty, a division must be made; the former description must be understood as applying to e by itself, and the present one to e combined with a consonant. How is this determination made? Why, when we say in a general way "the letter e," it lies nearest, or is most natural, to understand that letter itself, without a consonant; hence, because of its prior suggestedness, the first definition belongs to it; and the other is left, to be applied to the same sound as combined with a consonant.

The utter artificiality of the answer to the second objection is too obvious to need pointing out; and even the first evokes more difficulties than it removes. There is no inconsistency whatever between rules 17 and 23, and we have reason to be surprised only at the repetition in the latter of what is implied already in the former. Rule 23 has the air of being an afterthought, slipped in, because of the really close relationship between e and i, with disregard of what had been taught before. The alleged difference of degree of approximation exists clearly enough, but would be very insufficiently intimated by a mere separation of one rule into two.

24. In the u-vowels, there is approximation of the lips.

After his paraphrase of the rule, the commentator enters here upon an exposition, the intent of which is not altogether clear to me. "Here, he says, approximation is as formerly, and not mere drawing down together" (that is, of the same kind as was taught in rule 14, above, and not the prakṛṣṭatā, 'protraction,' of rule 15, which is there glossed by saṁnikṛṣṭatā?). "However, 'the lips drawn down together may be long'—this will be said hereafter" (by this phrase some direction given later in the treatise is

25. But, in all cases, with an interval of one from the preceding.

The commentary on this very obscure rule reads as follows:

By vicinage, "labial approximation" is here implied: everywhere, in the case of labial vowels, after the preceding labial approximation, a separate labial approximation is to be made, provided it have an interval of one: by this is understood having the quantity of a mora interposed: that, namely, has an interval of one whereof one mora is the interval or interposition. This is the distinctive condition of the separate labial approximation. The word "but" (tu) denies the necessity of the interval of one in a case where o [W. says, where āu or v] follows. Examples are: utpātūçushmam (i.6.1¹); sūnnīyam iti su-unnīyam (vi.2.4¹); atho oshadhishku (iii.5.5² and vi.3.9⁵); bāhuvoṛ balam (v.5.9²); tanuvāu ghorā 'nyā (v.7.3³; G. M. omit the last word); caturhotā (not found in the Sanhitā: occurs Tāitt. Brāh. ii.2.3²).

Objection: in yo 'ñçum (iii.3.4³), the anusvāra has a mora [by i.34] and the ç a half-mora [by i.37]; since, then, the quantity being a mora and a half, there is not an interval of one, how is the separate labial approximation assured?

Answer: it is assured by the principle "a hundred includes fifty." Where there is a mora and a half, there is à fortiori a mora; in virtue of this the prescribed effect is produced, but its excess does not vitiate the rule, because the word "one" excludes what does not belong to itself (?) For the same reason, the occurrence of the double labial in such passages as bāhuvoḥ balam ūruvoḥ ojah (v.5.9²: G. M. omit the last word) is not primary (or original), but its quality as sphurita, 'quavered,' is shown by the likeness of the example (?).

Second objection: then why is there not a separate labial approximation in the two u's following the k and r of kusurubindoh (vii. 2.2¹), since there occurs more than a mora and a half of interval between them?

Answer: not so; here there is denial of separate labiality only for the two u's that follow k and s, because of the absence of its necessary condition; but to that following the r this rule does not apply, because it is not a case of separateness from the preceding, but of separateness from the u that follows the intermediate s; this being so, there is no occurrence of the interval of one for a letter in this situation: thus there is no offense against the rule.

So far the comment; but either I have failed to apprehend its true meaning, or it has given a false interpretation to the rule, or the rule itself is destitute of intelligible significance. I must confess myself unable to see what peculiarity there should be in the utterance of two labial vowels following one another in two successive syllables with not less than a mora's interval between them. No precept, so far as I know, in any of the other Prātiçākhyas, is analogous with this, or casts light upon it.

It appears to be intimated, in the course of the answer to the first objection, that the peculiar utterance of the u in such words as bāhuvoḥ for the usual bāhvoḥ and ūruvoḥ for ūrvoḥ is denominated sphurita. The term does not occur elsewhere; nor is any notice taken of the phenomenon, if not here. It is a well-known characteristic of Tāittiriya texts, but is found in fewer words than one would be apt to imagine. Besides the two just given, I have noted in the Sanhitā only the cases of tanū (tanuram, e.g.i.1.8; tanuvā, e.g.i.1.10²) and the word surar, which are often met with. I have not entered deeply enough into the investigation to deduce the law, if law there be, by which the resolution is made.

We have here another indication that, as intimated above (under ii.12), our Prātiçākhyā does not recognize the close or neutral pronunciation of the short a; for, if it did so, there would obviously be no reason for referring to the opinion held by certain authorities respecting its assumption of that utterance in diphthongal combination. Some phonetists (without sufficient reason, as it appears to me) have in like manner defined the first element in our English diphthongs ("long i" in aisle, isle, and ou or ow in house, down) to be the neutral vowel (u in but), rather than the open a (of far). But, whatever may have been the case with the Sanskrit diphthongs, our own cannot be truly described as composed of two elements each: they are slides; and to allow the organs to remain in

29. But, of the latter, u.

That is to say, the remainder of āu is one and a half times u. To account for the word "but" (tu) in the rule, the commentator notes that, as the beginning of both diphthongs is the same sound, a, it might seem to follow that their end would be the same sound, i: this the "but" denies. This explanation merely intensifies and makes too precise the actual meaning of the word.

For the teachings of the other Prātiçākhyas as to the pronunciation of āi and āu, see the note to Ath. Pr. i.40. As there remarked, the euphonic treatment which they receive proves their first element to have had originally more than a half-mora of quantity. If they must be limited to two moras, a better description of them would have been $1\frac{1}{2}a + \frac{1}{2}i$, and $1\frac{1}{2}a + \frac{1}{2}u$. If, as we may presume to be the case, the authors of these treatises defined their own pronunciation pretty accurately, then the āi and āu, not less than the e and o, had by their time taken on a value notably different from that which belonged to them when the euphonic rules of the language were the faithful representation of living processes.

of the "last" or nasal mutes, pratyāñ hotāram (vi.3.1⁵)—to which G. M. add prāñcam upa (v.2.7³), and mañind (vii.3.14).

The term anunāsika is interpreted by the commentator as signifying nāsikām anuvartate, 'it goes after the nostril'—that is to say, doubtless, 'it finds exit by the nasal passages:' an accurate definition of this class of sounds. As employed in this Prāṭicākhya, anunāsika means simply, as adjective, 'nasal,' and its derivative noun, ānunāsikya, signifies 'nasality, nasal utterance.' Rule 52, below, describes how such mode of utterance is produced, and in chapter xvii. (rules 1-4) is made an attempt to define the degree of nasality in the various sounds of the class. "Nasal," or anunāsika, by the present rule, are the anusvāra and the five nasal mutes, ñ, ṇ, n, ṇ, m; the same term is applied later to the nasal semivowels into which n and m (v.26-28) are under certain circumstances convertible; and at v.31, x.11, xv.1,6, xxii.14, we also hear of nasal (anunāsika) vowels. The other nose-sounds, the yamas and nāsikya (ii.49,50, xxi.8,12-14), do not anywhere receive this title.

It is desirable to put together somewhere a comprehensive statement of the doctrines held by the Tāittiriya-Prāṭicākhya respecting the nasal constituents of the alphabet it recognizes, and no more suitable place is likely to present itself than is offered here.

All nasal (anunāsika) sounds are uttered (ii.52) by the mouth and nose together. An uttama, a "last" or nasal mute, is a sound in the production of which the intonated breath escapes through the nose, while the organs of the mouth form one of those same contacts which give rise to the corresponding non-nasal mutes of the series. In anusvāra, on the other hand (including under that designation the nasal semivowels, of which more further on), the mouth-organs are not wholly closed, but the intonated breath finds exit through them at the same time that it passes through the nasal cavities. In all cases, then, in which the character of the nasal of a syllable is determined by that of the following consonant, the nasal will be a mute if the latter is a mute, but an anusvāra if succeeded by a letter not forming a contact—by a semi-vowel or a spirant. Respecting the phonetic character and occurrence of the nasal mutes, there has been no difference of opinion, so far as we have any information, among the Hindu phonetists of the period represented by the Prāṭicākhyas; none of them has allowed a final anusvāra before a pause, or an anusvāra before a mute, either in the same or a following word. As to the phonetic value, however, of the real anusvāra, the nasal uttered with open mouth-organs, there was by no means the same accord among those ancient grammarians. Some held it to be a pervading nasalization of the preceding vowel; others, a nasal addition to that vowel. The former view is adopted and consistently maintained by the Atharva-Prātiçākhyā, which acknowledges nasal consonants and nasalized vowels, but no tertium quid. The Prātiçākhyas of the Rik and White Yajus are equally consistent in their recognition of an anusvāra as nasal appendage to the vowel, and the latter of them gives (Vāj. Pr. iv. 147-8) detailed directions as to the quantity belonging to each element. The Tāittiriya-Prātiçākhyā adopts prevailingly the same view, but lets the other appear distinctly in some of its rules. Thus, at v. 31, it is stated to be Âtreya's opinion that, when a nasal mute becomes l, the preceding vowel is nasalized; and, in conformity with this, xv. 1 directly teaches that, after the various conversion of m and n, the vowel before them becomes nasal, the following rules adding (xv. 2, 3) that some authorities deny this, and direct anusvāra to be inserted instead: here the commentary has to reverse the obvious intent of the text, and declare the latter rules approved, and the first disapproved. Further, x. 11 directs that when a vowel is combined with a nasalized vowel the result is nasal (the commentary, however, gives a different interpretation: see the rule). Once more, in xxii. 14, among "heavy" syllables is reckoned one that is anundsika, 'nasal.'

I very much doubt whether this difference of views is founded upon an actual difference of pronunciation; it is probably due rather to a discordant apprehension and analysis of a single mode of utterance. The same point might divide into two parties our phonetists at the present day—just as they have long been divided upon the question whether a b differs from a p in being sonant, or in being soft, or weak, or of inferior aspiration, or something of that kind. Without entering into any detailed discussion of the subject, I will simply say that I incline to side with the Atharvan school, and to believe in nasal vowels rather than in anusvāra. No one of the Prātiçākhyas gives an intelligible definition of the phonetic character of anusvāra, considered as an independent alphabetic element; if it is to be so considered, we shall hardly be able to make of it anything but a bit of the neutral vowel (u of but) nasalized, or the sound of the French un, and shall have to regard it as attached to the vowel much in the same way as, by us who speak English, the same sound not nasalized is attached to most of our long vowels before an r—for example, in there, here, oar, cure, fire, sour (see Journ. Am. Or. Soc'y, viii. 353).

Which of the two views is originally favored by the Devanāgarī alphabet does not admit of much question; the writing of um̐ca, for example,* with a nasal sign over the vowel of the first syllable, is an unequivocal recognition of the nasality as something affecting the vowel itself. If it had seemed to the framers of this alphabet to be a something interposed between the vowel and the following consonant, they would doubtless have found for it a sign to stand between those of the other elements. This has actually been done, out of a true regard for consistency, by the writers of the Vājasaneyi and Tāittirīya texts: for lack of a better device, they have brought down one of the usual signs of nasality from above the syllable to a position between the syllables, giving it an addition which enables it to maintain its place there *—in the Tāittirīya texts, we have the dotted crescent, with the vi-rāma, the usual mark for a consonant not graphically combined with a following consonant, beneath it. The scribes of the Rig-Veda seem to have been less solicitous to make their practice square with their theory. It may well be made a question, however, whether the habit, now so common, of writing amka, amta, ambā, for aika, anta, ambā, etc.,† could have grown up until the opinion had become prevalent that the nasal sign in amga also represented a nasal sound which followed the vowel, and was accommodated in its special mode of utterance to its successor.‡

One more point in the theory of the nasal sounds calls for notice. The assimilation of n to a following l, and of m to a following l, y, or v (v. 26-8), is treated by the Tāittirīya, the Vājasaneyi, and the Rik Prātiçākhyas as resulting in the production, not of anusvāra, but of a nasal counterpart to the semivowel—that is, the case is made analogous with that of a nasal before a mute, instead of before a spirant. Here, also, the Atharva-Prātiçākhyā pursues an independent course, and accepts no nasal y or v, but only a nasal l, as product of both m and n (see Ath. Pr. ii.35). In this case, as well as in the other, we have to assume merely a difference in the theoretical explanation of an identical mode of pronunciation; and I should not only favor the Atharvan view, but should be willing to give up the nasal l itself, as not worth distinguishing from an ordinary case of anusvāra—or of nasalized vowel, if we accept this understanding of the matter. Thus much, indeed, may be allowed—that, while the absence of sonant utterance in the spirants cuts them off from sharing in a nasal quality, it might be difficult to prevent the nasality of the preceding vowel from infecting at least

* Thus, for ग्रंश or ग्रंश, the Vāj. S. writes अंश, the Tāitt. S. अंश.

† That is, अंक, अंत, अंवा, for अङ्क, अन्त, अम्वा.

‡ No valid objection can be raised against the, practically so convenient, imitation of this habit on the part of modern European scholars, so far as concerns the representation of an original m assimilated to a following consonant. To go farther than this, however, and write the anusvāra sign in the interior of a word for a nasal mute which is equally radical or thematic with the succeeding non nasal, and, yet more, to write it for a final m, which no Prātiçākhyā allows to be pronounced otherwise than m, seems an indefensible practice, and one wholly to be disapproved and rejected. Of Müller's seemingly elaborate defense of his adherence to it, given in the Preface to his Hitopadeça, absolutely the whole point lies in the phrases (p. xi.): "it is easier to write amkita than añkita. What applies to writing applies with still greater force to printing"—which latter consideration must be pronounced destitute of weight; since, on the contrary, we do expect our printing to be superior in accuracy to ordinary writing.

the beginning of the sonant semivowels. For the exclusion of r from the same treatment with the other semivowels I can discover no good reason.

The usage of the manuscripts is pretty nearly in accordance with the theories of the Prāṭiśākhya. For an assimilated m, the distinctive anusvāra sign is always written before r, as before the spirants; but before l, y, and v is written the sign of nasality above the preceding syllable, as before a mute. But as regards n before l, my manuscript varies with complete irregularity between treating it like m, as required by the Prāṭiśākhya, and writing the n unchanged, either with virāma or conjoined with the l (instances of the latter mode of treatment are about twice as frequent as of the former). The edited text more usually follows a third method, supported neither by my manuscript nor by the Prāṭiśākhya: it writes the l double, and puts a sign of nasality over the preceding syllable. This is nonsense: if two l's are written, the first should be separated from the other, and should have the sign of nasality written above it. But there is no reason why this should be done in the case of a combination of l with n any more than with m, or than in the combination of m with y and v.

It only remains to add that, in my manuscripts (T. and W.) and those at Berlin and Oxford (B. and O.), the text of the Prāṭiśākhya follows, in regard to the treatment of the nasals as to other points of euphony, the usages of the Āitiśākhya text, and that the citations from the latter in the commentary are also written accordingly; while the body of the commentary itself follows the methods of ordinary Sanskrit texts. In this edition, therefore, their example is followed as closely as possible: the proper anusvāra being represented by ṁ, and the m assimilated to a mute or semivowel, by m̐. The two South-Indian manuscripts (G. and M.) do not distinguish these two from one another.

31. In the case of the vowels, that is their place of production, to which approximation is made.

The term upasaṁhāra, 'approximation,' is glossed by upaśleṣa-viṣeṣaḥ, 'a sort of embrace'—unless, indeed, we are to read, with G. and M., saṁśleṣa-viṣeṣaḥ, 'disunion of embrace,' i. e., 'embrace which does not come to actual contact.'

The terms sthāna, 'place,' and kāraṇa, 'organ,' denote, as in the other *Prāṭiśākhya*s (see note to Ath. Pr. i.18), the more passive and the more active of the two parts of the mouth whose concurrence gives birth to a sound.

Here, "in the case of the vowels" is declared to be implied from the preceding rule; upasañharati, 'approaches,' is explained by prāpayati, 'attains;' and, as example of a karana, or producing organ, reference is made to the "tip of the tongue," spoken of in rule 18 of this chapter.

अन्येषां तु यत्र स्पर्शनि तत्स्थानम् ॥ ३३ ॥

33. But in the case of the other letters, that is place of production, where contact is made.

By this expression, the commentator says, simple embrace or union is predicated of the consonants, while above a sort of embrace (or disunion of embrace) was predicated of the vowels. The difference, he adds, between approximation and contact will be inferred by any knowing person from the force of the terms themselves. The word "but" (tu) is meant to exclude the vowels; or, as Māhisheya explains it, annuls for anusvāra and svarabhakti the quality of being produced by contact merely, like the other consonants. This last is a precious bit of pregnant construction; and the whole comment is more obscure than the rule itself, whose meaning and implication are sufficiently obvious.

In these four rules is implied that distinction of opener and closer position between vowel and consonant which constitutes their essential difference (see Journ. Am. Or. Soc'y, viii.367 seq.), and which the Ath. Pr. states more fully (i.29-35:—where, in rule 33, we should read eke 'sprshṭam), with specifications of degree of openness and closure which are here omitted (save so far as represented by rule 45, below).

of the mouth-cavity." Perhaps we shall best remove the difficulties attaching to the use of the word "head" in describing this class of sounds, by assuming that the name mūrdhanya, 'capital,' had become firmly established in use as designating them, at an earlier period of phonetic science in India, when their mode of production was less accurately understood and defined; and was therefore retained by the later grammarians, who gave to it a new definition. For, that mūrdhan should have been taken directly and without ceremony to signify the 'dome of the palate' does not appear to me possible. As in the notes to the Atharva-Prātiśākhya, I shall take the liberty of speaking of the t-sounds as "lingual"—a term, on the whole, as unobjectionable and as commonly accepted as any other.

The commentator glosses the word pratīveshtya, 'having rolled it back,' by "having done what? having rolled back (G. M. add in explanation āveshtya, 'having rolled up') the tip of the tongue, on account of its suitableness" (i. e. of the adaptedness of this position to produce the contact aimed at).

40. In y, with the two edges of the middle of the tongue, upon the palate.

The Tāittirīya-Prātiśākhya stands alone in omitting to rank the semi-vowels along with the mutes, as palatal, etc., and in describing their formation throughout by special rule. Respecting y, see the note to Ath. Pr. i.21.

The description of the mode of production of y, here given, is quite accurate and sufficiently distinctive. The "edges" are mentioned, as being the parts which form contact with the palate, the central part remaining open, as taught for i in rule 22, above.

41. In r, with the middle of the tip of the tongue, back of the roots of the teeth.

Pratyak is explained by the phrase, "in the interior upper portion"—that is, 'within and above'—the equivalence of pratyag-ātman and anturātman, 'inner soul,' being pleaded as justification.

The somewhat discordant teachings of the Prātiśākhyas with reference to this sound are detailed in the note to Ath. Pr. i.28. The most note-worthy circumstance in their common treatment of the letter is that they so ignore its special relationship with the lingual mutes, and in part with the r-vowels: although in this treatise the definition of the latter (ii.18) is, essentially, nearly accordant with that here given for the semi-vowel. R could not possibly have the value which belongs to it in the Sanskrit euphonic system, if it were not a lingual semi-vowel, like the English r, uttered with the tip of the tongue reverted into the dome of the palate.

42. Also in l, at the roots of the teeth.

According to the commentator, the "and" (ca) of this rule brings down by implication from the preceding both jihvāgramadhyā, 'middle of the tongue-tip,' and pratyak, 'back from.' It appears obvious, however, if only from the locative case of dantamūleshu, that the latter item is not intended, and that we are to regard the roots of the teeth themselves (more properly, the gums close upon them) as the sthāna, or 'place of production,' of l. This, indeed, is nearly enough intimated by the final paraphrase of the comment. The really distinctive characteristic of the l, that it forms a contact in front, but allows the breath to escape at the sides of the tongue, is here by no means clearly brought out: rather, we are left to infer that it and the r are produced in the same manner, only the r a little further back. No one of the other treatises gives a better description (see note to Ath. Pr. i.24, where I have given the Tāittirīya definition more credit than really belongs to it).

43. In v, with the edges of the lips, along with the teeth.

This rule cannot be commended for distinctness. The commentator gives it not a little of additional precision, by his paraphrase "with the two edges of the lower lip, along with the points of the upper teeth." But how comes the lower lip to have two edges? He adds, that the teeth are the place, and the lips the organ, of production. But then why does not the rule read danteshu, instead of the instrumental dantāiḥ? It gives us two instrumentals, as if teeth and lips were joint organs, and neither of them any more "place" than the other. The lower lip, being the more passive organ, should be the "place" on which the teeth, as "organ," make their contact; but from taking this view the treatise and its comment appear to be hindered by the analogy of the other sthāna's, which have uniformly been the upper of the two parts concerned in the contact. To make a good definition, the rule should read adharoshthānte for oshthāntābhyām.

Of the other treatises (as pointed out in the note to Ath. Pr. i.25), the Vāj. Pr. gives the v a description corresponding with this, and showing the letter to have had the precise phonetic value of our English v. This, of course, should not in the least stand in the way of our fully recognizing the fact that its original sound was that of our w. The w is a semi-vowel, standing in the same relation to u as y to i; but to call v a semi-vowel is a sim-

44. The spirants, in their order, are produced in the places of the mutes.

By rule i.9, there are six spirants, and as there are but five "places" of mutes, these belong to the first five spirants, as is signified by the expression "in their order:" h, therefore, is omitted, and its rules will be given hereafter (rules 46, 47). To this effect the commentator, who also allots the spirants to their respective mute-classes, and cites from the Sanhitā an example for each: namely, for jihvāmālīya, uttered in the place of a k-mute, yaḥ kāmayeta (ii.3.2⁴ et al.: I follow the example of all the MSS., and do not attempt to distinguish the guttural and labial spirants from visarjanīya by different signs); for ç, in the place of a c-mute, madhuç ca mādhaça ca (i.4.14, or iv.4.11¹: W. B. omit the last two words of the citation, and W. reads manyuç ca, which is found at iv.7.2¹); for sh, in the place of a t-mute, ashtābhyah svadhā (vii.2.15); for s, in the place of a t-mute, stanā uparavāh (vi.2.11⁴); and for upadhmanīya, in the place of a p-mute, yaḥ pāpmanā (ii.3.13²).

To make this rule a definition of the mode of utterance of the spirants, the one next following is to be applied to modify it. Unfortunately, both together are insufficient to give us any clear idea of the two problematical sounds, jihvāmālīya and upadhmanīya; and there is room for us to suspect them of being, like the long l-vowel, an artificial fabrication of the Hindu grammarians. As for the s, there is no question as to its value. Nor ought there to be respecting that of the sh, which both the explanations of the phonetists and the phenomena of Sanskrit euphony show to have been that particular sibilant (more nearly resembling our sh than s, but sufficiently distinct from either) which is uttered with the tongue reverted into the dome of the palate. It passes my comprehension how European grammarians should continue to identify Absurd I call it, because there is really no difference at all between the pronunciation of sh in shun and ss in session. If our sh be found in the Sanskrit alphabet, it is the palatal sibilant ç, not the lingual, sh. The question of the value of ç is connected with and depends upon that of the palatal series of mutes ; and upon this I have nothing more to say than I said in the note to Ath. Pr. i.21.

45. But the middle of the producing organ is unclosed.

The “but” (tu) of this rule, we are told, is intended to annul (so far) the similarity of organ of the spirants with the mutes. This prescription of an unclosure of the middle of the organ is a rather artificial device for saving the credit of the general prescription of actual contact in all the consonants. It is nearly equivalent with the rules of the Ath. Pr. (i.30,31) upon the same subject.

And, the commentator adds, they have no karana, or organ of production. As example of h, he cites aharaha havirdhāninām (ii.5.6³), but leaves visarjanîya uninstanced.

The other Prāṭicākhyas give a corresponding definition of the utterance of these two sounds (see note to Ath. Pr. i.19). It is too indefinite to be of any particular use to us in determining their phonetic value. But the two rules which next follow in our treatise are very interesting and instructive.

उदयस्वरादिसंस्थानौ ह्रकार एकेषाम् ॥४७॥

47. In the opinion of some authorities, h has the same position as the beginning of the following vowel.

Our commentator first offers the simple paraphrase of this rule which he finds given by one of his three chief authorities, Vararuci, and then proceeds to exhibit his own superior acuteness by a very long, but not very important, discussion of it: a loose version is as follows:

The expression "the same position as the beginning," etc., implies a difference of position in the remainder of the vowel; but there is none such in a, i, u; as a vowel has but a single position, the word "beginning" is superfluous, and the desired result would be secured by saying simply "of the same position with the vowel." That is not so: a difference of position does in fact belong to the remainder of the diphthongs: the two rules (ii.28, 29) which teach that i and u form the final elements of āi and āu assure the difference of position for those two sounds; in like manner, a difference of position is to be remarked as prescribed in general grammar [though not in this treatise] for the final elements of e and o, they being included in the category of diphthongs. But again: even granting that, the utterance in the throat of this very a which makes the initial element of the diphthongs is taught by the rule, "the throat is the place of production of a, the k-mutes, h, and visarjanīya;" hence, as sameness of position [with the a, as throat-sound] is prescribed by the preceding rule, this rule is open to the charge of superfluous repetition. You must not think so, is the reply; there is a difference between the a which forms the beginning of e and o and an a standing by itself: to the latter belongs the description given above in rule 12, "the lips and jaws not too widely separated," etc.; to the other, that of rule 27, "with the organ of production more closed;" therefore, as place and organ correspond to one another, the expression "of the same position as the beginning" is to be understood as meaning "of the same place and organ as the beginning." Moreover, in the former rule the absence of an organ of production was taught, but here is implied also the presence of such; hence a difference of opinions comes to light, and not merely a superfluous repetition.

47. ekeshām mate hakāra¹ udayasrarādisasthāna ātmāna upari svarādisasthāno² bhavati 'ti vārarucoktam³ syād etat. ādinā⁴ sasthāna ity ukte śeshasya sthānāntaratvam⁵ vaktavyam tad apy akārekrōkāreshu nā 'sti: ' svarasyāi "kam eva "sthānum⁷ ity ādiçabdavāiyarthyam syāt: svarasasthāna⁸ ity etāvatai 'vā 'rthasiddhir¹⁰ iti: māi 'vam: sandhyakshareshu śeshasya⁹ sthānāntaropapatteh: ikāro 'dhyardhaḥ (ii.28) iti sūtradhāyena śeshabhūtavarṇavyaktāu¹¹ tayo¹² sthānāntaram api prasiddham eva: evam¹³ ekārāukārayor api vyākaraṇe¹⁴ śeshasya sthānāntaram vikitam vijñeyam: sandhyaksharatvāriçeshād anayoḥ. nanv evam apy akuhavisarjanīyānām kaṇṭha iti sandhyaksharādāv akārasyā¹⁵ 'pi kaṇṭhassthānatvāt tena samānasthānatve¹⁶ kathyamāne¹⁸ pūrvasūtroktena¹⁷ pāunaruktyam asya¹⁸ sūtrasya

Any detailed criticism of this cunning argument would certainly be open to the charge of superfluity, and I shall not attempt it.

A few further examples of the occurrence of h, before the various diphthongs, are added: tigmahete (i.2.14²), yāvatir vāsāmahāi (vii.5.2¹), agnihotraṁ juhōti (i.5.9¹), samprayatir ahāu (v.6.1²).

The acuteness of observation of the "some authorities" who have made this definition of the character of a h certainly deserves respectful, if not admiring, acknowledgment. It is the peculiarity of the aspiration, that it is an emission of unintonated breath through the same position of the mouth organs by which the following intonated sound receives its character: thus, the h of ha is a surd a, so to speak; that of he, a surd e; that of who, a surd u; that of hue, a surd y; and so on (see Journ. Am. Or. Soc'y, viii.370 seq.). The rule would have been made better by reading udayavarṇa, instead of udayasvarādi—"the following sound," instead of 'the beginning of the following vowel'—for the assimilation is not less true of the semi-vowels and nasals than of the vowels.

48. Visarjanīya has the same position as the end of the preceding vowel.

The commentator does not tell us whether this definition is to be looked upon as, like the preceding, expressing the opinion of "some authorities," or as having the unqualified approval of the Prāṭicūkhya. From his silence we should infer the latter, but the connection gives reason for presuming the former. He paraphrases: "visarjanīya is of like position—that is, of like place and organ—with the end of the vowel that precedes itself;" and adds that here too the language of the rule is aimed at the diphthongs, since no other vowel exhibits any difference of position between its end and its beginning. His examples, again, are only of visarjanīya after a diphthong: they are agneḥ (i.1.10³ et al.), brāhmaṇāir āyushmat (ii.3.10³), bāhuvoṣ balam (v.5.9²), and ā'yam gāuḥ (i.5.3¹). In the second and third of these passages, only the first word should have been quoted, in order to exhibit the visarjanīya.

The teachings of the other Prātiśākhya respecting the visarjanīya are rehearsed in the note to Ath. Pr. i.19. All are so indefinite as really to teach us nothing respecting the phonetic value of the sound. The present rule alone gives us positive and precise information, teaching us to regard it as, like the h, a simple uncharacterized breathing, a kind of final h.

The "nose-sounds," the commentary says, are the yamas (xxi. 12,13); but why the nāsikya (xxi.14) should not be regarded as included among them I do not see. Any discussion of their phonetic character may be best deferred until the chapter where the rules for their occurrence are given. As examples of the nose-sounds are quoted rukmaṁ antaram (v.i.10³; but G. M. B. give instead rukmantam, ii.2.3³), yācñā (i.5.7⁴; but G. M. give instead rājñā, ii.6.2² et al.), ātnārah (v.6.5³), ratnaṁ abhajānta (ii.6.12¹; but G. M. give instead, if it be not merely a corrupted reading, uccā ratnaṁ ayajānta, which I have not found in the Sanhitā), and pāpmānam (i.4.41 et al.).

51. And, in them, the organ of production is as in the series of mutes.

The “and” (ca) of this rule, the commentator says, brings forward, on the principle of ‘the lion’s look’ (a distant glance backward: the phrase is used several times later in like cases), the already defined organs of production of the various mute series.

If the mouth be regarded as bearing a part in the production of the nose-sounds or yamas, in a way which is determined by the mode of formation of the mutes to which they are attached, it is difficult to see how their number can be restricted to four, as it is in the “list of sounds” given at the beginning of the treatise, and in the comment on rule xxi.12.

52. Nasal quality is given by the unclosing of the nose.

Ānunāsikya is the quality of being anunāsika or ‘nasal;’ and this name, as prescribed by rule 30, above, and fully supported by the usage of the treatise elsewhere, belongs to anusrāra and the various nasal consonants. The definition of the manner in which the quality is communicated is quite unexceptionable; the organs of the mouth remaining in the positions already given for the various classes and single sounds, the opening of the nasal passage, and the utterance through it of a part or the whole of the emitted material, makes the corresponding nasal sound.

The commentator explains nāsikāvivarana by ghrāṇabīla, ‘hole of the nose, nasal passage,’ as if vivarana signified the opening or cavity, instead of the act of opening or unclosing. His choice of an example also seems to betray a want of appreciation of the true scope of the rule: it is suṣṭhokāzñ sumanūgādāzñ (i.8.16²).

CHAPTER III.

CONTENTS: 1, introductory; 2-6, cases of ā at the end of the first member of a compound, requiring to be shortened in divided text; 7, of i and u; 8-12, of final ā of verbal forms and particles; 13-14, of final i and u; 15, of initial ā.

अथादावुत्तरे विभागे ह्रस्वं व्यञ्जनपरः ॥ १ ॥

1. Now then—at the beginning or end of a word, a vowel, in case of separation, if followed by a consonant, becomes short as hereinafter set forth.

Matters of introductory explanation, of interpretation of the rules of the treatise, and of phonetic theory, being now for the present disposed of (for they are resumed, in a supplementary way, in some of the concluding chapters), the task of determining the readings of the Sanhitā is taken up. And the first subject dealt with is that of the irregular prolongations of vowels—chiefly final a, i, and u—which are so frequent in all the Vedic texts. In the other treatises (Rik Pr. vii.-ix., Vāj. Pr. iii.95-128, Ath. Pr. iii.1-25), the rules tell us in what situations a vowel originally short is lengthened: this is more in accordance with the general method of the Prātiçākhyas, which take for granted, upon the whole, the existence of their çākhās in the analyzed condition of the pada-text, and proceed to construct the saṁhitā from it. Here, on the contrary, we are told what vowels, long in the ordinary text, are to be shortened when thrown out of combination with their surroundings. Such dissolution of the continuity of the text takes place, first, in pada, whenever a pause—either the avagraha separating the two members of a compound, in its repetition after iti, or the longer pause that divides between two words—comes to stand between the vowel in question and the consonant which was its next neighbor in saṁhitā: thus, devāyata iti deva-yate; ava: nah (s. avā nah). Second, it is made in the so-called juṣṭi-text, examples of which are often quoted in the sequel, and to which the rules of the treatise are in more than one instance adapted; this text is constructed by thrice repeating each pair of words—first in their natural order, then inverted, then in the natural order again : for example, āpo hi shthā mayobhuvah would become āpo hi hy āpa āpo hi : hi shthā stha hi hi shthā : sthā mayobhuvo mayobhuvā stha sthā mayobhuvah : mayobhuva iti mayah-bhuvah : the treatment of the ā of sthā here illustrates the conditions of the restoration of the short vowel in such cases. Third, the same restoration takes place in the saṃhitā-text of the existing manuscripts and in the edition founded upon them, when the lengthened vowel happens to come at the end of one of those passages, of just fifty words each, into which the anuvākas or sections of the Sanhitā are divided. This division the Prāṭicākhya does not recognize—or, at any rate, does not notice—not infrequently quoting in saṃdhī, without remark, words which are separated by it (for example, under rule 13, below, uḥmasi gamadhye, i.3.6¹⁻², where the edited text reads correctly uḥmasi : 1 : gamadhye).

The comment upon this rule may be loosely translated, or paraphrased, as follows :

Here atha, 'now then,' is an introductory heading; ādīu [literally, 'at the beginning'] means 'at the beginning of a word' [including, also, a separable part of a compound word]; uttare [literally, 'in the latter part'] means 'at the end of a word;' a vowel occupying such a position, if it be long in saṃhitā, becomes short vibhāge, i. e. 'in case of separation,' when followed by a consonant—that is to say, when so followed in saṃhitā. But whence is derived the limitation to a "long" vowel? We answer, from its conversion into a short, and from the non-occurrence of any protracted (phuta) vowels among the instances included in the rules. The limitation "in saṃhitā" implies that the word whose form is in question is placed in euphonic connection with the word that follows it; not, however, with the word that precedes it [unless, as should be excepted, its initial vowel, instead of its final, is the one liable to change of quantity]. "Separation" (vibhāga) is to be understood as division from the words with which it stands in natural or original connection—that is, according to the reading of the fundamental text : otherwise, in the jaṭā-text of the two words sthā mayobhuvah (see above), the sthā would retain its long ā in its second repetition, because of its standing in euphonic connection with the following word : and that should not be so. The sense of the word vibhāga is, in case of a long initial vowel, separation from the preceding word ; in case of a long final, from the following word. The limitation "in case of separation, if followed by a consonant" is for the sake of excluding such cases as ṛtadhā-mā 'si (i.3.3: in separated form, ṛtadhāmā: asi), which would otherwise come under the rule iii.8 [among the specifications of which, dhāmā is included]. The limitation "a long vowel in saṁhitā" is intended to bring esha vo bharatā rājā (i.8.10² et al.; pada-text, bharatāh) under the action of the rules; since thus, and not otherwise, is pertinence given to the word yājyā in rule 11 of this chapter. Undue extension of the prescription to such cases as tvā vāyavaḥ (i.1.1) is provided against by the rules that follow [since these specify all the cases in which it is to be applied].

The only difficulty arising in connection with the understanding of this rule, or of the interpretation of it given by the commentator, grows out of the specification vyañjanapara, 'followed by a consonant.' Respecting this, we are explicitly told, near the beginning of the exposition, "the being followed by a consonant is to be understood here of the condition of things in the saṁhitā-text"—that is to say, any long vowel which appears in saṁhitā as a final, with a consonant following it, is to be regarded as falling under the rules of the chapter. This specification, then, makes the rules apply to such cases as bharatā rājā (the example quoted by the commentator: the pada-reading is bharatāh: rājā) and adhā mā (quoted under rule 9; pada-reading adhāh: mā), and they have to be specially allowed for and excepted—as is done in rules 9 and 11. It seems very strange, now, to have this implication made, requiring as a consequence that all the words which by euphonic processes come to exhibit in saṁhitā a long final vowel (ā) should be taken into consideration: but the number of cases actually needing to be guarded against in the rules on account of it is very small. For, in the first place, the question can arise only in regard to the words specially mentioned in the rules; and among these there are not many for which homophonous forms in āh or āi occur; and of these, again, only a part would occur otherwise than before a vowel, in which situation the hiatus would betray the omission of the former final element. The makers of the treatise, then, appear to have thought it safer to avoid a possible confusion of adhā from adhāh with adhā from adhu, and so on, by making the rules apply in general to both cases, and specially excepting the former. And this is what they have attempted to do: and it has cost them only two additional words—agniyājye in rule 9, and yājyāsu in rule 11—together with an artifice of construction under rule 8, in connection with the word prānāh. Without a complete index verborum to the Sanhitā, or a laboriously minute examination of the whole text with reference to this particular point, I cannot tell just how nearly successful their attempt has been; but I have, I believe, discovered at least one case which they have overlooked. At i.4.24, namely, we read rakshā mākiḥ (p. rakshāh), and, by rule 8, the ā of rakshā should be shortened. That the section containing these words was really a part of the text for which the Prāṭiçākhyā was constructed is proved by the fact that two of its peculiarities of reading are provided for in later rules (vi.5 and xi.13).

But with the interpretation thus given appears to be quite at variance the phrase containing the illustration ṛtadhāmā'si, where vibhāge and vyañjanaparaḥ are immediately connected, and made to mean 'followed by a consonant in separated text' (not ṛtadhāmā: asi). This I can hardly believe to be a genuine part of the commentary. The second ā of ṛtadhāmā'si cannot be said to be either final or initial: it is a combination of both: it does not furnish a case to which the rules of the chapter apply with any propriety, as the saṁhitā reading cannot be affected by them. If not some later meddler, then the commentator himself, has suffered himself to be scared by an imaginary difficulty, and has unnecessarily twisted the rule a little awry in order to its removal.

The specification vibhāge, 'in case of separation,' applies in the Tāittiriya pada-text more generally and more strictly than in those of the other Vedas. Where the separation of a compound is suspended on account of its further composition, the restoration of its natural form is suspended also; and we read, for example, vīrya-vat, but vīryāvat-tara; viçva-mitra, but viçvāmītra-jamadagnī; anu-yāja and ananu-yāja, but prayāja-anāyāja, and so on—and we shall find illustrations hereafter in connection with other changes than prolongation of vowels. Thus, also, in the full pada-readings, the word is given first, before iti, in its saṁhitā form, without change (except euphonic combination with the iti); and this part of the reading I shall accordingly usually omit in quoting the pada-text, setting down only the separated and restored form which follows iti, or the part which corresponds to the entire reading of the Rik and Atharvan pada-texts.

This and the following rules, including the seventh, properly form one connected passage, with the specification ity avagrahaḥ, 'these, as former members of a compound,' which applies alike to them all, standing at the end.

The examples quoted from the Sanhitā in illustration of the rule are as follows. For devā: devāyate yajamānāya çarma (iii.5.5³: G. For rtā, rtāyuvah purā 'nnam akshun (ii.2.5⁵: G. As counter-examples, he quotes: first, to show that not every long ā is to be shortened before the three syllables named, ūrṇāvāntam prathamā sīda yonim (iii.5.11¹: G. M. give only the first two words), asura prajāvān (iii.1.11¹: but B. reads, I presume only by an

This last is a case in which no vibhāga, or 'separation,' would be made in any text of the other Vedas; but the Tāittirīya pada reads indrāvaruṇayor itī 'ndrā-varuṇayoh, and the example is therefore to the purpose.

4. Also citrā, when followed by v.

The illustrative passage cited is citrāvaso svasti te pāram aṣṭiya (i.5.5⁴ and 7⁵: G. M. omit after te). As counter-examples, are given mitrāvaruṇāv eva (ii.1.7³ et al.: p. mitrā-varuṇāv), and citrāpārnāmāse dīksheran (vii.4.8²)—the former to show the necessity of the restriction to citrā, the latter, of the restriction to sequence by a v. I have found no farther instances falling under the rule.

5. Also prasthā, indriyā, draviṇā, viṣvadevyā, dirghā, vīryā, viṣvā, vātā, tvā, bhaṅgurā, karṇakā, vṛshṇiyā, sugopā, rksāmā, aghā, satrā, varshā, pushpā, meghā, prā, svā.

For each of these words, the commentator cites a single example. For prasthā, prasthāvad rathavāhanam (iv.2.5⁶), the only case. For indriyā, indriyāvate puroḍāgam (ii.2.7¹): half a dozen cases of this word occur in the text, and several of indriyāvin (e.g. i.6.2⁴: ii.1.6³: vi.2.10⁶); the latter word, however, is not separated in the pada-text. For draviṇā, draviṇāvataḥ kurute (v.3.11²), the only case. For viṣvadevyā, viṣvadevyāvate śvātrāh (i.4.1¹): the word occurs also at iv.1.6¹⁻². For dirghā, dirghādhiyo rakshamānāh (ii.1.11⁴), the only case. For vīryā, vīryāvantam abhimāti-shāham (i.2.7): the same theme is found in other passages, as are also its comparative, vīryāvat-tara (e.g. i.7.6³), and superlative, vīryāvat-tama (ii.4.2¹), in which the shortening of the ā is not authorized by the Prātiçākhyā, since, in the division, it does not stand next before the pause: and the pada-text reads accordingly. For viṣvā, viṣvāmītrasya sāktam bhavati (v.2.3³⁻⁴: G. M. omit

For vâtâ, vâtâvad varshan (ii.4.7¹), the only case. For tvâ, tvâvato maghonaḥ (ii.2.12⁸; p. tvâ-vataḥ): the Rik pada-text does not shorten the â of this word. For bhaṅgurd, bhettâram bhaṅgurâvataḥ (i.5.6⁴ and iv.1.2⁵). For karnakâ, sûrmî karnakâvaty etayâ (i.5.7⁶ and v.4.7³: G. M. omit the first word, W. B. the last). For vṛshniyâ, vṛshniyâvatas tava (iii.5.6²⁻³). For sugopâ, sa sugopâtamo janah (iv.2.11²; p. sugopâ-tamah: G. M. omit the first word): the Rik pada writes su-gopâ-tamah. For ṛksâmâ, ṛksâmâbhyâm yejushâ (i.2.3³ and iii.1.14⁴). For aghâ, aghâçvâd evâi 'nam antar eti bhûtam (iii.1.7²; p. agha-çvât: G. M. omit the last two words); the Rik and Atharvan pada-texts write agha-açva: the themes aghâyu (e. g. i.2.9¹) and aghâyant (ii.3.14¹) are also found in the Sanhitâ. For satrâ, satrâjîtam dhanajîtam (iv.1.1³; p. satra-jîtam): the word satrâ occurs repeatedly (e. g. i.6.12¹) uncompoundd, and maintains its long final in the pada-text also. For varshâ, varshâhvâm juhoti (ii.4.10³; p. varsha-hvâm). For pushpâ, pushpâvatih supippalâḥ (iv.1.4⁴ and v.1.5¹⁰). For meghâ, meghâgate svâhâ (vii.5.11¹; p. megha-gate; in the same division occurs also meghâyishyute, which is not divided: meghayantî is found at iv.4.5¹). For prâ, prâvanebhiḥ sajoshasah (iv.2.4³; p. pra-vanebhiḥ); the Rik pada-text writes this word pravana, without separation: other words beginning with prâ are prâsah (e. g. i.3.14⁶; p. pra-suhâ), prâçrîgu (ii.1.3^{4,5}), prâsaca (vii.5.11¹; not divided in pada-text), prâkâya (i.8.18; also not divided), and prâçrta (iv.6.2² et al.; also not divided). And for svâ, svâdhiyam janayat sūdayac ca (i.3.14⁶; p. sva-dhiyam): but this the Rik pada-text writes su-âdhiyam.

6. Also ishtâ, after loke and eva.

The commentator cites the two cases: saṃ anvashmiṃ loka ish-tâpârtena (iii.3.8⁵ twice: G. M. omit the first word), and sa tv eve 'ishtâpârte (i.7.3³; p. ish-tâ-pârte). Then, to show that ishtâ after other words remains unchanged, he quotes prati jâgrhy enam ish-tâpârte saṃ srjethâm ayaṃ ca (iv.7.13⁵; p. ish-tâ-pârte: W. B.

The ground of this difference does not appear. To show, further, that only ishtā shortens its ā in the defined position, the passage sākshād eva prajāputaye (v.1.2⁵) is given.

7. Also ṣakti, rathī, tvishī, vāgi, rātri, oshadhī, āhuti, vyāhrtī, svāhākr̥tī, hrādunī, ṣaci, citī, croṇī, pr̥ṣhtī, pūti, abhī, carshanī, parī, adhī, pārī, ṣatrū, vishū, vasū, anū, hanū, sū, vibhū—all these, as first members of a compound.

To the passages cited by the commentator I add, as above, notice of other cases which I have found in the text. For ṣakti, the sole instance is ṣaktiranto gabhīrāḥ (iv.6.6³). For rathī, rathī-tamāu rathīnām (iv.7.15³). For tvishī, saspiṇjarāya tvishimate pathīnām (iv.5.2¹: W. B. omit the last word, G. M. the first). For vāgi, te vāgīmanta ishmināḥ (ii.1.11² and iv.2.11²: G. M. omit the last word). For rātri, rātrībhir asubhnan (ii.4.1¹): if there are other cases, I have failed to note them. For oshadhī, oshadhībhyo vekatam ālubhetu (ii.1.5³: G. M. omit the last word): I have noted half a dozen other cases, but they are not worth reporting. For āhuti, āhutībhir anāyājeshu (ii.6.9⁴). For vyāhrtī, etābhir vyāhrtībhiḥ (i.6.10² and v.5.5³). For svāhākr̥tī, svāhākr̥tībhyah preshye 'ty āha (vi.3.9⁵: G. M. omit the last two words). For hrādunī, svāhā hrādunībhyah svāhā (vii.4.13: G. M. omit the first word, W. B. the last). For ṣaci, viṣṭā rūpā 'bhi cashte ṣacībhiḥ (iv.2.5⁴⁻⁵: W. B. omit before cashte). For citī, citībhyām upāyan (v.7.5⁷). For croṇī, croṇībhyāñ svāhā (vii.3.16²): another case is found at v.7.15. For pr̥ṣhtī, W. B. give pr̥ṣhtībhir divam (v.7.17), but G. M. read pr̥ṣhtībhyah svāhā (vii.3.16¹). For pūti, pūtigandhasyā 'pahatyāi (ii.2.2⁴). For abhī, abhivṛto ghr̥ṇī-vāñ cetati tmanā (iii.5.11¹: G. M. omit the last two words): we have also abhishah at ii.3.2⁶ (p. abhī-sahā). For carshanī, mitra-sya carshanīdhrtah (iii.4.11⁵ and iv.1.6³): another case at i.4.16. For parī, vīravantam parīnusam (ii.2.12⁶; p. parī-nusam: compare rule vii.4). For adhī, adhīvāsam yā hiranyāny asmāi (iv.6.9²: G. M. omit the last word). trāyato hantā (i.6.5³ and iv.2.1²). For vishū, vishūván vishūvantah (vii.4.3⁴): another case at vii.4.8². For vasū, aramatir vasūyuh (iv.3.13⁶). For anū, anūrūdhā nakshatram (iv.4.10²); we have it also in the compounds anūyāja (e. g. ii.6.9⁴), anūbandhya (e. g. ii.2.9⁷), anūkāṣa (e. g. v.4.1³), and anūrj (v.7.23). In the further compound of the first, prayājānūyāja (e. g. i.7.1¹; p. prayāja-anūyājān), the shortening is not authorized, since in it there is no division after anu. Appealing to rule i.53 as his authority, the commentator adds, as contemplated by the present rule, ananūyājam prayānīyam (vi.1.5³; p. ananu-yājam). For hanā, hanābhyañ svāhā (vii.3.16¹). For sū, sūyavasini manave yaçasye (i.2.13²): sūyavasa occurs more than once (e. g. i.7.5^{2,3}). For vibhā, vibhādāvne (iii.5.8,9²).

The commentator notes that the specification at the end of this rule defines the whole mass of words thus far enumerated as collectively avagraha (i.49), 'first members of compounds.'

Henceforth we have to do only with independent words, the category of avagrahas, or former members of compounds, having been exhausted by the foregoing rules. There is cited in illustration, for avā, avā no devyā kṛpā (iv.1.4¹). For sacasvā, sacasvā nah svastaye (i.5.6²). For nudā, pra nudā nah sapatnān (iv.3.12¹ thrice, and v.3.5¹). For mṛdā, W. B. give mṛdā jaritre (iv.5.10⁴), but G. M. read mṛdā no rudra (iv.5.10²): I have noted no other case. For vardhā, vardhā no amavac chavaḥ (ii.6.11³). For ṣik-

I have pointed out in the note to the first rule of the chapter that a passage (i.4.24) in which rakshā appears as euphonic alteration of rakshāh before a sonant consonant ought to be somehow excepted here. For adyā, adyā devān jushtatamah (iv.6.7⁵): also at ii.1.11⁶: iii.4.11²: iv.6.2⁶. For bhavā, bhavā pāyur viço asyā adabdhah (i.2.14¹: G. For bhajā, ā gomati vraje bhajā tvam nah (i.6.12¹: W. B. begin at vraje): another case at iii.3.9². For yātrā, yātrā naro marutaḥ (iii.1.11⁸): other cases at iv.4.4¹; 6.6⁴, 7². For carā, pra carā somā duryān (i.2.10¹). For pibā, pibā somam indra mandatu (ii.4.14³: G. M. omit the last word): another case at i.4.19. For nā, ripavo nā ha debhuḥ (i.2.14⁵⁻⁶): in connection with this word, the commentator runs off into a lengthy discussion, which I defer to the end of the note. For dhāmā, dhāmā hu yat te ajara (iii.1.11⁶): we have dhāma, plural, in samhitā also, at iv.6.5⁵; 7.13⁴. For dhārayā, brhaspate dhārayā vasāni (i.3.7¹ and vi.3.6¹): other cases at iv.1.5⁴, 7². For dharshā, W. B. have dharshā mānushān adbhyah (i.3.8¹), but G. M., dharshā mānushān iti ni yunakti (vi.3.6³). For ghā, uta vā ghā syātāt (i.1.14¹): there is another case, if my manuscript reads correctly, at iii.4.11⁶. For vardhayā, tam agne vardhayā tvam (iv.6.3¹): other cases are at i.5.5²: iv.2.4⁴; 7.13⁵. For bodhā, bodhā no asya vacaso yavishtha (iv.2.3⁴: G. M. omit the last two words). For atrā, atrā te rūpam (iv.6.7³): other cases are at iv.6.7², 8². For tatrā, tatrā ratham upa śagmam (iv.6.6³). For muñcā, pra muñcā svastaye (iii.2.8³): again at iv.7.15⁷. For agrasyā, ekas trash-tur āgrasyā viçastā (iv.6.9³). For prṇasvā, sapta yonir ā prṇasvā ghrtena (i.5.3³ and iv.6.5⁵). For sthā after hi, āpo hi shthā mayobhuraḥ (iv.1.5¹: v.6.1⁴: vii.4.19⁴); and, as counter-example, to show that the correption takes place only after hi, pratishthā vā ekaviñcaḥ (v.2.3⁶ et al.). For tarā after tvam, agne tvam tarā mrdhaḥ (iv.1.9³), with the counter-example antaratarā taptuvrato bhavati (vi.2.2⁷: G. M. omit the last word). For janishvā, jani-

For achā, achā nakshī dyumattamah (i.5.6³ and iv.4.4⁸): other cases at i.7.10²: ii.2.12⁸; 6.11¹: iv.2.4² twice; 4.4² (if my MS. is correct; the Rik reads acha); 5.1²; 6.7⁵: but the compound achāvāka (vii.1.5⁵) is left undivided and unchanged.

The occasion of the commentator's delay and discussion over the word nā is given by the fact that the pada-text of the Tāittirīya Sanhitā (unlike that of the Rik and Atharvan: see note to Ath. Pr. iv.39) divides the word prānāh thus: pra-anāh. Hence, when we read in the Sanhitā, as in the passage which he quotes, prānā vā aṅgavaḥ (vi.4.4⁴: W. B. read simply prānā vāi, which occurs in various other places; e. g. v.3.8²), he fears that, having this division in mind, we shall be misled into believing that the specification nā of the present rule applies to prānā, because we are taught in the first chapter (i.51,52) that a word cited in any rule comes equally under that rule when phonetically altered, or preceded by a. He sets aside this difficulty, however, by the arbitrary dictum that it is not permitted to vary the same word in both ways at once—that we may accept the altered form only of a vocable which is actually quoted entire, not of one made by the prefixion of an a to one so quoted: hence, he infers, the present rule does not apply to [the anā of] prānā, as it begins with a. But a further objection is interposed: in that case, why does it not apply to the part anā of the compound, in which is no altered n? He replies, because of the absence of a long vowel in samhitā, in a word wearing this form—or, as would seem a better statement, because of the absence of any such word in samhitā as anā (for anāh) with a long vowel as its final. The second objection, in fact, is a wholly futile one, scarcely worth the trouble of bringing up and setting aside. The original difficulty is one growing out of the extension of the leading rule in the chapter to cases of final ā in samhitā where a visarjanīya has been lost after it (see note to rule 1). The answer has a somewhat quibbling aspect, but the rule of interpretation which it involves is in accordance with that adopted in one or two analogous cases elsewhere.

The commentator's first care is to define what parts of the Sanhitā are styled agni and yājyā. The former name, he says, designates those mantras which celebrate Agni—namely, the fourth kāṇḍa: by the latter are intended the concluding anuvākas, or sections, of every pragṇa, or chapter, from the beginning of the Sanhitā to the third pragṇa of the fourth kāṇḍa, inclusive; and, besides, the eleventh anuvāka of pragṇa six, kāṇḍa two (i. e. i.1.14; 2.14; 3.14; 4.46; 5.11; 6.12; 7.13; 8.22: ii.1.11; 2.12; 3.14; 4.14; 5.12; 6.11,12: iii.1.11; 2.11; 3.11; 4.11; 5.11: iv.1.11; 2.11; 3.13—in all, twenty-three anuvākas). The name agni does not occur again: the yājyās are the subject of further prescription below, in rules iii.11, ix.20, xi.3. The compound agniyājyā (neuter singular) is justified by a simple reference to Pāṇini's rule (ii.2.29) defining a copulative compound.

The passages cited in illustration of the rule are adhā hy agne kratoh (iv.4.4⁷), adhā ca naḥ çarma yacha drībarhāḥ (iv.5.10³: G. M. omit the last word), adhā te sumnam imāhe (ii.6.11⁴), and adhā yathā naḥ pitarah (ii.6.12⁴: W. B. omit the last word): I have noted no other cases. As counter-example, to show the necessity of the restriction imposed in the rule, is quoted adhā me 'ti tad vishnave 'ti prāyachot (ii.4.12⁴: W. B. omit prāyachot), where adhā stands for adhāḥ: see, for the bearing of the exception, the note upon the introductory rule of the chapter.

As counter-example, to show the necessity of restricting the change to yājyā passages, is quoted esha vo bharatā rājā (i.8.10², 12²), where bharatā stands for bharatāḥ. If the text contained a bharatā as instrumental of the participle bharant, it would come more properly under the action of the rule, and would have a better right to be specifically excluded; but I have not found such a form anywhere. Respecting bharatā as standing in saṁhītā for bharatāḥ, see what is said in the note to the first rule of this chapter.

15. Also ân, when unaccented, and preceded by vi or ut, in a word containing no spirant.

This rule applies simply to the compounds vyâna and udâna, in which the long â of the radical syllable is treated by the pada-text as the effect of an irregular prolongation. The words are instanced by the commentator in their full pada-form, vyânâye 'ti vi-anâya (iii.5.8 et al.), and udânâye 'ty ut-anâya (iv.2.9¹ et al.). In the same manner, prânâya and apânâya are divided into pra-anâya and apa-anâya. As regards the treatment of this group of compounds, the different pada-texts are somewhat inconsistent and somewhat conflicting. The Atharvan pada (see Ath. Pr. iv.39) divides vi-âna and sam-âna, without correction of the radical â, but leaves prâna and apâna undivided. The Rik pada does not divide prâna: I do not know that any of the others are Rik words. The White Yajus, again (Vāj. Pr. v.33.36), divides apa-âna and sam-âna, but not prâna. The consistency of the Tāittiriya çâkhya is to be commended; less, perhaps, their assumption that the â of âna is a mere Vedic irregularity, requiring restoration to a correcter form. They also, it may be remarked, divide prâna (iv.1.4¹) into pra-anâtha.

The commentator goes on to cite counter-examples, proving the necessity of the restrictions imposed by the rule. To show that ân is to be shortened only after vi and ut, he gives yad ânçvas tene 'yam (vii.3.1³: W. B. O. omit the last word), and paryâñvâ hirvanîyasya (vii.1.6⁶). To show that only ân, not â followed by any other consonant, is shortened, he quotes yad rukmatî vyâghârayati (v.2.7⁵), and udâdîya pṛthivîm jîvâtîm (i.1.9³: G. M. omit the last word). To show that the ân must not be accented, he gives vigvâkarmâ vyânat (iv.2.10⁴), and nêstah pâtnâm udînaya (vi.5.8⁶). Finally, to show that the presence of a spirant in the word prevents the correction, we have pathâ madhor dhîrâ vyânaguh (v.7.7³: all but W. omit the first word), and udânîshor mahîr itî (v.6.1³).

The question is now in point, how complete is this rehearsal of the cases of prolonged vowels occurring in the Samhitâ; or, how closely does the pada-text which it assumes correspond with that found in the existing pada-manuscripts? As regards the latter point, I am unable to speak with certainty, of course, without the possession of a pada-manuscript, and its careful examination throughout; but so much as this I can say—that, having referred a liberal selection of the most questionable cases to Dr. Haug at Munich, for verification in his pada-texts, no instance of a discordance between these and the Prātiçākhyā has come to light. Among the cases referred were several in regard to which I was beforehand very confident that I had caught the authors of the Prātiçākhyā in fault. Thus yojā, in the refrain yojā nṛ indra te hari (i.8.5^{1,2}) which is shortened to yoju in the pada-texts both of the Rik (by Rik Pr. vii.7) and the White Yajus (by Vāj. Pr. iii.106), remains yojā in that of our Sanhitā. Again, eva occurs six times in our text with its final lengthened (viz. at i.8.22²; ii.1.11³; iv.2.9²; 3.13³; 7.15⁷; v.2.8³), as it does also not infrequently in the other Vedic texts (as noticed and provided for in their Prātiçākhyas: see Rik Pr. vii.12,19; viii.20: Vāj. Pr. iii.123: Ath. Pr. iii.16, note, l.1.c.): but the Tāittirīya pada reads in each case evā. Once more, in the passage tava dhurmā yuyopima (Rig-Veda vii.89.5; Ath. Veda vi.51.3; Tāitt. Sanh. iii.4.11⁶), the pada-texts of the Rik and Atharvan read dharma (I do not find that the case is noted in the Rik Pr.; in the Ath. Pr. it would fall under the comprehensive rule iii.16), while that of our Sanhitā has dharmā, like the saṁhitā-reading.

I will add, as received from the same quarter, a few words respecting which a question might naturally arise as to how they were treated in the pada-text. Separated, without corréption of the long vowel at the end of their first member, are uttarā-vat (v.4.8⁵), suhasā-van (i.6.12⁶), malmalā-bharant (i.4.34), vṛshā-kapi (i.7.13²), such copulative compounds as indrā-varuṇayoh (ii.5.12²) and agnā-vishnū (i.1.12), and ūrṇā-mradas (i.1.11¹): while, nevertheless, we have ūrṇa-mradas at i.2.2², the pada-reading agreeing in both cases with that of the saṁhitā: where the Calcutta edition gets its authority for reading ūrṇāmmradas and ūrṇāmmradas is more than I can imagine).

Not separated, and therefore, of course, without correction of the vowel, are such words as rtāshāt (iii.4.7¹) and turāshāt (i.7.13⁴), also tvashṭimant (i.2.5²), anyādṛṣ (i.8.13²), ubhayādūt (ii.2.6³), arātīyant (i.6.1¹) and arātīcan (vii.4.15), atikāṣa (i.2.2²) and prākāṣa (i.8.18), avāgrūga (ii.1.8⁵) and prāgrūga (ii.1.3¹: I doubt not: my information is deficient for this word), upānah (v.4.4⁴), nīvāra (iv.7.4²) and nīhāra (iv.6.2²), and purāravaḥ (i.3.7¹).

There is not, as in the other Vedic texts, any restoration of a theoretically correct short vowel which is not strictly a final or initial: thus we read in pada-text, for example, vāvṛdhe (i.4.20), sāsa-hat (i.3.14⁷), and ushāsam (iv.4.4²).

Many of these items constitute striking peculiarities of the Tāittiriya pada, and its careful study and comparison with the other works of its class would undoubtedly bring to light much that is curious.

CHAPTER IV.

CONTENTS: 1-4, introductory; 5-54, rehearsal of cases of pragrahas, or uncombinable final vowels.

अथ प्रग्रहः ॥ १ ॥

1. Now the pragrahas.

A simple heading to the chapter, and explained as such by the commentator. The same subject is treated by the other Prātiṣākhyas, at Rik Pr. i.18-19, Vāj. Pr. i.92-98, Ath. Pr. i.73-82. It occupies here a great deal more space, because the Tāitt. Pr. avoids on principle the mention of grammatical categories in its rules, and is at infinite pains to catalogue, word by word, what the other treatises dispose of summarily, by classes. A rule in a later chapter (x.24) teaches that all the vowels here rehearsed and defined as pragraha are exempt from euphonic combination. The term pragraha is peculiar to this treatise, the rest using instead pragrhya.

नावग्रहः ॥ २ ॥

2. No former member of a compound is pragraha.

As the former member of a separable compound (aragraha: i.49) is regarded and treated as an independent pada, the rules declaring certain final vowels pragraha would apply to the finals of such members, but for this prescription to the contrary. The commentator cites rules 5, 6, 36, 37, 49 of the chapter as needing the restriction of their application here made, and quotes from the Sanhitā in illustration tanūnapād asuraḥ (iv.1.8¹: the tanū of tanū-napāt would otherwise be pragraha by rule 5), agoargham yajamānam (vi.1.10¹: ago-argham would fall else under rule 6), agnīshomāu mā (ii.5.2²: it is implied that the pada-text would write agnī-somāu, bringing the word within the sphere of rule 36; such compounds are not divisible in the other Vedic texts), and dvedve puronuvākye kuryāt (ii.2.9²: the pada writes dve-dve, so that both members would be declared alike pragraha by rule 49). The present precept is therefore declared to be one making exceptions in advance to the rules specified.

3. Only a final is pragraha.

Or, as the commentator paraphrases, the end of a word is entitled to the designation pragraha. He cites, as example, the phrase devate samrddhyāi (ii.1.9³). The necessity of the rule, he explains, arises out of the fact that the following rules, in part—for example, rules 5, 6, 33—describe certain letters or syllables as pragraha without farther limitation, and it is desirable to specify that they bear that character only when final. This in answer to the criticizing inquiry “whether a letter not final can also be pragraha?”—that is, as I understand it, whether this predicate is not in the nature of things restricted to finals? But now a yet more troublesome objection is raised. The limitation to finals, urges the interpellator, is otherwise assured; for the word api of the next rule, in the sequel of this one, brings into action the principle “continued implication is of that which is last” (i.58). The objection is wholly futile and inept, both as implying that false interpretation of the rule appealed to to which attention was directed in the note upon it, and as attributing to api a mysterious force to which it can lay no claim whatever. Instead, however, of showing the objector to the door, the commentator proceeds elaborately to confute him. "We reply, not so: specification of finality is appropriate where there is a congeries of several letters; here, on the other hand, there is indication of a single letter. If the matter in question were the euphonic alteration or elision of ṛ and the other letters treated of, a final would be designated in virtue of the principle quoted: but here it is a simple case of application of the term pragraha, not of an affected nor an affecting letter: hence continued implication has no force."

4. It is followed by iti.

This is the interpretation of the commentator, who declares that the "also" (api) brings in by implication, from the first rule of the preceding chapter, the specification vibhāge, 'in case of separation,' or in the pada and other artificially divided texts. As example, he cites ubhe iti (i.4.22 et al.: G. M. add devate iti, ii.1.9³ et al.).

If such be its real meaning, the rule is a very anomalous one, as giving a single direct prescription respecting the mode of construction of the secondary texts. These are elsewhere only referred to or implied, in a more indirect manner. I should therefore prefer to translate 'even when followed by iti'—that is to say, a word here defined as pragraha in the ordinary text has that character also in the other texts before iti, not being combined with the latter.

The commentator adds the limitation "if long in pada-text," the final ū is universally pragraha; referring, in justification, to the cases treated of above, in rule iii.14, of an u irregularly lengthened in sāmhita. His examples are hanū vā ete yajñasya (vi.2.11³: W. B. O. omit the last word), vāsantikāv rtū cakraç ca (iv.4.11¹: W. B. O. omit after rtū), and harinasya bāhū upastutām janima tat te arvan (iv.2.8¹: G. M. omit the last four words; the others, the first word).

6. Also an o which is not the product of euphonic combination, if followed by a or a consonant.

Of words exhibiting in pada-text, as well as in sāmhita, a final o, there are (apart from the theme go, which occurs only as first member of a compound, and therefore, by rule 2 of this chapter, does not require to be regarded in the determination of pragrahas) two classes, the one composed of vocatives from themes in u, the other of words whose final a or ā is combined with the particle u. The present rule deals, in general, with the former class; the one next following, with the latter class. The right of the vocatives in o to be treated as pragrahas is a very dubious one, and is not unequivocally supported by the Prātiçākhyā; for to say that such words are pragraha before a or a consonant is not to distinguish them perceptibly from the euphonic o which comes from a final as; since this also is not capable of combination with a consonant, and does not necessarily absorb a following initial a. The only instances in which a vocative in o exhibits a pragraha character are the three which are cited under the next rule (i.4.27: v.7.2⁴: vi.5.8³); the cases in which it is regularly changed to av before other vowels than a are much more numerous: namely, before ā, at i.4.39: ii.2.12⁴; 6.11¹: vi.4.3³; before i, at ii.2.12⁸; before u, at i.2.13² twice; 6.12³: iii.2.10¹; before e, at ii.4.12³. I have noted but two cases in the text where such an o stands before initial a without absorbing it; they are found at i.3.8¹, 14⁷. And there are the same number of cases—namely, at ii.5.12⁵ and vi.4.3⁴—in which it causes the elision of a following a.

The commentator's citations in illustration of the rule are vad-mā hi sūno asi (i.3.14⁷), and vishno havyañ rakshasva (i.1.3). To show the necessity of the limitation asāmhitāḥ, he cites so 'bravīt (ii.1.2¹ et al.), and pra so agne (iii.2.11¹: omitted, however, by W. B. O.), where so is the sāmhitā reading for sah; and, to show that the prescribed quality belongs to the vowel only before a or a consonant (the lacuna of W. B. O. extends through this explanation), he gives us vishnav e 'hī 'dam (ii.4.12³).

For the teachings of the other Prāṭiçākhyas respecting this class of asserted pragrahas, see the note to Ath. Pr. i.81.

7. As also, when preceded by s, m, h, d, th, and pit.

The anuvṛtti of this rule is even more blind and equivocal than usual. Instead of bringing down either the subject or predicate of the one preceding, we are to bring down both, only with the exclusion of one of the modifications included in the former. The meaning is, that an original o, preceded as here specified, is pragraha even when followed by other vowels than a. The commentator is in error in saying that ca implies okārah from above; he should have said okaro 'sāmhitāḥ.

As above remarked, this rule chiefly concerns the class of pragrahas composed of words whose final vowel, a or ā, is combined with the particle u. Of these, atho is vastly the most numerous, occurring about two hundred and fifty times in the Sanhita. Before a it is met with twenty times, always without occasioning elision; before other vowels, twenty-nine times, always uncombined. Along with it, tatho is had in view by the rule, as presenting a final o after th: it is found but once, in the passage cited by the commentator (see below). The only word showing o after s is so, found only in two passages, as noted below. After m, we have o both in mo (in two passages, once before sh, at i.8.3; the other is cited by the commentator) and in imo, which latter is found only before a (iv.3.13⁶), and so does not necessarily come within the purview of the rule. The other words of the class occur before consonants alone, and are, therefore, here made no account of: they are o (once, i.4.33), to

Of the remaining specifications of the rule, the h is made for but a single case of the exclamation ho, which the commentator quotes: upahātāñ ho ity āhu (ii.6.7³); the d is for the vocative indo, which occurs twice: indo indriyāvatatḥ (i.4.27), and indo ity āha (vi.5.8³): the commentator quotes the latter passage; the pī is for the vocative pīto, only found once, as cited: sa no mayobhāḥ pīto ā viṣasva (v.7.24⁵: W. B. O. omit the first three words). These three, as was noted under the preceding rule, are the only instances which the Sanhitā affords of vocatives in o showing an uncombinable quality.

The commentator's explanation of the rule is "the o is here specially distinguished in order to the prescription of its quality even in the case of absence of the sequent determining circumstances before stated." As examples of words whose ending is combined with u, after the consonants specified, he gives so evāi 'shāi 'tasya (ii.2.9⁷; 5.5⁵), mā bher māro mo eshām (iv.5.10¹), and tatho eva 'ttare nir vapet (iii.4.9⁷: W. B. O. omit after uttare). His counter-examples are gatakrataḥ ud vañcam iva (i.6.12³: G. M. omit iva), and pra so agne (iii.2.11¹): but G. M., which have given the latter passage under the preceding rule, here substitute for it mā so asmāñ avuhāya (v.7.9¹); their separate application is manifest.

The treatment by the Prātiçākhyā of words ending in o is awkward and bungling to a degree quite rare or wholly unknown elsewhere in its rules. We should be justified in inferring from its statements that o, to, uto, upo, and pro were not regarded as pragrahas at all, nor the vocatives in o except under the conditions and in the places specified, and that (if the commentator's explanation of rule 4 is accepted) they are not written with iti in the pada-text: while, doubtless, in every pada-text of the Black Yajus, as in those of the other Vedas, each word is treated uniformly, whether it happen to exhibit its uncombinable quality in saṁhitā or not. Through the rest of the chapter, it will be noticed, the words mentioned are defined as pragrahas, without regard to the circumstances in which they may stand in the text.

8. Now follow cases of e and i.

This is a heading for the remainder of the chapter, excluding all other vowels than final e and i from the action of its rules. The words exhibiting such finals are, of course, mainly duals, and are by the other treatises simply defined as such, with immense saving of trouble.

9. Asme is pragraha.

The example cited by the commentator is, according to W. B. O., asme te bandhuh (i.2.7); according to G. M., sampatte gor asme candrāṇi (also i.2.7). Neither exhibits in saṁhitā the pragraha quality of the word, as is done at i.7.13⁵ and elsewhere: asme is not uncommon in the Sanhitā, occurring twenty-nine times.

वे इत्यनिग्यान्तः ॥ १० ॥

10. Also tve, when not the final member of a separable compound.

The office of the word iti in this rule is differently explained by the two versions of the commentary: W. B. O. say that it indicates the quality of a separable cited word (they mean, doubtless, of an inseparable); G. M., that it indicates pragraha quality. Each interpretation is as good, and as worthless, as the other. The commentary is not infrequently at much pains to put some special, even wonderful, significance into iti when found in a rule; and generally with as little acceptable result as here.

The pronoun tve occurs seven times in the Sanhitā (at i.3.14²; 4.46¹; iii.1.11⁷; 5.10¹; iv.2.7³; 6.5⁴; vi.1.8⁵), exhibiting its pragraha-quality in saṁhitā only once (at iv.2.7³). The commentator's instance is tve kratum api (iii.5.10¹; G. M. omit api); and his counter-instance, to show the necessity of the restriction imposed in the rule, is anāgāstve adititve turāsuḥ (ii.1.11⁶; G. M. omit turāsuḥ), where the padu-text reads anāgāh-tve : aditi-tve.

For the pragrahas catalogued in this rule—all of them dual cases of feminines and neuters—the commentator quotes illustrative passages as follows. For devate, devate samṛddhyāi mātram (ii.1.9³: the last word in G. M. only). For ubhe, G. M. have achidre bahule ubhe: vyacasvati sañvasāthām (iv.1.3²); but W. B. O., blunderingly, ime eva rasenā 'nakti (vi.3.11³: B. O. have ubhe for ime): the word occurs also in other passages. For bhāgadhe, bhāgadhe bhāgadhā asmāi (ii.5.6⁶): also in the preceding division of the same anuvāka, and at v.5.9². As counter-example, to show that dhe (itself a pada, bhāga-dhe) would not have answered the purpose none, we have agna udadhe (v.5.9¹: pudutext, uda-dhe). For ūrdhve, ūrdhve samidhār ā dadhāti (ii.6.6³ and vi.2.1⁶). For viçākhe, viçākhe nakshatram (iv.4.10²): and as counter-example, to show the necessity of including the vi (of viçākhe), we have tasmint sahasraçākhe, stated to be found “in the text of another school.” About a score of such alleged citations from “another text,” assumed to have been had in view by the authors of the Prātiçākhyā in constructing their rules, are given in various parts of the commentary (five of them in the comment upon this rule): they will be put together, and their bearing discussed, in an additional note at the end of the work. For çrūge, antarā çrūge tañ devatāḥ (vi.2.8⁴: only G. M. have devatāḥ): the word also occurs at i.2.14⁷. The next two words, ene and medhye, occur in the same passage, medhye evāi 'ne kuroti (vi.2.9¹), which the comment quotes, in W. O. giving medhye last, after the rest, by way of justifying the order in which the two words stand in the rule: but B. G. M. read the whole passage as it stands in the text, and G. M. make the rule read correspondingly medhye ene (T. has, like the others, ene medhye). Ene is also found in one or

For evo'ttare, tatho eva'ttare nirvape (iii.4.9⁷): and, to show why eva had to be included in the rule, nāi'ti shodūçy uttare tenu (vii.1.4³: only G. M. have tenu). For çipre, pātvā çipre acepayah (i.4.30: W. B. O. begin with çipre). For rathanture, yad br̥hadrathanture anvarjeyuh (vii.5.3²: only G. M. have yad): the same compound occurs in several places elsewhere. For vatsarasya rāpe, saṁvatsarasya rāpe āpnuranti (vii.5.1⁴). For virāpe, samanasā virāpe dhāpayete (iv.1.10⁴; 6.5²; 7.12³). For vishurāpe, vishurāpe ahanī dyāvurivā'si (iv.1.11³: W. B. O. stop with ahanī). The necessity of including in the rule, besides the padu rāpe, the words vatsarasya, vishu (of vishu-rāpe), and vi (of vi-rāpe) is proved by the citation of arākshitam dṛçā ā rāpe annam (iv.3.13²), where rāpe is locative: and the commentary adds the remark (wanting, however, in the South-Indian MSS.), "the separate specification of the word rāpa is to be looked upon as for the sake of distinct enunciation." For sadohavir̥dhāne, sadohavir̥dhāne eva sam minoti (ii.5.5⁵): the compound occurs twice more, at vi.2.6²; 5.1⁵. To justify the inclusion of sadaḥ, the commentator quotes uparavā havir̥dhāne khāyante (vi.2.11¹); but the case appears to him one not to be so easily disposed of, and he enters into an elaborate discussion of it, which I defer to the end of this note, in order not to interrupt the connection. For adhishavane, hanū adhishavane jhrā (vi.2.11⁴): it is also found in the preceding division of the same section, and at iv.7.8¹. The adhi is justified by reference to savanesavane bhī gr̥hnāti (vi.4.11⁴; 6.11³). For ahorātre, ahorātre prā'vigan (i.5.9⁷): the word occurs not infrequently elsewhere. The passage atirātre paçukāmasya (vi.6.11⁴) is given to account for the inclusion of ahah; this implies, of course, that the Tāittirīya padu-text treats the word as a separable compound, ahah-rātre. For dh̥rtavrate, dyāvāpr̥thivī dh̥rtavrate āvinuā devī (i.8.12²: G. M. omit the last word); and, to account for the inclusion of dhrta, yasya vrate pushtipatih (iii.1.11³). For stutaçastre, stutaçastre evāi'tena duhe (v.6.8⁶: G. M. omit the last word): it occurs again at vii.3.13. This time, resort is had to "another text" (gākhāntaram) for a passage to explain why the rule does not say simply çastre: it is ūrdhve çastre pratishthite. For ṛksāme, ṛksāme vāi devebhyaḥ (vi.1.3¹): the word is found twice in this division, and also at vi.5.9²; 6.7⁴. Here, again, a passage in "another text," brahma sāme pratishthite (G. M. omit the last word, and B. O. omit the sā of sāme), is appealed to in justification of the ṛk. For akte, purāravā ghrtenā'kte vrshanam dadhāthām (i.3.7¹ and [except purāravāḥ] vi.3.5³: W. B. O. omit the first word, B. also the last). For arpite, dyāvāprthivī bhuvaneshv arpite (iv.7.13²: only G. M. have the first word). For rāivate, gākcararāivate sāmāni (i.8.13² and iv.4.2³): the same compound is found again at iv.3.2³. For pārte, the different recensions give different examples: W. B. O. have ishtāpārte sañ srjethām (iv.7.13⁵); G. M., ishtāpārte kṛnutāt (v.7.7²): I have noted no other cases: for the treatment of the word in the pada-text see the note to iii. 6. For pratte, pratte kāmam annādyam duhāte (v.4.9³: G. M. omit the last word). For vidhrte, again, W. B. O. have vidhrte sarvataḥ (vi.4.10³), and G. M. tasmān nāsikayā cakshuṣi vidhrte samānī (ii.3.8²), and the vi is justified by an alleged citation from "another text," agnī-dhrte (G. M., however, omitting the agni, thus leaving it to be understood that the simple word dhrte is found elsewhere not pragraha). For anrte, satyānrte avapaçyan (v.6.1¹). For achidre, achidre bahule ubhe (iv.1.3²: only G. M. have ubhe), which answers also for bahule: it is the only passage containing either word. For pūrvaje, pūrvaje pitarā navyasibhiḥ (iv.1.11⁴: W. B. O. omit the last word): another passage beginning with the same word is the subject of rule 23 of this chapter. Once more a word, prathamaje, is cited from "another text," in order to explain why the rule does not say simply je (since the pada-text writes pūrva-je). For kṛnudhvañ sadane, finally, we have the sole passage in which it occurs, gīrbhiḥ kṛnudhvañ sudane ṛtasya (iv.1.11⁴: G. M. omit ṛtasya), with the counter-example upān tvā sudane sādāyāmi (iv.3.1: G. M. omit the last word), to show the necessity of kṛnudhvam.

To return, now, to the long word sadohavirdhāne. The objection is raised, that its part saduh is unnecessary, and that it would have been sufficient to say havirdhāne simply; for rule i.50 teaches us that, in citations of padas, the cited pada alone is to be understood, not any collocation of words or letters phonetically equivalent with it: and havirdhāne is here a single pada (the compound being divided sadah-havirdhāne, while its latter member, occurring by itself as a non-pragraha, is written haviḥ-dhāne, and so is a congeries of two padas). It is replied: not so; a distinctive addition is properly made to a cited pada, in case of its occurrence in a different form in another passage; though the objection would hold good, were it not for such occurrence in a different form. But this explanation is not suffered to pass without challenge. In that case, retorts the objector, a distinction ought to be added to devate, because it occurs elsewhere in a different form (made up of two independent words), as in soma deva te matividah (iii.2.5^{2,3}); and no such addition is made. The answer is, that no distinction need here be applied to devate, because its treatment is defined as of an undivided word: and, if you ask how its indivisibility is established, we reply that rule 42, below, treats of te as a separate pada in the various situations in which it is pragraha [whence the inference is clear that it is here an inseparable part of the word devate]; while there is nothing whatever to show in like manner the indivisibility of havirdhāne, and so to prove the addition of sudah superfluous. The implication is, that if the pada dhāne happened to be described elsewhere as pragraha after certain other padas, of which haviḥ was not one, then we could be sure that havirdhāne here meant a single undivided pada, and its mention by itself would be enough; while, as things are, one cannot be certain that its part haviḥ is not, like the vī and vishu of virūpe and vishurūpe, a distinctive addition.

The illustrative passages cited under this rule are as follows. For amī, according to W. B. O., amī vā idam abhāvam (iii.3.7¹); but according to G. M., amī tvā jhātī (iii.2.11²): I have noted elsewhere only vi.1.5⁴. For cakshushī, cakshushī vā ete yajñasya (ii.6.2¹ et al.: G. M. omit yajñasya): the word occurs about a dozen times. For kārshnī, kārshnī upānahāv upa muñcate (v.4.4⁴; 6.6¹: G. M. omit the last two words). For phalgunī, pitaro devatā phalgunī nukshatram (iv.4.10¹): again in the next division of the same section. To show the necessity of including devatā in the rule, is given yad dvitīyaṁ sā phalgunī (ii.1.2²). For mushtī, mushtī kuroti vācam (v.2.1⁷ and vi.1.4³: G. M. omit vācam). For dhī, pradhī tāv ukthyā madhye (vii.4.11²: G. M. omit madhye). For nābhī, rajatanābhī vāigraḍevāu (v.5.24). For vapācraṇānī, vapācraṇānī pra harati (vi.3.9⁶): it occurs also in the fourth division of the same section. As counter-example, to explain the presence of rapā in the rule, is given, "from another text," the compound paçucraṇānī (or, as G. M. read, bhasma-craṇānī): our Sanhitā has paçucraṇānam at iii.1.3². For ahanī, ahanī dyāuṣ īvā 'si (iv.1.11³). For janmānī, ubhe nī pāsi janmānī (i.4.22). For sumnīnī, sumnāya sumnīnī (i.1.13³). For sāmanī, sāmanī pratisthityāi (iv.4.2³): also at i.8.13². For vāishnavī, valagahunāu vāishnavī brhann asi (i.3.2²: only G. For dyāvāprthivī, dyāvāprthivī eva srena (ii.1.4⁷): the word is frequently found elsewhere. The commentator gives us here also a counter-example, mahī dyāuḥ prthivī ca naḥ (iii.3.10² et al.: G. M. omit ca naḥ), as if the inclusion of dyāvā required justification: but, in ordinary Vedic usage (I have omitted to inform myself in season respecting that of the Tāittirīya padu-text), dyāvāprthivī is inseparable, and therefore itself a single pada.

The case intended to be excluded is quoted by the commentator: paśūn evā 'ra rundhe dyāvāprthivī gacha svāhā (vi.4.1³: W. B. O. omit the first three words and the last). The specification nityam, 'constantly, in all cases,' is intended to exclude also the operation of any other rule under which rundhe might chance to fall: for example, in rundhe yadā sahasram (ii.1.5²), where, as preceding yadā, it would otherwise be pragraha by rule 38 of this chapter. I have noted no other case.

15. Also harī, sahurī, sahūti, kalpayanti, ā prshatī, and āhutī are pragraha.

The cited examples are as follows. For harī, harī te yuñjā prshatī abhātām (iv.6.9⁴: G. M. omit the last two words): it occurs in toward a dozen other passages. For sahurī, sahurī suparyāt (iv.2.11¹); and the counter-example, to show the necessity of the sa, tam āhurī hr̥yante (but O. reads tām, B. hr̥yate, and G. M. ahurī vācayati), claimed to be found "in another text." This would imply, of course, that the pada-text reads sa-hurī—as is in fact the case. For sahūti, sahūti vanatām girāḥ (ii.3.14¹); and, as counter-example, for the same purpose as the last, hūti punar juhōti (but G. M. read manur for punar), also from "another text." For kalpayanti, adhvaram kalpayanti ūrdhvam yajñam (i.2.13²: G. M. omit the first word, and W. B. O. the last): another case is found at vi.2.9³. For ā prshatī, the passage already quoted for harī, yuñjā prshatī abhātām (iv.6.9⁴); and, to justify the ā, the counter-example prshatī sthūlaprshatī (v.6.12). For āhutī, purodācam ete āhutī juhōti (i.5.2³⁻⁴: G. M. omit the first two words, W. B. O. the last): nearly the same phrase occurs again at

The commentator cites only the beginning of each verse, as a word with pragraha final occurs at or near the beginning in every case. Thus: ye aprathetām amitebhiḥ (iv.7.15⁶: there are three other cases of pragrahas in the verse): with the counter-example ye te panthānaḥ (vii.5.24), to show that ye alone would not have defined the verse; urvī rodasī varivah (iv.7.15⁶: G. M. omit the last word: three cases, besides rodasī, already disposed of by rule 17); te asya yoshane (iv.1.8²: one more case: the te is therefore made no account of in rule 42, below): with the counter-example te 'vardhanta svatavaso mahitvānā (iv.1.11³), to show the necessity of asya; yam krandasī avasā (iv.1.8⁵: contains two other cases): and, as counter-example, for a like purpose, yam agne prtsu martyam (i.3.13²); chandasvatī ushasā (iv.3.11¹: it contains seven cases); te ācaranti (iv.6.6²: also seven cases): with te no aravanto havanagrutah (i.7.8²) as counter-example, to prove that te alone would not be enough; and, finally, antarā mitrāvaruṇā curanti (v.1.11²: with four cases).

B. O. give only the last two words). To show that sthe would not have sufficiently defined the exception (upa-sthe), the commentator quotes ye pratishthe (prati-sthe) abhavatām (from the verse beginning with urvī, iv.7.15⁶).

23. And in the passage beginning with pūrvaje and ending with ayam.

Of this passage, found at ii.6.7⁵, the commentator quotes the first four words. In order to the better understanding of the following discussion, I set it down here in full, along with the word that precedes it: hṛvate pūrvaje rāvarī ity āha pūrvaje hy ete rāvarī devī devaputre ity āha devī hy ete devaputre upahūto 'yam. It contains ten pragraha endings, of which, however, two (pūrvaje) fall under rule 11, above. The word ā, 'as far as,' in the rule, is declared here to exclude the two limiting words mentioned (compare Pāṇini ii.1.13)—an arbitrary restriction, directly opposed by the analogy of the preceding rule; intended, doubtless, to relieve the treatise of the reproach of declaring the word pārvaje a pragraha by two separate rules; but this is a small gain, since the same word occurs a second time in the passage, and cannot there be reached by any such device.

A protracted, not to say tedious, discussion now arises, respecting the sufficiency and propriety of the rule as stated. The first objection is: how do we know that the passage had in view by the rule is not that which begins with pārvaje pītārā (iv.1.11⁴) and ends with ayam purobhuvāḥ (iv.3.2¹: B. O. omit bhuvāḥ). Because, it is answered, the special citation (in rule 11) of kṛṇudhvañ sadane (iv.1.11⁴), which occurs within the limits mentioned, would in that case be rendered superfluous. Objection second: the word pārvaje, at any rate, is useless, it having been already made pragraha by rule 11; the rule should read “beginning with vari” (the concluding pada of the separable compound ṛtu-vari). This, too, is repelled: the rule reads as it stands because vari occurs twice in the passage, and the question would arise where the defined limit should be understood to be: moreover, as we are taught (i.25) in case of doubt to take the nearest, we should have to assume as intended the latter of the two, as being nearer to the other specified limit: in which case we should arrive at the untoward result that the pragraha character of the first vari would not be established at all. But now the objector triumphantly retorts, that there are also two instances of pārvaje, and a like doubt as in the supposition last made would arise as to the identity of the one cited, and a like untoward result as was pointed out in connection therewith. Not so, is the defense: pārvaje is not designated by the rule as a word possessing the defined quality—which would indeed be a superfluous repetition (in view of rule 11); but it means ‘the former je of the two,’ and is given merely as a convenient limit to count forward from! Again: why, at the end of the passage, is ayam pitched upon as limit, to the neglect of upahātah; for, though this word is found several times in the immediate sequel, yet, in virtue of the principle already appealed to, “in case of doubt, take the nearest” (i.25), its first occurrence would be distinctly enough the one intended. This also is disallowed: to quote the whole compound word upahātah (padu-text, upa-hātuh) would be to incur the charge of excess; and as for upa by itself, the first member of the compound, though it be a pada, its pada quality is of secondary rank, while that of ayam is primary [the latter being a complete word, but the former only a somewhat artificially separated portion of such]; hence, on the principle “where there is a primary, a secondary is not in place,” it was proper to cite ayam. The answer, however, suggests the further objection that, on the same principle, the first limit is unsuitable [je being also a fragment of a word; and its predecessor hrayate should have been taken instead]. That cannot be made good, is the reply; for there is a want of suitability in the primary word suggested: if you take the primary hrayate, then, on the supposition that the definition of limits is to be understood inclusively [ā being susceptible of both an inclusive and an exclusive interpretation], this word [as it ends in e] will appear to be cited as a pragraha: which is wrong. And if you urge that rule 54 of the chapter annuls this false inference, we reply that, on the principle “not to touch filth is far better than to wash it off,” it is better not to quote kvayate at all than to quote it and then make it the subject of an exception. The case, then, is one where no suitable primary word is to be found; and not the slightest charge of impropriety can be maintained against the rule as given.

Both parties to this controversy are about equally open to the charge of hair-splitting absurdity; but the objector must be acknowledged to have the right of it so far as this—that the rule is really ambiguous, considering the presence of the two words pūrvaje. That pūrvaje, as used in it, means ‘the former je,’ I do not at all believe.

That is to say, ime in the sections specified is always pragraha, even when otherwise followed than by the words mentioned in the preceding rule. The commentator quotes the beginning words of each section, and a single example from each: thus, from the section krūram iva vāi (v.1.5: only G. M. have the last two words), rodasyor ity āhe ’me vāi rodasī (v.1.5⁴: the only case in the sec-na hī 'me yajushā 'ptum arhati (v.2.7⁴: the only case: B. O. omit need of including in the rule the syllable after brahma: there is another section beginning brahmavādino vadanty adbhīḥ (ii.6.5:

B. O. omit adbhīḥ), which contains an ime not pragraha: traya ime lokāḥ (ii.6.5³: only G. M. have trayaḥ).

पूर्णे च ॥ २६ ॥

26. As also pūrṇe.

The ca, 'and,' in this rule merely brings down the heading of the last anuvāka named in the one preceding. In that anuvāka, pūrṇe is pragraha: to wit, in pūrṇe upa dadhāti pūrṇe evāi 'nam (v.2.7⁴); but not elsewhere, as for example in yo vāi pūrṇa āsiñcati (vii.5.6¹).

दृढे ॥ २७ ॥

27. Also dr̥dhe is pragraha.

The restrictions imposed in previous rules no longer hold good:
dr̥dhe is pragraha wherever met with. The example given is yena dyāur ugrā pṛthivī ca dr̥dhe (iv.1.8⁵). There is another case at iii.2.4³.

The examples are: vārtraghnī pārramāse (ii.5.2⁵); cakre prsh-thāni (vi.6.8¹): I have noted no other cases. We have then two pairs of counter-examples, to show that these words are pragraha before p only, and only these words before p: the first pair are yad virūpayā vārtraghnī syāt (vi.1.6⁷) and samidhāna cakre nīcā tam (i.2.14²: only W. has tam); the second, çakā bhāumī pān-traḥ (v.5.18) and yeshām içe paçupatiḥ (iii.1.4¹⁻²).

29. Also nvatī.

Two examples are cited: omanvatī te 'smīn (ii.6.9⁵: G. M. omit the last two words), and vr̥dhanvatī amāvāsyaśyām (ii.5.2⁵): also a counter-example, proving that vatī alone would not have been sufficient: kuṇṇakāvaty etayā (v.4.7³).

The case here excepted—the only one, so far as I have noticed—is mārdhanvatī puronuvākyā bhavati (ii.6.2²: G. M. omit the last word).

31. Samīcī is pragraha.

For this word, G. M. cite samīcī retah siñcataḥ (v.5.4²); B. O. cite paçcāt samīcī tābhīḥ (v.2.3⁵); W. gives both passages. The word is met with a dozen times or more in the Sanhitā.

ची यत्प्रपरः ॥ ३३ ॥

33. Cī is pragraha, when followed by yat or pra.

The passages had in view by this rule are: āikshavī tiraçcī yad āçravālūh (vi.2.1⁵: W. O. omit the first word, G. M. B. the last; and B. has the citation out of place, after the next but one), and prācī pretam adhvaram (i.2.13² and vi.2.9³); besides two other cases before pra at vi.2.1⁵; 3.9⁶. The commentator gives in addition a number of counter-examples: to show that cī is not always pragraha, prācī diçām (iv.3.3¹ et al.: but W. B. O. read instead yā prācī dik, which is not to be found in the Sanhitā: prācī dik, without yā, occurs at several places, e. g. iv.3.6²); to prove the necessity of the t of yat and the r of pra, gāur ghṛtācī yajño devān jīgāti (ii.5.7⁴: only G. M. have the last two words) and tas-māt paçcāt prācī patny anv āste (v.3.7³: only G. M. have the first two words); to indicate that other endings than cī are not pragraha in the situations specified, yad agnir vajra ekādaçinī yad agnāu (v.5.7¹: only G. M. have the first three words) and prajanane prajananañ hi vāi (i.5.9¹: only G. M. have the last two words).

34. Also ān mahī.

The passage is mahān mahī astabhāyat (ii.3.14⁶). Elsewhere, mahī is not pragraha: e. g. in mahī dyāuḥ pṛthivī ca naḥ (iii.3.10² et al.: G. M. omit the last two words); and even after n preceded by any other vowel than ā: e. g. in vayunāvid eka in mahī devasya (i.2.13¹ and iv.1.1¹⁻²: G. M. omit the last word).

35. Also the combination of sounds patī.

The commentator explains: wherever there is gruti, i. e. 'hearing,' of patī, there we are to understand a case of pragraha-quality. Hitherto we have been dealing only with padas, or complete individual words; but the i of patī is uncombinable, even when that audible combination is only a part of a pada. The selected examples are, first, dvāu patī vindute (vi.6.4³) and gubhas patī idam aham (iii.2.10²: only G. M. have the last word), where patī is a pada; then yam āgirā dampatī vānam agnutaḥ (iii.2.8⁴: only G. M. have the first two words) and priyam indrābrhaspatī (iii.3.11¹), where it is part of a pada: there are a few other cases.

It is remarked at the end of the comment, that, from this rule on, parts of words are also subjects of prescription of pragraha-quality.

36. Also gnī.

I have noted a number of cases of gnī as dual of agnī and its compounds. The commentator gives two: antarāgnī paçānām (i. 6.7¹), and viçvāmitrajamadagnī vasishṭhena (iii.1.7² and v.4.11³).

न ह्यपरः ॥ ३७ ॥

37. But not when followed by hi.

The case excepted is that of gnī occurring as nominative singular feminine of āindrāgna: āindrāgnī hi bārhuspatyā (v.5.6²). The commentator pleads the occurrence of indragnī havāmahe "in another text," as justification of the rule, in saying "by hi," instead of "by h." But we may question whether the justification is not officious and uncalled for.

38. Also an i or e followed by vid, dvārāu, kṛṣṇaḥ, carā-vah, and yadā.

The quoted passages under this rule have each its counter-example. The first is dhīshane vīdū satī vīdayethām (i.4.1²), a double case; and, to show that vī alone would not have been enough, āpaḥ ca me vīrudhaḥ ca me (iv.7.5¹). Next, devī dvārāu mā mā (iii.2.4⁴), with dvādaśa sam padyante dvādaśa (i.5.7³), to prove the need of the rāu of dvārāu. Again, yajñāyā 'tishthamāne kṛṣṇo rūpaṁ kṛtvā (vi.1.3¹: only G. M. have the first word; they also omit the last two words, while B. O. omit kṛtvā); and cātvalē kṛṣṇavishānām prā 'syati (vi.1.3⁸: G. M. omit the last two words) justifies the h of kṛṣṇaḥ. Again, vivasānāu ye curā-vāḥ (i.5.10¹), with rāye ca naḥ svapatyāya deva (v.5.4⁴: G. M. omit deva) to show that ca alone would not have been enough: to prove that more than car or carā is needed, the commentator does not attempt. Finally, we have ajanana nannamāne: yade 'dām tāḥ (iv.6.2⁴: only G. M. have ajanan). To this is raised the question whether yatante, as coming before yad ā- in greṇīḥ yatante yad ākshishur divyam (iv.6.7⁴: only G. M. have the first word), is not also pragrahu? The answer is an appeal to rule i.50, "in citations of padas, a padu only is to be understood:" but how we are to know that an integral padu is meant to be signified by yadā, any more than by vīd, the commentator does not inform us.

The passages quoted in illustration of the rule are varunāya rājñe kṛṣṇaḥ (v.5.11), and vanasputinām anyahne kṛṣṇaḥ (v.5.15: only G. M. have the first word): these are both exceptions to the preceding rule, and are the immediate occasion of the introduction here of this one. But the addition of nityam, 'constantly, in all cases,' excepts the same words from the action of any other rule: for example, of rules 52 and 48, which would otherwise apply in the passages yajñe pi kartor iti tāv abrātām (ii.6.7¹) and svarājñe norāhāu (v.6.21).

आकारिकारपूर्वस्तु बहुस्वरस्य ते थे ॥४०॥

40. Te and the, however, are pragraha in a word of more than two syllables, if preceded by ā or e.

The class of words here aimed at, of course, is composed of second and third persons plural of present and perfect tenses middle of verbs. The commentator quotes several instances: etasmīn vā etāu mājāte yo vidvishānuyoh (ii.2.6¹⁻²: only G. M. have the first three words, and they omit the last word); gukrā manthīnāu grhyete (vi.4.10¹); pra prthivyā riricāthe divaṣ ca (iv.2.11¹: only G. M. have the first and the last two words); and drñhanā yam nudethe (iv.7.15²). Then, to justify the requirement of a preceding ā or e, we have given us ā vṛṣyate vā etad yajamānaḥ (iii.3.8¹: G. M. omit the last word); of a polysyllabic word, tat pravāte vi shujanti (vi.4.7²: see under i.48) and yad ete grhyante (iii.3.6¹); the restriction to the endings te and the, anūcyamāna ā sādūyati (ii.2.5⁷, 11¹).

As to the special significance of tu, 'however,' in this rule, two of our commentator's three chief authorities, Vararuci and Māhishya, are reported by him as at variance. The former maintains that it indicates the cessation of regard had to the words specified in rule 38 as occasions of pragraha-quality; the latter, that it prescribes the annulment of continued implication of the exceptions mentioned in rule 39, and of what was there signified by the word nityam. Vararuci's view is declared the better one, and with good reason—unless, indeed, we prefer to ascribe to the word a general change of subject, from mention of individual words to the description of a class.

42. Te is pragraha when followed by mâ pātam, namah, enam abhi, vâyuh, garbham, upa, ahas, and tu.

The passages, as quoted by the commentator, are: vām ā rabhe te mā pātām ā'sya (i.2.2¹⁻²: only G. M. have the first three words), with te mā'smin yajñe (iii.2.4¹), to show the necessity of including pātām in the rule; punas te: namo 'gnaye 'pratividdhāya (i.5.10¹: only G. Then, as further counter-examples, we have te devāh (i.4.10¹ et al.) in proof that te is not pragraha before other words than those here mentioned; and bṛhad ukshe namah (i.4.26), amushmīn loka upa cere (v.3.7²), and yanti

These are not all the instances found in the Sanhitā of te as pragraha; one was disposed of by rule 20 above, and at least one or two others come under the action of other rules of this chapter.

अनुदात्तो न नित्यम् ॥ ४३ ॥

43. But not when unaccented, under any circumstances.

That is to say, even in such a situation as would bring it otherwise under the preceding rule. The example quoted is bāhubhyām uta te namaḥ (iv.5.1¹): if the text contains others, I have failed to notice them. The specification nityam has its usual force, as suspending the application of all rules to the contrary, wherever found: for example, that of rule 52, below, in the passage namas te astv āyudhāya (iv.5.1⁴).

एते तनुवैविसमेवहियज्ञपदिटक्परः ॥ ४४ ॥

44. Ete is pragraha when followed by tanuvāu, vāi sam, eva, hi, yajña, pad, and ishlak.

The passages, as quoted by the commentator, are: tasyāi 'te tanuvāu (v.7.3³); ete vāi sanivatsarasya cakshushī (ii.5.6¹; G. M. omit the last word), with ete vā idāyāi stanah (i.7.1²; G. Counter-examples would have been in place to show that, in citing the last three fragments of words, the rule had taken no more than just what was sufficient for its purpose; but they are not furnished. The general counter-examples under this rule, like those under the last but one, proving that only ete is pragraha before the words specified, and ete itself before them only, are given by G. M., but omitted in the other manuscripts: they are atha katama ete devā iti (ii.6.9³), manuta evāi 'nam etāni (v.5.6¹), pushkarapurne hy enam upagṛitam (v.1.4⁴: MSS. -gru- tum), agre yajñapatiṁ dhatta (i.1.5¹), and saptame pade juhoti (vi.1.8¹).

45. As also, the letter following the two last mentioned.

The "two" of the rule are pad and ishtak; and the commentator makes the further obvious specification that the letter following them is pragraha only when they themselves follow ete, as prescribed in the preceding rule. He quotes the passages referred to: yajñasya hy ete pade atho (v.1.6.³⁻⁴: W. omits to pade, B. O. to ete), and yad ete ishtake upadadhāti (v.3.5²); adding, to show the necessity of the limitation made by him, the counter-examples saptame pade juhoti (vi.1.8¹), and tasyās te devī 'shṭake (iv.2.9²).

46. Also one followed by sthaḥ.

There is a natural reason for this rule, sthaḥ being a dual verb, and so, apt to be preceded by a dual noun. I have noted near a dozen cases in the text; the one cited in illustration by the commentator is vishnoḥ śnyaptre sthaḥ (i.2.13³). To show that stha instead of sthaḥ would not answer, is given etasmin loke stha yushmāṁs te 'nu (iii.2.5⁶: only G. M. have the first two words, and they omit the last three).

47. As also, one following them both.

Following, namely, a sthaḥ and a preceding pragraha word: for example, gilpe sthas te vām ā rabhe (i.2.2¹: but this citation is wanting in G. M.), and dr̥dhe sthaḥ githire samicē (iii.2.4³). A counter-example, of a word following sthaḥ only, is vṛṣhaṇḍu stha urvaḡi (i.3.7¹).

46. stha ity evampara ikāra ekāro vā padāntaḥ pragraho bhavati. yathā: vish----- visargeṇa kim: et-----.

The commentator then proceeds to point out that the difference in phraseology between this rule and the last but one—dvayoh, 'two,' being used in the one, and ubhayoh, 'both,' in the other—indicates a difference of meaning. Above, the two affecting causes (nimitta) specified in the preceding rule, each along with the word affected by it (nimittin), were intended; here, on the other hand, the two aimed at are an affecting and an affected word.

सोमायस्वैतस्मिन् ॥ ४८ ॥

48. Also in the section beginning somāya sva.

The section in question is v.6.21: it was necessary to add sva, in order to distinguish it from that beginning somāya pīṛmate (i.8.5). It contains thirteen pragrahas, of which the commentator cites several together: avī dve dhenū bhāumī (v.6.21¹: G. M. omit bhāumī): three of these, however, would be disposed of by the three rules next following.

49. Also dve.

This word, which occurs about forty times in the Tāittiriya text, is, of course, always pragraha. The commentator cites two instances: dvedve sam bharati (i.6.8²), and yad dve naçyetām (ii.6.3⁵).

The comment instances but one case, a double one: dve gukle dve krshṇe mûrdhanvatîh (v.3.1⁴: G. M. omit the last word). Of such the text contains more than a dozen, but they are not worth referring to in detail.

51. Likewise the next but one.

The api, 'likewise,' in this rule is explained as bringing forward dve from the last rule but one; another application of the "principle of the frog's leap." The cited examples are dve hy ete devate (ii.1.9³: but G. M. omit this citation), and dve vâva devasatre (vii.4.5¹). By rule i.48, devasatre, though a divisible compound (padu-text, devasatre iti deva-satre), is reckoned as but a single padu for the purposes of this precept: another like case, dve savane gukravati (vi.1.6⁴), was expressly quoted as an illustration under the former rule. At vi.6.4³ (dve jāye vindate) is a case where the action of the rule is suspended by a later one, iv.54.

Of the words here specified, some are duals, and so would naturally have other duals, with pragraha endings, in their vicinity; in other cases, the collocation is purely accidental.

The û in the rule is declared to be intended this time "inclusively" (tena saha, 'along with the specified limit: ' compare the scholiast to Pāṇini ii.1.13); and the necessity of the specification “within six words” is explained as arising from rule i.30, which would limit the meaning of “before” to ‘the word standing next before.’ This involves a misinterpretation of the rule referred to, which was made for quite another purpose (see the note upon it). No such special and technical ground is needed to justify the terms of the present rule, which are of obvious and incontestable propriety.

The commentator’s example for gamayataḥ is te evāi ’nam pratishtām gamayataḥ (ii.1.4⁷): I have noted no other case. For bhavataḥ, he gives uttarivati bhavataḥ (v.4.8⁵); with the counter-example dikshante ’ntanmānāv rtā bhavataḥ (vii.4.8¹); to show the necessity of the restriction imposed by the rule in the case of this word. There are quite a number of other passages where bhavataḥ assures the pragraha-quality to words in its neighborhood: I have noted ii.2.2³, 11⁴⁻⁵; 3.2⁹, 3⁵, 4³, 8²; iii.1.7², 9³; 5.4⁴; v.4.6³; 5.1²; vii.1.4³; 2.1³ twice. With regard to the limitation anūkārāt, the commentator remarks that although simple absence is the primary significance of its negative prefix, yet another meaning is here assumed, in accordance with the requirements of the case: that is to say, “after a not-ā” is to be understood as ‘after any letter but ā.’ For tanā yat, we have ete vāi mahāyajñasyā ’ntye tanā yat (ii.2.7⁵: I have found no other case); and, as counter-example, to justify the inclusion of yat, paripataye tvā gṛhṇāmi tanūnaptre tvā (ii.2.10²: only W. has the last word). For akarot, budhnavatī agravatī yājyānuvākye akarot (ii.3.4³: another case at ii.2.8⁵). For kuryāt, mānavi reāu dhāyye kuryāt (ii.2.10²: another case at ii.3.3⁵); with the counter-example agnaye dātṛe purodācam ashtākapaḥ kuryāt (ii.5.5²), to explain the restriction to ishtī-passages. The ishtīs are defined as being “the three *pragna*s beginning with the tenth, but excepting their final anuvākas” (which have before received the designation yājyā): that is to say, ii.2.1–11; 3.1–13; 4.1–13. There are other passages besides the one quoted proving the necessity of the restriction in question: thus v.4.7⁷; vii.5.5¹. For abrātām is cited te abrātāni varām vṛṇāvahāi (ii.5.2⁵, 6⁵: another case at v.2.3³). For pravarta, huvirdhāne prāci pravartayeyuḥ (iii.1.3¹); with the counter-

For stabhnītām, vācivadevāgnimārute ukthe avyathayanti stabhnītām (iv.4.2³). For vācayati, uttame āudumbari vācayati (v.1.10²⁻³). For bibhras ta, te eva yajamānasya reto bibhras tasmāt (v.6.8⁴); with the counter-example maumahe yāv ātmanvad bibhrto yāu (iv.7.15³), to show that bibhrtaḥ alone would not have answered the purpose of the rule. Doubtless the single case is provided for in this rule rather than in 42, above, because there are cases of ta eva in the Sanhitā which it would have made trouble to distinguish properly from this one. For agnim gāyatram, ete dadhāte ye agnim gāyatram (vi.3.5³); with the counter-example sadhashe 'grīm purishyam (iv.1.3¹), to show that the addition of gāyatram was needful. For tābhyām eva, ete vāi yajñasyā 'ñjasāyanī srutī tābhyām eva (vii.2.1²; 3.5³, 7³, 9³; 4.1³, 2⁴, 4³). With reference to this passage, the commentator raises the difficulty that ete, one of the words intended to be determined as pragraha, is not within six words of eva, one of the two words specified in the rule as conditioning its pragraha-character within that distance; but he declares it of no account, since what is within reach of any part of the assigned cause (nimitta) is within reach of that cause in its entirety. For, he says, in common life also, a quality belonging to a part is ascribed to the whole which contains that part: for example, people say "Devadatta has an ear-ring," when it is really his ear that has the ring. Truly a most lucid and convincing illustration! The necessity of the eva is proved by the counter-example apa hañsy agne tābhyām patema (iv.7.13¹: G. M. omit the last word). For ubhābhyām, ye dve ahorātre eva te ubhābhyām (vii.4.4⁴). Finally, for avāntaram, utsrjye ity āhur ye avāntaram (vii.5.7¹); with the counter-example sañ te 'va te kedāḥ (ii.5.12¹), to prove that ava would not have been enough alone.

54. Nor ate, in a single word, nor ave, under any circumstances.

After paraphrasing the rule, in a way which shows that he regards the specifications "in a single word" and "under any circumstances" as both alike referring to each of the "parts of words" mentioned, the commentator proceeds to cite illustrative passages, as follows: ava rundhate tirātrāc abhito bhavataḥ (vii.2.6³; 4.1³, 2⁵, 3⁶; another nearly identical case is found at vii.4.5⁴); abhyā-hvayate vajram enam abhi pra vartayati (iii.2.9^{1,7}); and anātātā-ya dhṛṣṇave: ubhābhyām uta te namaḥ (iv.5.1⁴; B. O. omit the last word, and G. M. the last two). To show the necessity of specifying that ate should form part of a single word, he quotes eva te ubhābhyām (vii.4.4³). The limitation nityam, 'under any circumstances,' is explained in the usual manner, as intended to exclude the operation of other rules besides the one (iv.52) here especially aimed at: for the appropriate examples we are referred to the comment upon rule i.59, where they are given in connection with the illustration of another point.

This finishes the rehearsal of the words with pragraha-endings contained in the Sanhitâ. As to the economy of the method of their rehearsal—whether it would have been possible to state the facts in fewer or briefer rules—I cannot speak with confidence: it would be, certainly, a thankless task to endeavor to recast them in an improved form. Nor can I, without a pada-manuscript, or a much more thorough and detailed study of the text, with the aid of a commentary, than it has been in my power to make, judge absolutely the success of the method followed. It appears, however (with exception of the equivocal treatment of the words in o, pointed out under rule 7), to be complete: my excerption of the text has shown me no pragraha-endings in i and e which are not duly taken account of, nor any case of final i or e not pragraha as involved in the general rules of the chapter without being duly excepted by special precept. One or two words whose endings are treated as uncombinable without being pragraha are disposed of in another chapter (x.18).

1. The following rules apply in combined text (sanhitâ), within the compass of a single breath.

This is an introductory heading to the main part of the Prâtichhaya—the rules for the construction of the euphonically combined text (sanhitâ) from its presupposed material, the pada-text, where each word stands separate, as if occurring independently. It is a rule of far-reaching force, applying through many chapters (for an attempt to define precisely how far, see the comment to xxiv.2). The matters treated in the first two chapters—the mode of utterance of elementary sounds, definitions, general explanatory precepts, and the like—were with propriety first disposed of; the separate rehearsal of the pragraha-endings, made in chapter iv., is more questionable, but defensible on the ground that those endings exhibit their pragraha character also in the pada-text, before iti: but the exclusion of the vowels irregularly protracted in samhitâ, as rehearsed in the third chapter, is quite anomalous (see note to iii.1).

The commentator defines samhitâ by quoting a later rule (xxiv.3), which declares it to be “the union of separate words in euphonic combination;” referring at the same time to the rule of Pāṇini (i.4.109), as the account of it given by “the grammarians.” For ekapranābhāve he first gives us Ātreya’s simple paraphrase; but then goes on to explain it more fully, as ‘that which is brought about, generated, uttered, with a single breath; such portion of the Veda, namely, as is uttered by the help of one expiration’—the condition of pada, or separated and euphonicallly independent words, recurring with the pause that follows the expiration. That is to say, if the reciter of the text has to pause to take breath where there is no regular avasthā, or pause of interpolation (such as separates the pādas of a verse: its length is taught in rule xxii.13), his last word is thrown out of sandhi with the next, and the end of the one and the beginning of the other must assume their pada form.

Now is interposed an objection: of what use are the two specifications “in combined text” and “within the compass of a single breath”? the former is enough by itself. To this it is replied: if the latter specification were not made, then no pause after a pada would be authorized in the continuous samhitâ arrangement: and if the other were not made, then that respecting the single breath would apply also to the pādas; hence doubt would arise as to where any direction to be given would have force: there is, therefore, good reason for the double specification.

2. Separation from the text as combined—that is the fundamental text.

I cannot but believe the intent of this precept to be the same with that of the rule which begins the second chapter of the Rik Pr., saṁhitā pada-prakṛtiḥ, 'the pada-text is the foundation of the saṁhitā:' but such intent is not readily and distinctly deducible either from the rule itself or from its commentary. The latter explains that hereby is taught the prakṛti, or proper form, of saṁhitā, the reason being that a later rule (xxiv.5) prescribes as necessary to be understood, among other things, "prakṛti, vikrama, krama." An arrangement which does not deviate from the pada-text as constituted, taken as supreme, that is to be regarded as the fundamental text. By way of illustration is then quoted the whole series of passages falling under the action of rule x.13, below; passages in which the fundamental or pada form of certain words is maintained, against the ordinary rules of euphonic combination: they are svadhā usy urvī cā'si (i.1.9³), dhanvann iṣa prapā asi (ii.5.12⁴), sahasrasya pramā asi (iv.4.11³: G. M. put this citation before the preceding one), pru budhniyā irute (iv.3.13⁶), jyā iyañ samane (iv.6.6²), ā pūshā etu (ii.4.5¹: W. B. O. omit this), and aminanta evdih (iii.1.11⁵). No explanation is attempted of the bearing of these examples upon the principle which is laid down in the rule now in hand: we may suppose it to be that, the application of the rules of saṁdhi being denied in the case of these particular words, they remain in saṁhitā in their regular or natural shape as shown in pada-text—prakṛtyā, as it is elsewhere termed. And in this office of the precept is to be seen the real ground of its statement, rather than in a provision against the requirements of xxiv.5.

The grand difficulty in this exposition lies in its quiet postulation of avicalitah, 'unremoved, not deviating,' as connective between vidhiḥ and yathāyuktāt. I would sooner recur to the etymologic meaning of vidhi, 'disposal, putting apart,' and emphasize its prefix vi sufficiently to make it take an ablative adjunct, meaning 'separation from [the state] as combined;' and I have so translated above, though far from being confident that I have found the true solution of the difficulty. Neither vidhi nor its synonym vidhāna occurs elsewhere in the text, although both are frequent in the commentary (see Index), usually with the meaning 'rule, prescription;' not infrequently also 'arrangement, disposal.'

The commentator concerns himself finally with the gender of sā, which, he says, comes under the rule already once quoted from the Mahābhāṣya in explanation of a like case (under ii.7); and he points out further that the same principle applies elsewhere—for example, in xix.1.

3. And here, that which comes first is first taken.

That is to say, in the construction of the samhitā text, both the words to be treated and the rules to be applied must be taken up in their order, as they stand in the text and in the Prātiśākhya respectively. A variety of instances are given to illustrate the working of the principle. First, in bhāksha: ā: ihi (iii.2.5¹), the first two words are first combined, according to x.2, and then their result, bhākshā, is combined with ihi, by x.4, making bhākshē " 'hi, the true reading; whereas, if the second combination had been first made, forming e 'hī, this would have coalesced with bhāksha into bhākshāi 'hī—which (though in itself, as may well be claimed, the preferable reading) is unauthorized and incorrect. This exemplifies the application of the rule to the order in which words are to be treated; for its application to the use of rules there are three examples. The first concerns the production of the samhitā-reading shannavatyāi (vii.2.15) from the pada-reading shat-naratyāi: it is accomplished by the successive application of vii.2, which prescribes the conversion of n to ṇ after shat, and of viii.2, which changes t before n to n: if, on the contrary, the latter rule had been applied first, changing shat to shan, the former would no longer have had force at all, and the reading would have stood shannavatyāi. The next case is that in which the words vat and svayamabhiḡūrtāya come together (iii.2.8¹ seven times: G. M. read vashat for vat, doubtless by a clerical error). Here, v.33 requires the insertion of a t between the t and s, and this inserted t is then, by xiv.12, made th; so that we are finally to read vatth svay: if the latter conversion were first made, the reading would turn out instead vatth svay- (since v.33 would not then apply at all, but to the combination thsv would be prefixed a t of duplication, by xiv.1,5: the manuscripts, as usual in such cases, do not give these complicated readings altogether correctly: and W. B. even make the blunder of substituting at last vat svāhā, apparently having in mind -vāt svāhā, in the same division). Once more, in the passage imam: vi: syāmi (i.1.10² and iii.5.6¹), we are first to convert the s of syāmi to sh by vi.4, and then to duplicate the sh by xiv.1, making vi shshyāmi: if the duplication were first performed, making vi ssyāmi, then, by rule vi.4, we should have to read vi shsyāmi. Of the three examples thus given, only the first has to do with the form of the text as given in the manuscripts, since these very sensibly ignore the rules for duplication which make up the bulk of the fourteenth chapter of our treatise.

So far as regards the taking up of words for combination in their natural order, the Rik Pr. (ii.2) and Ath. Pr. (iii.38) have rules of like force with the present one.

The passages are sīsam ca me trapuṣ ca me (iv.7.5¹), and mithuṣ carantam upayāti (iv.7.15²): the existing pada-text reads trapu and mithu, as this rule would lead us to expect. But the right of trapu to be recognized as an independent word by the side of trapu is assured by the derivative adjective trāpusha, and the close analogy of manu, manus, mānusha.

The commentator adds a couple of counter-examples: one, vibhu ca me prabhu ca me (iv.7.4¹⁻²), to show that not every u has a ç added before c; the other, asindā mithū kah (iv.6.9⁴), to show that the insertion is only made before c, after the words specified.

5. As also after su, before candra.

The example quoted by the commentator is sucandra dasma viçpate (iv.4.4⁶): the word occurs once more, at ii.2.12⁷. The pada-text reads su-candra. Counter-examples are: pra candra-mās tirati dīrgham āyuh (ii.4.14¹: G. M. omit the last two words), and ā mā sucarite bhaja (i.1.12): their application is obvious.

6. After *sa*m is inserted s before kuru.

The commentator's example is yajamānaḥ saṅskurute (v.6.6⁴ and vi.5.5²). The pada-text reads saṁ : kurute. Counter-examples are purodācān dāṁ kurv iti (vi.3.1²: G. M. have a lucuna involving this passage), and saṅskṛtya chāvākasāmam bhavati (v.4.12³). The text has further saṅskṛtya and saṅskṛta, but (as is also implied in rule xvi.26) they are read in the pada-text as in saṁhitā, without division, or ejection of the intruded s.

7. And before akurva, after the augment.

The passage is, as quoted by the commentator, ta ishruṇ sam askurvata (vi.2.3¹); the pada-text reading sam: akurvata. The counter-example is agnihotraṁ vratam akurvata (iii.2.2²). As pratyaya occurs nowhere else in the treatise, we cannot tell whether it signifies distinctively 'augment,' or, as in other of the Prâti-gâkhyas, 'affix' in general. The commentator gives a scholastic explanation of the term, as indicating "that whereby the consonants are added unto, are made distinct."

नीचापूर्वी दकार उच्चारः ॥ ८ ॥

8. After nîcâ is inserted d before uccâ.

The passage is madhyân nîcâd uccâ (ii.3.14⁶); and the pada-text actually reads nîcâ: uccâ. This is a proceeding to which it would be hard to find a parallel in the pada-texts of the other Vedas. To write madhyena for madhyât just before would be in itself quite as defensible. As counter-examples, we receive lokam yanty uccâvacâ 'hni (vii.4.3⁶), and nîcâ tam dhukshi (i.2.14²).

At the end of the comment is made the remark "the above are cases of insertion" (âgama, 'accession'). The matter of irregular conversions is next taken up.

9. After asam, r becomes ar.

The passage in which this anomalous change is made is grhâ-nâm asamartyâi (iii.3.8²), where the pada-text has, as the rule implies, asum-rtiyâi. Here, again, we cannot praise the work of the pada text-maker. Nor is the rule of unexceptionable form, for the commentator is obliged to specify that the asam intended is one not made up of the parts of two words (not -a sam); else such passages as kalyânî râpasamrddhâ (vii.1.6⁶), and vahî hy esha samṛddhyāi (ii.2.2¹) would be included. As counter-example, to show that r, not a syllable containing r, is liable to the specified conversion, is quoted asamitrñe hi hanū (vi.2.11³: G. M. omit hanū).

अवग्रह आशीर्धुःसुवरिति रेफं परः सकारः पका-

10. Of āṣīḥ, dhūh, and suvaḥ, when first members of a compound, the visarjanīya becomes r, and a following s becomes sh.

The word avagraha in this rule is the locative avagrahe, says the commentator, and applies to each of the specified words taken separately. He supplies visarjanīya, the omission of which, or of some other word answering the same purpose, is rather a serious defect in the rule. The illustrative passages quoted are ity āṣīrpadaya reā (vi.2.9⁴; the pada-text reads āṣīr-padayā), dhārshāhāv anaṣṛā (i.2.8²; p. dhūh-sāhāu), and dadhishe suvarshām jīhvām agne (iv.4.4¹; p. suvaḥ-sām: W. B. O. omit the first word of the citation, G. M. the last). The necessity of the specification "when first members of a compound" is shown by the counter-example ye devā devasuva stha te (i.8.10²: p. deva-suvaḥ: G. M. omit the first two words and the last). Āṣīḥ shows the same irregular combination also in anāṣīrkena and sāṣīrkena (i.6.10⁴), but these words are not treated as divisible by the pada-text. The commentator goes on to point out the rules to which exceptions are established by this one: viii.23 would require āṣīrpadayā, and ix.2

The iti, he remarks finally, signifies that only the words mentioned, and no others, are intended—that is to say, it has no particular meaning at all. It would be well if he always as frankly acknowledged the insignificance of this word where it occurs in the rules.

An introductory rule or heading, having force as far as rule 19, below, inclusive.

12. A m is dropped, when preceded by im.

The passage aimed at is im 'andrā suprayasaḥ (iv.1.8²: p. im: mandrā): it is the only one of its kind in the text. The Vājasa-neyi-Saṁhitā reads in the corresponding passage (xxvii.15) im mandrā. To treat the loss of a m here as suffered by the second word instead of the first is most arbitrary and unreasonable. The particle im is reduced to i in quite a number of Rik passages, and before other letters than m: they are duly noted in the Prātiçākhyā (Rik Pr. iv.36). A series of counter-examples is added by our commentator: imam me varuṇa (ii.1.11⁶) shows that m is not dropped after another m in general; agnim mītram varuṇam (ii.1.11¹), that m after short i does not exercise the specified effect; imkāraya svāhe 'mkr̥tāya (vii.1.19¹), that im elides no other consonant than m. The yet farther restriction is applied, that im here is a padagrahaṇa, 'the citation of a complete pada;' for otherwise there would be an elision of a m in such cases as prthivīm mā hiṁsīḥ (iv.2.9¹): G. M. add the further example uta gravaśa prthivīm mītrasya, which I am unable to find in the Saṁhitā.

13. A v is dropped when preceded by tu or nu, in case these are accented.

It is when the particle vāi, or vāva, follows tu and nu that this anomalous mutilation is made. The commentator quotes sa tv 'āi yajeta (ii.6.6³ and vii.1.3¹: p. saḥ: tu: vāi), and in nv 'āi upastirnam ichanti (i.6.7³: p. it: nu: vāi). The same sandhi of tu and vāi is not infrequent elsewhere (the passages are i.7.1⁴, 6²: ii.2.4⁸; 5.4¹: iii.2.9²; 3.9²; 5.1³: v.5.9⁴: vi.4.3¹: vii.2.10³); that of nu and vāi is comparatively rare (only at i.5.9⁶ twice); that of tu and vāva I have found only once, at vii.5.6⁵. Here, again, it would seem better to regard the final v as suffering elision, instead of the initial v. The specification "if accented" is explained as intended to exclude such passages as anu vrtrahatyē (i.6.12¹; 7.13¹), where anu would fall under this rule by i.52 (even if the nu here, like the im in the preceding rule, were regarded as a padagrahaṇam). Other counter-examples, of obvious intent, are idaṁ vām āsye haviḥ (iii.3.11¹), and pra tu janayati 'ti (i.7.2⁴) and vidusho nu yajñam (i.3.13¹⁻²).

14. A s is dropped after ut, when a consonant follows.

The commentator's example is praty uttabdhyāi sayatvāya (vi.6.4⁶: p. ut-stabdhyāi). This is, so far as I have discovered, the only case in the Sanhitā from the root stabh: similar forms from sthā occur variously (anātthāya, iii.4.10³; upotthāya, vii.1.6⁸; 5.15^{1,2}; utthāsyant, vii.1.19³; utthita, vii.1.19³; 2.9³; and utthāna, vii.2.1⁴ thrice). As counter-examples are given jagatsthā devāḥ (ii.1.11⁴), utkraṇsyate svāhā (vii.1.19³), and utsādena jihvām (v.7.11).

This familiar sandhi is also the subject of Ath. Pr. ii.18, and Vāj. Pr. iv.95.

Here the ca, 'also,' is declared to continue the implication of "when a consonant follows" from the preceding rule. The iti is added for the sake of clearness; it shows the final visarjanīya of syah, and attributes it by analogy to each of the other words also. What indicates that this final visarjanīya is the letter which is to suffer elision is not so evident. The illustrative examples are esha te gāyatraḥ (iii.1.2¹), sa te jānāti (i.2.14²⁻³: but G. M. substitute sa tapo 'tapyata, iii.1.1¹), and esha sya vājī (i.7.8³). The counter-example, showing that the omission occurs only before a consonant, is dama evā 'syāi 'sha upa tishthate (i.5.7⁴), where, if the h of eshaḥ were lost by this rule, x.5 would require the reading esho 'pa.

The corresponding rules in the other treatises are Rik Pr. ii.4, Vāj. Pr. iii.15,16, Ath. Pr. ii.57.

17. And sah, when followed by id u, id agne, imām nah, enā, oshadhīḥ.

These are the cases in the Sanhitā where, after the regular loss of the final of sah, its vowel is irregularly combined with the one that follows, against rule x.25. Such cases in the other Vedic texts are treated at Rik Pr. ii.33,34, and Vāj. Pr. iii.14. The commentator quotes the passages affected, as follows: se 'd u hotā so adhrarān (i.1.14⁴: B. O. omit the last word; G. M. the last two), se 'd agne astu (i.2.14³), se 'mām no havyadātīm (iv.6.6⁶), sdi 'nā 'nīkena (iv.3.13² and 6.1⁵) and sdu 'shadhīr anu rudhyase (iv.2.3³, 11³). Finally, to show that only sah undergoes the prescribed effect before the words specified in the rule, we have paro divā para enā (iv.6.2²).

अवग्रह इत्येकम् ॥ १८ ॥

18. Also ity ekam, when ekam is the former member of a compound.

The passage aimed at is pāpīyānt syād ity ekāikam tasya juhu-yāt (v.1.1²: but as given by W. O., without the first two words, it is also found again at v.4.5⁵: G. M. omit juhu-yāt); and the pada-text actually reads ekam-ekam. The case is akin with that which forms the subject of the next rule. Two counter-examples are given, to justify the terms of the rule: they are ardhukaṁ syād ity ekam agre 'tha (vi.2.3⁵: only G. M. have the first two words), and yad ekamekaṁ sambharet (i.6.8²).

19. Also tish'hantya ekayā, along with the preceding letter.

The commentator quotes the passage: tishthantya ekāikayā stutayā (vii.5.8⁴); the pada-reading is ekayā-ekayā. As counter-example, where the same word remains unmutilated, is given śamā-nānām karoty ekayāikayo 'tsargam (vi.1.9⁴: only G. M. have the first word).

In this rule and the foregoing are noted, but at the same time ignored, the first occurrences of the compound ekāika, which (see the St. Petersburg Lexicon) is not very rare in the Çatapathā Brāhmaṇa and later.

20. A n, when followed by c, becomes ç.

The commentator's illustrative examples are ahĩñç ca sarvān jambhayan (iv.5.1²), rtāñç ca tasya nakshatriyām ca (vii.1.3²: G. M. omit ca), and karnāñç cā 'karnāñç ca (i.8.9³). The counter-examples, to show that only n is so changed, and n itself only before c, not before other palatal mutes, are çam ca me (iv.7.3¹) and tāñ chandobhir anu (i.5.9⁷: G. M. omit anu).

The nature of the conversion taught in this rule, and of the kindred ones forming the subject of rules vi.14 and ix.20, as being a historical, not a euphonic process, has been sufficiently explained and illustrated in the note to Ath. Pr. ii.26. At the same place will be found noted the usage of the other Vedic texts as regards the sandhi ñç: the Atharvan and the Vâjasaneyi-Saṁhitā make it uniformly, the Rik only occasionally. In the Tāittirīya-Saṁhitā it is prevailingly usual: I have noted thirty-nine examples of it, against the eight exceptions mentioned in the next rule.

The definition of the sandhi, of course, is not complete without the aid of rules xv.1-3, which teach that, where n has been converted into a sibilant, the preceding vowel is nasalized, or has anusvāra added to it. A better course, according to our understanding of the history of the phenomenon, would be to teach the insertion of a s (or visarjanīya) and the change of n to anusvāra before it: but the makers of the Prātiçākhyas concern themselves much less about the theoretical accuracy than the mechanical aptitude of their rules.

A counter-example, asmiṇṣ cā 'mushmiṇc ca (vii.3.4^{1,5,2}) is given to prove the need of specifying eva before asmiṇ.

By rule 24, below, the n in all these cases is assimilated to the c, and should be so written in the text. My own manuscript of the Sanhitā, in fact, follows the authority of the Prāṭiśākhya, and represents the assimilated nasal in the same manner as an assimilated m, except in a single case (ārdhnuvan car-). The Calcutta edition, however, in the part hitherto published, gives ñ c only once (i.1.9³), and everywhere else n c.

22. A t, when followed by ṣ, c, or ch, becomes c.

The form assumed by initial ṣ after this assimilation is taught in rules 34-37, below.

The commentator's examples are: tac chaṇyoh (ii.6.10^{2,2-3}), tac cā 'daduḥ (vii.1.5³), and tac chandusām chandustvam (v.6.6¹). He proceeds to point out that the ṣ, c, and ch, all mentioned in the rule as upon the same footing, are to be understood as original (not the products of previous euphonic processes), that being their chief or primary value: otherwise the mention of ṣ at all would be superfluous; since, the ṣ being (by v.34) ordered changed to ch after a mute, it would be enough for this rule to say "when followed by c or ch." Moreover, if the later rule were applied, then, after it, the application of the earlier rule would not be suitable (svarasu, 'having its own proper flavor;' the word is not used elsewhere), as it would constitute an offense against the third rule of this chapter.

24. A n, before the same letters, becomes ñ.

As eteshu is plural, we are obliged, having recourse to that which lies nearest, to regard as implied the letters pointed out in the last two rules as requiring certain changes in those that precede them: that is to say, ç, c, ch, j. These are, in fact, the whole class of palatals, since ñ never occurs at the beginning of a word, nor, indeed, in any independent position, and since jh is found nowhere in any Vedic text. The dental n, then, never maintains itself before a palatal, but is assimilated to it. The other treatises teach virtually the same doctrine: see note to Ath. Pr. ii.11.

The commentator's illustrative example for n before ç (where, to complete the combination, rule 34 below has also to be applied) is tenāi 'vāi 'nān chamayati (iii.4.8⁴). As for n before c, he points out that the rule applies only to the cases where the n does not become ç by v.20, as excepted by v.21, and quotes again one of the examples given under the latter rule, lokam āyañ catasrah (v.2.3⁴). Before ch, he gives the phrase already quoted as counter-example under v.20, tān chandobhir unu (i.5.9⁷); and before j, aparāpam ātman jāyate (iii.5.7³). As general counter-example, finally, he gives tānt subdhān (ii.4.1¹), where n, coming before s, is treated in a quite different manner.

The occurrence of n before ch, which does not once happen in the Atharvan, is found not less than nine times in the Taittirīya-Saṁhitā. My own MS. reads every time nch, combining the dental nasal with the palatal aspirate. The Calcutta edition, at the only place which it contains as yet, reads ñch.

The combination of final n with initial ç, producing, according to all the phonetic text-books (with trifling exceptions: see note to Ath. Pr. ii.17), ñch, is decidedly of more common occurrence. But here, too, my own MS. reads, with but a single exception among the cases which I have noted, nch: the Calcutta text is inconsistent with itself, now giving ñ (as at ii.2.12³), now n (as at i.3.9¹).

Final n is found yet more frequently before initial j, or some scores of times in all. As regards its method of writing the combination, my manuscript is about equally divided between nj and ñj. The Calcutta text is equally wavering; and there is no approach to consistency between the two authorities, or to recognizable principle in either: in both alike, the variation seems wholly accidental and arbitrary.

Such being the case, I think it clear that a careful editor of the Tāittirīya-Saṁhitā ought to disregard, as of no authority or consequence, the variations, or the unanimity, of his manuscripts upon all these points, and to adopt uniformly the reading prescribed by the Prātiçākhyā (either ñ or n), wherever a final n comes to stand before a palatal mute.

25. Both t and n, when followed by l, become l.

The dual laparāu indicates that the t and n, already treated of, are the letters aimed at in this rule, says the commentator. He cites as examples yāl lohitaṁ parāpatāt (ii.1.7²: G. M. omit the last word), and trīṇ lokān ud ājayat (i.7.11¹: only G. M. have ud ājayat). The combination of n and l is finished by the next rule, and will be further remarked upon in the note thereto.

नकारो ञ्नुनासिकम् ॥ २६ ॥

26. The n becomes nasalized l.

As the nasal quality of n itself is already established by rule ii.30, explains the commentator, it could not properly be defined here again as nasal. Hence the anunāsikam of the present precept must be understood as qualifying the l of like position into which the n is converted: this l is to be a nasal l. No additional example is given, the combination having been illustrated under the preceding rule.

There are in the Tāittirīya-Saṁhitā over a hundred cases of the meeting of final n with initial l, and in fully two-thirds of them my MS. reads nl simply, without attempting any accommodation of the two sounds to one another. In the remaining cases, it treats the n in the same way as it would treat a m, substituting for it the ordinary anusvāra-dot over the preceding akṣhara. The Calcutta text varies between nl and ñl. Here, as in the cases treated above, there seems to be every reason why an editor should follow one consistent method, as the irregularities of the manuscripts have no ground but accident—and, not less certainly, the method prescribed by the Prātiçākhyā is the one better entitled to be followed. As to the way in which the nasal l shall be represented, there may be some question. As I have already mentioned (note to ii.30), I cannot think that the designation of the Calcutta edition is at all to be commended, since it properly implies the insertion of an anusvāra between the preceding vowel and a doubled l, and thus quite distorts the character of the combination—except as this is viewed by Ātreya, as noted in a later rule (v.31). The method followed in my MS., on the other hand, is theoretically unobjectionable, since there is no phonetic difference recognized, or to be recognized, by phonetic theory between the combination of n and l and that of m and l: it has only the practical inconvenience of not distinguishing to the eye these two combinations—and this is of very small account, since there can be few if any cases where the least ambiguity would result. If the nasal l is to be written separately, it should properly have the virāma beneath and the sign of nasality over it. That is to say, one ought always to print either अस्मिँल्लोके or अस्मिं लोके, not अस्मिँल्लोके.

25. devācanasāmarthyūd¹ grhītāu prakṛtāu² takāranakārāu lakāram āpadyete³ laparāv. yathā⁴: yāl-----: trīṇ-----: laḥ⁵ paro yābhyān tāu laparāu.

In romanized text, as the assimilated m is represented by m̐, so, by an analogous method and for the sake of convenient distinction, the assimilated n may be very suitably represented by n̐; and this is the sign with which I have chosen to write it, both before l and before the palatals.

All the Prātiçākhyās (see note to Ath. Pr. ii.35) agree in converting both n and m before l into a nasal l.

28. Followed by a semivowel, it becomes a nasal of like quality with it.

From the class of semi-vowels is excepted r, by the next rule. Examples are given for the others, as follows: saṁyattō āsan (i.5.1¹ et al.), suvarṇam lokam (i.5.4⁴ et al.), saṁvatsaraḥ (i.5.1³ et al.: the pada-text, like that of the Atharvan, reads saṁ-vat-saraḥ, while that of the Rik leaves the word undivided). No attempt is made in the manuscripts or the printed text of the Sanhitā to give a special representation to these nasal semi-vowels standing for an assimilated m: it is left to be understood that the sign of nasality over the preceding akshara stands for a nasal letter of like quality with the following consonant in the case of the semi-vowels, just as in that of the mutes, provided for by the preceding rule. Nor are the manuscripts of the Prātiçākhyā and its commentary any more particular—saving that G. M. usually write, instead of my, the combination yy, without any sign of the nasality of the first y.

Only the Ath. Pr. disagrees with our treatise in its treatment of m before the semi-vowels, acknowledging no nasal y or v, but a l alone (see note to Ath. Pr. ii.35).

The commentator explains the word anunāsika, 'nasal,' in the rule, by anunāsikadharmaviçishṭa, 'distinguished by nasal quality,' but afterward raises a difficulty over it, in terms which imply that he regards it as a noun, 'a nasal;' asking, how we are to understand it here as equivalent to sānunāsika, 'combined with nasality.' As it is, in fact, originally and properly an adjective, signifying 'possessed of nasal quality,' and is constantly so used and applied in the Prāticākhya, the difficulty is worse than hair-splitting; it is a downright perversion. The answer by which it is met is a quibble worthy of being matched with it: "because a word expressing a quality also designates the object possessing that quality; as, for example, when we say 'a white cloth,' 'a blue lotus.'" As if the words "white" and "blue" strictly applied to the color alone, and did not just as properly mean 'of white color,' 'of blue color'!

29. But not when followed by r.

R being also a semi-vowel, m would be converted into a corresponding nasal before it by the previous rule, but for this special exception. The instances given of the treatment of m before r are pru samrājam prathamam adhvarānam (i.6.12³: G. M. have only the first two words), and sāmrajyāya sukratuh (i.8.16¹). They are particularly ill selected, as neither case comes under the action of the preceding rule; they fall, rather, under xiii.4, and are, in fact, the two passages there given as examples of the peculiar treatment of sam before rāj. We ought to have, instead, such passages as pratyushtaṁ rakshaḥ (i.1.2¹), vī vyaṁ ruhema (i.1.2²)—which, of course, are of exceedingly frequent occurrence in the Saṁhitā.

The omission of m before r, and the nasalization of the preceding vowel, or the insertion of anusvāra after the latter, are taught below, in rules xiii.2,xv.1–3. The written and printed texts are consistent in their recognition of the mode of combination thus prescribed, always setting the proper anusvāra sign before r, while before y, l, v they write the assimilated m just as before the mutes.

nasal semi-vowel save l. Their opinion is again quoted in connection with the rule respecting the actual treatment of m before r (xiii.3), and the commentator there calls attention to the fact that the "some teachers" spoken of are the same with those here noticed: who they are, he does not attempt to tell us. The view held by them is the same with that taken by the Atharva Prātiçākhyā, as pointed out above (see Ath. Pr. ii.35, and the note upon it); but, until we know much more than we do at present of the history and mutual relations of these phonetic treatises, it would be highly venturesome to conclude that the authors of this Prātiçākhyā had here in mind the other one and its authors.

I find it difficult to discover any good phonetic reason why the assimilation of m should not yield a like result before all the semi-vowels, and why, if we are to admit an anusvāru at all, it would not find a particularly appropriate place as representing the sound into which m might naturally pass before y, r, l, and v.

As examples, are repeated saṁvatsarah and saṁyattāh (see under rule 28, above).

उत्तमलभावात्पूर्वो ञ्नुनासिक इत्यत्रियः ॥ ३१ ॥

31. Âtreya holds that, when a nasal mute becomes l, the previous vowel is nasalized.

As has been pointed out above, Âtreya's view of the combination is the one represented accurately by the mode of writing adopted in the Calcutta edition. It is not elsewhere supported in the Prātiçākhyas. Its quotation here seems a little unprepared, or the expression of it given in the rule imperfect, as we have been directed to convert m and n, not into l, but into a nasal l. One might think, too, that it would be in better place at the beginning of chapter xv., where certain other differences of opinion on kindred points are rehearsed.

The commentator gives Âtreya the title of muni, 'sage,' instead of ācārya, 'teacher.'

To illustrate the sage's style of making the combination, he cites triṇī lokān (i.7.11¹) and suvargaṇī lokam (i.5.4² et al.); but not one of the manuscripts of the commentary takes the pains to write the extracts as they should be written, to serve their purpose as illustrations. Finally, he adds the caution that "this rule and the preceding are not approved."

32. After ñ is inserted a k before s and sh.

The commentator's examples are pratyāñk somo atidrutah (i.8.21: but G. M. have instead sudrñk samānāih, ii.2.8⁶), and pratyāñk shadūho bharati (vii.4.2⁵: O. G. M. omit bharati). As counter-examples, showing that the insertion is made only under the circumstances specified, he gives pratyāñ hotāram (vi.3.1⁵), and tat savituh (i.5.6⁴ et al.) and tat shodagī (vi.6.11¹).

The combinations here treated of are not otherwise than rare in any Vedic text. In the Tāittiriya-Saṁhitā I have found no other instance of the meeting of ñ and sh than the one quoted; of ñ before s, besides the two here given, occur two others, at vi.3.1⁶ and iv.4.4⁷⁻⁸; but, in the latter passage, the division of the section into half-centuries falls between the two letters, as the text is at present written, and prevents the exhibition of the sandhi. Neither the Calcutta edition (so far as yet printed) nor my manuscript makes in any of these passages the insertion required by the Prātiśākhya: and it may properly enough be considered a question whether the latter's authority ought to be followed in a matter of this character, any more than in regard to the duplications which form the subject of chapter xiv. Nevertheless, considering the phonetic reasonableness of this particular insertion, and its close analogy with that of t between n and s (see the next rule), I should myself decidedly incline to write ñk s and ñk sh. The manuscripts of the commentary, it should be remarked, try to follow the directions of the rule, W. B. O. reading ñks, and W. O. ñksh (with the k and sh united in the usual sign for ksh); while G. M. even yield to the requirement of xiv.12, and give us ñkhs and ñkshsh. This last is a refinement which no one, probably, would care to see introduced into our printed texts.

As is shown in detail in the note to Ath. Pr. ii.9, the teachings of the Ath. Pr. and Vāj. Pr. are virtually in agreement with those of our own treatise as regards the insertions prescribed in this rule, and the next, while the Rik Pr. merely mentions them as enjoined by some authorities.

same source, tānt subdhānt subdhāns tāns tānt subdhān (ii.4.1¹). Counter-examples are śaḍ vā rtavah (iii.4.8⁶), and tān rudrā abruvan (v.5.2⁶).

The final lingual t occurs before s, according to my notes upon the text, in ten other passages (iii.2.8¹ eight times: iv.4.8¹; 6.14: v.4.3⁴, 4²; 5.2⁶; vi.2.3⁴; 6.3³; vii.1.5¹; 4.10²); and my MS. does not once employ the intermediate t. The manuscripts of our commentary, however, all introduce it; and this time B. abets G. M. in converting it into th, by rule xiv.12. The combination is without doubt a very troublesome one, in the demand it makes upon the tip of the tongue: but whether the transition is helped by the intrusion of a t is a much more serious question—and one to exercise and gratify the subtlety of a Hindu phonetist. The Ath. Pr. also requires ts (ii.8), but the Rik Pr. (iv.6) only notices the mode of sandhi as enjoined by certain teachers.

It is indeed true that the strict letter of the rule requires a t to be inserted between a t and sh, as illustrated by the commentator from the jutā-text. But it would be wholly preposterous to suppose that the authors of the Prāṭiśākhya intended to teach any such insertion—which would convert the consonant combination from one wholly natural and easy to one in a high degree harsh and difficult, if not absolutely impossible. They evidently relied on the non-occurrence of sh after t anywhere in the Sanhitā for the annulling of that part of the rule's prescription—either having no regard to a jutā-text, or overlooking the fact that in it the two letters would come in contact.

Twice in the Tāittiriya text we have a final t before an initial sh (at v.5.2⁶; vii.5.6³). Although their collision might seem to call for mediation in somewhat the same manner as that of t and s, the Prāṭiśākhya makes no special provision for it, and the manuscript text simply combines the two letters.

The meeting of final n with initial s, the other case contemplated by the rule, is very frequent (there are sixty instances in the first two kāṇḍas: I have not collected them through the whole text). Neither the printed text nor my manuscript is absolutely faithful in inserting the prescribed t; yet I have found but six cases in the whole Sanhitā in which the latter omits it; and out of the seven passages in kāṇḍas i. and ii. where the former leaves it out, my manuscript confirms the omission in only one. As the requirement of the Prāṭiśākhya receives so much support from the usage of the scribes, and also accords with the prescriptions of the Ath. Pr. (ii.9) and Vāj. Pr. (iv.14), there can be no question that it ought to be followed by an editor of the Tāittiriya Veda.

34. A ç preceded by a mute becomes ch.

The commentator gives only an example of a ç converted into ch after t, the t at the same time becoming c by rule 22, above: çarac chrâutrî (iv.3.2²). He adds a counter-example, âçuḥ çigḍ-nah (iv.6.4¹). The occurrence of any other final mute than t and n (for which an example is given above, under rule 24) before initial ç is very rare (excepting m, for which see the following rule); and it is properly only after a dental, or after a dental or lingual, that the conversion here prescribed has good phonetic ground—namely, in the coalescence of a t-sound and a sh-sound into the compound sound of our ch in church (see note to Ath. Pr. ii.17). There is one case of a preceding t (i.3.14⁶), where my MS. reads, as the Prâtiçâkhya directs, t ch, while the Calcutta text has t ç. A single case of preceding p is treated of below, in rule 36.

न मकारपूर्वः ॥ ३५ ॥

35. But not when preceded by m.

By this rule, says the commentator, is annulled the conversion of ç to ch after m, which would otherwise be in order (according to the preceding rule), since m is a mute. He instances sañçitam me (iv.1.10³ and v.1.10²) and sañçravâ ha (i.7.2¹). Being thus specially exempted from the operation of the foregoing rule, this combination, of course, falls under xiii.2 and xv.1-3, and the m, as before other spirants, becomes anusvâra. An objection is raised against the pertinence of the present precept, on the ground that xiii.2 directs the omission of m before a spirant, and that hence there could arise no occasion for any such conversion of ç into ch as is here contemplated and guarded against. The reply, however, is a very easy one; that, by rule 3 of this chapter, the requirement of the conversion into ch, as it is stated earlier, would have to be applied first, and that the result of so doing would be to pro-

There is but a single case in the Sanhitā of p before ç, namely the one here quoted by the commentator, anushtup çhāradī (iv.3.2³): so my manuscript reads, according to the requirement of rule 34, above. Vālmīki thinks it would be better to read anushtup çāradī—and I presume we shall have little hesitation in approving his opinion.

37. Nor, according to Pāushkarasādi, when followed by a consonant ; and a preceding n, in that case, does not become ñ.

This translation is made in accordance with the commentator's exposition. One might be tempted to understand the last part of the rule otherwise, not regarding the continuance of the negative as implied from the other part ; translating 'and a preceding n becomes ñ;' but, besides the authority of the comment against it, this would be a mere repetitious enactment of the rule already given above (v.24). The inquiry is raised, how we know that pūrvaḥ, 'the preceding letter,' means here 'a preceding n.' The reply is, because only n is liable to conversion into ñ, and annulment is only made of that which would, without direction to the contrary, be liable to take place.

The examples given to illustrate this peculiar view of Pāushkarasādi are ādityān çmacrubhiḥ (v.7.12), and pāpiyān çreyase (i.5.7⁴). The edition has pāpiyān chreyase in the latter passage, in accordance with the approved rules of the Prāṭiçākhyā ; but my MS. seems to have been written by a sectary of Pāushkarasādi at this point (namely, in the margin: a line or two of the context was omitted just here by the original scribe). In the former, I find the reading ādityān chmagrubhih, which would satisfy neither side. There is one other case of the collision of n with cr (at v.6.7³), where I find read n chr. So also, at v.7.1³ my MS. has n chv; and at vii.3.14, n chy. These are the only instances, I believe, which the text affords of the combinations contemplated by the rule.

The commentator, at the end, declares this rule and the preceding not approved, and with reason: the evident intent of the treatise is that the conversion of initial c to ch shall take place in all the cases falling under rule 34.

38. According to Plāksbi, Kāuṇḍinya, Gāutama, and Pāushkarasādi, a h preceded by a first mute becomes a fourth mute corresponding with the latter.

The examples of this, the approved and customary combination of an initial h with a final surd mute, are, as given by the commentator, arvāg ghy enam (vi.3.3¹), suraḍ dhavā aśvasya (v.3.12²: G. M. omit aśvasya), and tad dhiranyam (v.4.2³ and vi.1.7¹). In giving the first two quotations, W. O. G. M. (following a vicious and indefensible mode of combination, which occasionally appears even in carefully written Vedic manuscripts, and has incautiously been admitted into some edited texts) write ghgh and dhdh instead of ggh and ddh; and in the latter of them my MS. of the Sanhitā does the same (see the note to xiv.5). As counter-examples, establishing the restrictions imposed by the rule, we have pratyāñ hotāram (vi.3.1⁵), vāk ta ā pyāyatām (i.3.9¹), vashut te (ii.2.12⁴); and, in W., ā 'tishtḥipat te (iv.6.9⁴), but in all the other MSS. tut te (i.3.9¹ et al.).

This is one of several instances in which the Prātiçākhyā, instead of stating first, categorically, its own doctrine, and then mentioning others at variance with this, puts forward the conflicting views of different authorities, without appearing itself to decide in favor of any one against the rest. The commentator here points out (at the end of the chapter) that the present rule presents the accepted doctrine of the treatise, the three that follow being disapproved; but this does not satisfy us. We might, to be sure, regard ourselves as justified in assuming that the doctrine of the authors of the work is first stated, with due and respectful mention of the authorities upon whom they especially rely in maintaining it: but such an assumption does not in all cases help us out of the difficulty.

39. According to some authorities, it remains unchanged.

That is to say, the authorities here referred to would read, for example, in one of the passages already quoted (vi.3.3¹), arvāk hy enam.

As the euphonic treatment of h as a sonant instead of a surd letter is one of the most perplexing anomalies of the Sanskrit phonetic system, such indications as this of the fluctuating and antagonistic views of the old Hindu phonetists respecting it, and the willingness of some of them to give it the value of a surd in making combinations, are worth a great deal to us.

40. According to Çaityāyana and others, a fourth mute is interposed.

These respectable authorities would, if their views are not misrepresented, approve the very strange-looking and hardly defensible reading arvākgh hy enam (so writes W., with the utmost possible explicitness; B. reads arvāk hya hy; O. gives arvāgh hy; G. M. have arvāghy). The commentator tells us (one would like to know on what authority) that the "others" are Kāuhalīputra, Bharadvāja, Old Kāundinya, and Pāuśkarasādi. All are mentioned elsewhere (see Index) in the text itself.

The especial mention, in a separate rule, of the agreement of this school with the view of Āityāyana and his abettors, is made, says the commentary, with an honorific intent.

He adds, as was above remarked, that rules 39 to 41 are disapproved.

2. A s is converted into sh when preceded by svānāso divi, āpo hi, ayam u, kam u, ū, mo, pro, trī, mahi, dyavi, padi, or a former member of a compound.

The illustrative passages, as given by the commentator, are as follows: uta svānāso divi shantv agneḥ (i.2.14⁷: only O. has agneḥ; B. omits both that and the preceding word): with the counter-example trīyasyām ito divi soma āsit (iii.5.7¹), to show the powerlessness of divi to effect the change except after svānāsah. Then āpo hi shthā mayobhuvah (iv.1.5¹: v.6.1⁴: vii.4.19⁴: only G. M. have the last word): the necessity of āpo is shown by the counter-example na hi svah svau hinasti (v.1.7¹). Next ayam u shya pra devayuh (iii.5.11¹), and kam u shvid asya senayā (ii.6.11²): with the counter-example tad u soma āha (iv.2.8¹), to prove that u changes s only after ayam and kam. For ā, the example is ūrdhva ā shu na ūtaye (iv.1.4²: only G. M. have the first word): the other passages in which it exerts a like influence upon an initial s are i.5.11⁵: iii.5.10¹: iv.6.5⁶: v.1.5³: vii.1.18²: 4.17². For mo, the only passage is the one quoted, mo shā na indra (i.8.3). For pro, only pro shv asmāi puroratham (i.7.13⁵). For trī, only trī shadhasthā (ii.4.11² and iii.2.11¹). For the three remaining words, also, the text affords only the single examples given by the commentator: mahi shad dyuman namah (iii.2.8²), ya upa dyavi shtha (ii.4.14⁵), and padi shitām amuñcaid yajatrāh (iv.7.15⁷: G. M. omit the last word). To the prescription conveyed in the last item of the rule, which seems to demand that every s beginning in pada-text the latter member of a compound should be changed to sh, rule 7, below, makes the very important general exception "not after a consonant or an a-vowel;" it means, then, that s is so changed after the i, u, and r vowels and the diphthongs. The commentator illustrates only one or two of the cases in which the conversion would be required: hañsah gūvishad vasuh (iv.2.1⁵: p. guci-sat: only G. M. have the first word), ayā vishthā janayan (i.7.12²: p. vi-sthāh: only G. M. have ayā), and goshṭomam dvitīyam (vii.4.11¹).

I have collected from the Sanhitā all the words coming under the operation of this part of the rule, concerning the initial s of the latter member of a compound (just about a hundred in number, and some of them of quite frequent occurrence), but I do not think the list worth the trouble of giving here. So far as regards the Prātiçākhyā and its relation to them, the important point is to determine whether its rules and exceptions precisely cover them—and I have to say that I have not succeeded in discovering any want of exact adaptedness to them. There is a single participle, anusthita, whose unaltered s is unnoticed and unprovided for in the chapter, but it occurs only as final member of a compound, vishvvanusthitah (ii.4.12^{3,4,5}: p. vishvu-anusthitah), and so, not being itself separated into its constituents, is exempted from the action of the present rule.

3. Also asadāma and asiñcan.

The "also" (ca) in this rule implies, the commentator says, that the words mentioned are preceded by an avagraha, according to the final specification of the preceding rule: else such passages as ajáyāñ gharman prā 'siñcan (v.4.3³) would fall under the prescribed action. The examples are yena kāmēna nyashadāme'ti (vii.5.2¹; p. nī-asadāma), and mitrāvaruṇāv abhyashiñcan (i.8.11; p. abhi-asiñcan). The rule is given, we are told, for the purpose of ordaining that, in the case of these two words, the conversion into śh after an avagraha takes place even notwithstanding the interposition of an a. Why not, then, puts in an objector, say "even when a interposes," without specification of the words concerned? Because, is the reply, the rule would then apply to such cases as hr̥tsvaso mayobhūn (iv.2.11³; p. hr̥tsu-asah).

4. Also in an unaccented pada, when a preposition or nis precedes.

This rule can apply only to unaccented verbal forms, since they alone can be technically anudātta throughout, having the anudātta sign written under every syllable. In any compound beginning with a preposition like pāri, for instance, having an acute on the first syllable and an enclitic svārīta on the second, the syllables of the other member of the compound would not have the anudātta accent, but the pracaya: such would fall under rule 2 of this chapter. The word pada in the rule, we are told, is intended to specify the text: "a word which is anudātta throughout in the padu-text" is what the Prāticākhya means—it being, in fact, impossible that any word should be so accented in samhitā-text.

The commentator's examples are, for prepositions, açmunn ūrjam iti pari shiñcati (v.4.4¹), inaṃ vi shyāmi (i.1.10² and iii.5.6¹), sāmrañyenā 'bhī shiñcāmi (i.7.10³ twice, and v.6.3³: but B. O. read shiñcati, I presume by a copyist's blunder, as I find no such phrase in the text), yajumāne prati shthāpayanti (vi.1.4²), and nī shasāda dhrtavrato varuṇah (i.8.16¹: only B. O. have varuṇah); for nīs, nī śtānihi dūrītā (iv.6.6⁷: all the manuscripts of the comment, along with my manuscript of the Sanhitā, read thus, as required by ix.1: compare the similar cases noted under rule 13, below). A number of counter-examples are given, showing the effect of absence of any one of the conditions contained in the rule: they are sādane sīda samudre (iv.3.1), brhataḥ garmani syām (iv.1.5¹), vi śmataḥ surucaḥ (iv.2.8²: G. M. omit this example), and abhi savanā pāhi (i.4.10,11).

The cases coming under this rule are not so numerous but that it may be worth while to report them. Of verbal forms after odhi I have found none; after abhi, I have noted abhi shyāma (i.4.46³), and forms of abhi śhiñcāmi (i.7.10³ et al.) and abhi shunomi (iii.1.8²); after prati, forms of prati śthāpuyāmi (i.7.5² et al.), and prati śtobhanti (ii.2.12³); after puri, forms of puri śhicye (iii.3.11¹ et al.), and puri śthāt (i.7.13³); after vi (besides that quoted under rule 13, below), vi śhajanti (vi.4.7²), and forms of vi shyāmi (iii.4.11⁶); after nī (besides the one under rule 13), nī śha-sāda (i.8.16¹ et al.), and forms of nī śhūdāmi (iii.5.11⁴ et al.). Such cases as nī-śhūdāyati (v.3.7²), where the preposition, losing its accent before the accented verbal form, is combined with the latter in the pada-text, belong under rule 2, above. The same is the case with vyātishajet (vi.6.4² et al.), where the verb has two prepositional prefixes, and is therefore written in combination with them (vi-ātishajet), and with altered sibilant. But for this circumstance, we should require a separate and special treatment of the word; for ati is by this Prātiśākhya (i.15) excluded from the list of upasarga, 'prepositions,' and so could not by the present rule cause the alteration of an initial s of a root. Anu is also thus excluded, whence the passage anu śthana (v.6.1³) does not fall under the rule, and the retention of its dental sibilant needs no specific authorization. It is the only case, so far as I have discovered, in which the restriction of the class of prepositions to half its usual number has any bearing upon the objects of this rule.

veh, sumatih, mākih, īyuh, āyuh, ābhih, sadhīh, and nakih, under all circumstances.

This is, the commentator remarks, a rule establishing exceptions in advance to rule 2 of the ninth chapter, which would require in every case s instead of sh. The examples are: for agnih, aviduṣṭarāsaḥ: agnish tad viṣvam (i.1.14⁴) and medhyas ca sapte: agnish tvā (v.1.11¹); with a counter-example, varshishṭhe adhi nāke 'gnis te tanuvam (i.1.8: only G. The final specification of the rule, nityam, 'under all circumstances,' is explained as intended to assure the inclusion in the rule of the word avidushtarāsah (i.1.14⁴), already quoted, which would otherwise be liable to exclusion by the operation of rules 8 and 9, below. The word viduh itself, we are told, is all right, because of its specific mention in the text, but a little additional force is needed to bring in aviduh as its hanger-on. The explanation is by no means of the most satisfactory character, but I have nothing to suggest in its place. We have already once (see note to iii.8) had a case arising under i.52 treated as demanding a special handling.

6. Now for exceptions.

An introductory heading, of force in the rules that follow (through rule 13).

अवर्णव्यञ्जनशकुनिपत्यृतुमृत्युमलिम्लुवृहस्पतिपूर्वः ॥ ७ ॥

7. Excepted is a s preceded by an a-vowel, a consonant, ṣakuni, patnî, rtu, mṛtyu, malimlu, or brhaspati.

The bearing of the first two items of this rule on those which precede it has been noticed under rule 2. The commentator's examples are, for a preceding a-vowel, antarikshasud dhotā (i.8.15² et al.: only G. M. have the second word) and ā siñcasva (i.4.19: but G. M. omit the passage), of which one falls as an exception under rule 2, the other under rule 4; and, for a preceding consonant, ṛksāme vāi (vi.1.3¹). Then, for the words specified, we have ṣakunīśādēna (v.7.14), patnīsamnyājīnām (ii.6.10⁴: G. M. read -yājīh, which is found twice in the same division of the same section, but not elsewhere), ṛtusthās tasya (v.7.6⁶: the same compound is found at v.5.8¹), mṛtyusamnyuta iva (i.5.9⁴: only G. M. have iva), nāi

ऋकाररेफवति ॥ ८ ॥

8. Also in a word containing r or r.

The commentator gives one example of each case, the former constituting an exception under rule 4, the latter under the last specification of rule 2: vi srjate cāntyāi (i.7.6⁷), and tasmāt sa visrasyah (vi.2.9⁴, 10⁷: only G. M. have tasmāt).

Of other words falling under this rule, I have noted parisrutam (i.8.21), visarjanam (i.1.5²), bahusūrarī (iii.1.11⁴), and gosatram (vii.5.1¹). Compare the nearly corresponding rules of the other treatises, Rik Pr. v.11, Vāj. Pr. iii.81, Ath. Pr. ii.102, 106.

9. Also in the former member of a compound.

We should expect the word avagraha in this rule to be put in the locative case, so as to accord in construction with the preceding rule; and I have translated it as a locative. Its being a nominative makes the commentator some trouble: he declares avagraha here equivalent to avagrahastha, 'standing in avagraha,' and quotes as corresponding and customary expressions "the stages cry out," "the fat one knows," where "those occupying the stages," "the soul inhabiting a fat body," are really meant.

The occasion for such a precept as this arises out of rule 4, above, which provides for the conversion into sh of the initial s of a word wholly anudātta, after a preposition. It was aimed, as is there pointed out, at unaccented verbal forms. But the former members of compounds which are accented on the latter member would also come under the rule, as being anudātta throughout, and also entitled to the designation pada, 'word,' equally with completely independent vocables: hence the necessity of providing for their exclusion from its action. The commentator illustrates with a couple of examples: tāsyām devā' ādhi sainvāsantah (iii.5.1¹), and mūkham yajñānām abhi sainvidāne (v.1.11²: only G. M. have the first word). W. B. O. introduce a third, between the other two, namely abhi sām agachantē 'ti (ii.5.3⁷); but, as is shown by the accentuation and division, it does not fall under either the fourth rule or this, and has evidently come in by somebody's blunder.

It is very possible that the Sanhitā contains other cases requiring the application of this rule; but if so, they have escaped my notice.

10. Also in sava and sthānam.

The cited passages are agnisavaç cityaḥ (v.6.1⁵), anusavonam purodāçān (vi.5.11⁴ and vii.5.6⁴), savānesavane 'bhi grhnāti (vi.4.11⁴; 6.11³), prasavāya sāvitraḥ (vi.6.5²: G. M. omit the last word; and the whole example is a blunder, since there is nowhere a rule requiring the lingualization of the sibilant in prasavāya), and gachā gossthānam (i.1.9^{1,2}).

The word sthānam being cited with its special case-ending, the rule would not apply to such forms as sthānaḥ, sthānī, which in fact occur in the compound pratishthāna (e. g. i.7.6⁶; ii.4.4¹), with their sibilant converted to sh. Sava, however, having no case-ending, falls under rule i.22, and is employed as "part of a word, in order to the inclusion of a variety of cases," as the comment duly points out, and as his selected examples illustrate.

Considering that an appended specification constituting a rule often applies only to the last word given in the preceding rule (e.g. iv.13,16), it might well enough have seemed advisable to the authors of the Prâtiçâkhyâ to read here dhipûrvayoh, in the dual, instead of dhipûrve.

The examples, as quoted by the commentator, are as follows. For sañtânebhyah, parisañtânebhyah svâhâ (vii.4.21). For saptâbhih, trisaptâbhih paçukâmasya (v.2.6²: G. For spaçah, tanûpânah pratipaçah (v.7.3¹). Sak is declared a part of a word, implying a variety of forms: for example, paçcât prçnisaktho bhavati (ii.1.3³), prçnisakthâs trayo hâimantikâh (v.6.23: G. M. omit the last word), prçnisakthum â labheta grâmakâmah (ii.1.3²: G. M. O. omit the last word), and prçnisakthâya svâhâ (vii.3.18): I have noted no other eases, and should regard suktha as (by i.22) the preferable form for the grâhana in the rule. For sani, tasmâd etad gosani (vii.5.2²); for sanih, asi stanayitnusamir asi (iv.4.6²: G. M. omit the first word); for sanih, vrsh-tisanir upa dailhâti (v.3.1³, 10¹): gosanih is found also at iii.2.5⁷, and vrsh-tisanih at iv.4.6². As it would satisfy all these eases to cite san alone, in the character of part of a word (like sak, above), the commentator inquires why that was not done, and the citation of whole words avoided; and he brings up in reply mrdhâ vâ esho bhishanno yasmât samâneshv anyah greyân uta (ii.4.2³: all but W. stop at -shanno), and nishannâya svâhâ

(vii.1.19¹), as examples of the alteration of san. Sani would not cover all the cases; and the treatise makes no provision for the citation of a theme ending in i, or any other vowel than a, as representative of all the forms derived from that theme. For sa-bheyah is quoted susabheyo ya evam (vii.1.8¹: G. M. omit evam). For sattvā, abhisattvā sahojāḥ (iv.6.4²: all the MSS. read everywhere, in text, commentary, and Sanhitā, satvā). And for sasyāyādi, susasyāyādi supippalābhyah (i.2.2³).

All these are exceptions under rule 2, being cases of compounds whose second member begins with s, after a vowel other than an a-vowel. The commentary tries (with much discordance between the different manuscripts: see the various readings below) to claim two of them as exceptions under rule 4; but there is no ground for so doing.

13. But not in svara, spardhāḥ, starima, sāhasra, sārathih, sphuranti, stubbh, and in sto when preceded by jyotiḥ, āyuh, or catuh.

Of these words, the first six constitute counter-exceptions under rule 8, which excepted words containing r or r from the conversion of their initial s into sh. The examples, as quoted by the commentator, are as follows: amba ni shvara (i.4.1² and vi.4.4³); vi shpardhāḥ chandah (iv.3.12³)—these two, it is noted, are cases under rule 4, of unaccented verbal forms after a preposition—sushtarimā jushānā (v.1.11²); dvishāhasraṁ cinvita (v.6.8²: G. M. omit cinvita), and trishāhasro vā asāu lokah (v.6.8³: G. M. omit after vāi)—both forms are, we are made to observe, included in the citation of sāhasra by its theme-ending a, according to rule i.22: other forms do not occur in the Sanhitā, nor these elsewhere than in the two divisions quoted from—kāmayate sushārathih (iv.6.6²); and vishphuranti amitran (iv.6.6²).

The next case is a very anomalous one, being the conversion of s into sh after a, contrary to the first specification of rule 7. The phrase is sashtup chandah (iv.3.12²; p. sa-stup). Compare similar cases as noted in Ath. Pr. ii.95.

The combination of sto with the three words mentioned, although not quite regular, has nothing strange in it. The final visarjanīya of the first member of the compound is lost by ix.1, and the sibilant is treated as it would be had no h been present. The examples are jyotiṣhtomam prathamam (vii.4.10¹, 11¹), āyushtomam trtīyam (vii.4.11¹), and catushtomo abhavat (iv.3.11²): jyotiṣhtoma and catushtoma occur in a number of other passages, which it is not worth while here to rehearse. The exception this time is to the second specification of rule 7, according to which the consonant h at the end of the former member of the compound would prevent the lingualization of the sibilant. Of course, according to the theory of the Prātiçākhyā (by v.3), the lingualization is first performed, giving jyotiḥshhtoma etc., and then, by ix.1, the visarjanīya disappears, making jyotiṣhtoma, as all the manuscripts, of comment and Sanhitā, constantly read.

The commentator remarks the fact that, from starīma on, the cases are such as fall under the last specification of the second rule of this chapter. He then adds, as counter-examples under sto, yad akṣṇayāstomīyāḥ (v.3.3¹), catusstamān karoti (v.1.6⁴), and jyotiṣ tv 'ā asya (ii.2.4⁸: but G. M. omit this example).

There are a few other words which we might expect to see included among those forming the subject of this rule. Such is barhiṣad (iv.6.1⁴ et al.), i. e. barhiḥ-sad: but the Rik and Atharvan pada-texts adopt the omission of the final h as part of their own reading, and the Tāittirīya (p. barhi-sad) does the same, so that the irregularity of the word lies outside the Prātiçākhyā. Such, again, are duṣṭara (iv.4.12²) and duṣṭarītu (iv.4.12¹), provided that, as seems to me probable (compare note to Ath. Pr. ii.85), they are regarded as compounds of duḥ with stara and starītu. But these words are written by the pada-texts of the other Vedas du-stara and dustarītu, and the pada-text of the Tāittirīya-Sanhitā reads duṣṭara and duṣṭarītu, so that there is no reason for their peculiar phonetic form being noticed by the Prātiçākhyā. Once more, trishṣamrddhatvāya (ii.4.11⁵) would call for inclusion here, but that the addition of the suffix tva at its end annuls the separation which would otherwise be made of the first element of the compound, trih, and the word stands in pada-text trishṣamrddhatvāya, and so does not require alteration in sanhitā.

There seems to be no particular reason why this rule is introduced here, instead of anywhere else in the work, as it has no relation with the rest of the contents of the chapter. It is a complete rehearsal of the cases in which the old s, with which most Sanskrit words in n originally ended, is retained under the protection of a following initial t. The combination, of course, is historically identical with that of n e into ñçc, treated of in the preceding chapter (v.20: see the note upon that rule). The "conversion" of n into s, as the treatise chooses to state the case, involves, by xv.1-3, the prefixion of anusvāra to the sibilant.

The examples quoted by the commentator are as follows. For tarhân, gatatarhāñs trñhanti (i.5.7⁶ and v.4.7⁴). For tasmin, tusmiñs tvā dadhāmi (i.6.5¹; 7.5¹). M. omit na), which would fall under the operation of the present rule by i.52. For nemir devân, nemir devāñs tvam paribhūr asi (ii.5.9³: G. M. omit asi); with the counter-example jātavedo rapayā gacha devân tvañ hi (iii.1.4⁴: G. M. omit the first word), to show that devân is so treated only after nemih. For savane paçûn, mādhyandine savane paçûñs tṛtīyasavane (iii.2.9²: G. M. omit the first word); with the counter-example prajām paçûn tenā 'vardhata (vii.4.3²), to prove the need of savane in the rule. Then, as general counter-example, to bring out the fact that n is thus converted into s only before t, we have tasmin prajāpatir vāyuh (vii.1.5¹): G. M. add also lokân dravināvatāh (v.3.11²). And finally, the commentator proceeds to explain and illustrate the limitations "an original (prākṛta) n" and "a constant (nitya) t," given in the rule. An original n is one which is not the product of euphonic processes, but is read in the padu-text: in tām tena çamayati (v.7.3³), then, where the n represents a n, produced by the assimilation of m to the following t (by v.27), the rule has no force. A constant t, in like manner, is one which is found in all forms of the text, and not in saṁhitā alone: hence, in vidānt somena yajate (iii.2.2³), the t which is introduced (by v.33) between n and s does not cause the conversion of the n into s. The t in this case, to be sure, is (by xiv.12) to be turned into th (and is so written in the citation by W. G. M.); but, as the rules of the treatise (by v.3) have to be applied in their order, the danger of misapprehension upon the point in question requires to be guarded against: for a t inserted by authority of the fifth chapter might assibilate a nasal according to the sixth, before it was itself turned into an innocuous th by the fourteenth.

The cases in which the insertion of s between n and t is made in the Tāittiriya-Saṁhitā are thus seen to number only thirty-one. On the other hand, the cases of the collision of n and t without interposition of s are very numerous: I have noted about two hundred and eighty, and presume that I may have overlooked here and there others, so that there would be in all ten times as many instances of the omission as of the insertion. In the Atharva-Veda (see second marginal note to Ath. Pr. ii.26) the condition of things is quite different: while the whole number of collisions is much less (only ninety-five), the sibilant is introduced in considerably more than two-thirds of them (in sixty-seven cases, against twenty-eight). The comparison is of some interest in its bearing upon the question of the relative age of the two texts.

CHAPTER VII.

CONTENTS: 1-12, cases of the conversion of n into ṇ; 13-14, of t and th into ṭ and ṭh; 15-16, exceptions to the conversion of n into ṇ.

अथ नकारो णकारम् ॥ १ ॥

1. Now for conversion of n into ṇ.

An introductory heading, stating the subject of the chapter (with the exception of rules 13 and 14). We have treated here all the cases with which the Prātiçākhyā has properly to deal, as arising in the process of conversion of pada-text into saṃhitā: chapter thirteen (rule 6 seq.) takes up the occurrence of n in a different way, determining every instance in which that letter is found in the whole Sanhitā.

पुष्कधिसुवःसमिन्द्रास्थूरुवाःपट्त्रियामनिष्पूर्वः ॥ २ ॥

2. N becomes n when preceded by shu, shû, kr̥dhi suvah, saṃ indra, asthûri, uru, vâh, shat, tri, grâma, or nih.

The commentator's illustrative examples are as follows. For shu, ûrdhva 'u shu nah (iv.1.4² and v.1.5³: O. omits the first word); and, as counter-example, gr̥heshu nah (ii.4.5¹), where shu, not being a complete word, does not (by i.50) lingualize the nasal: but G. M. omit this passage and the accompanying explanation. For shû, mo shû na indra (i.8.3). The commentator points out

1. athe 'ty ayam adhikārah: nakāro ṇakāram āpadyata ity etad adhikṛtaṃ veditavyam ita uttaraṃ yad vakshyāmaḥ.

2. ----- evampārvo nakāro ṇakāram āpadyate. yathā: 'ûrdh-----: 'gr̥h----- ity atra ṇatvaṃ na bhavati padagrahaneshv (i.50) iti vacanāt: mo-----: susû ity etayor yadā shatvaṃ nā 'sti tadā ṇatvanishedhārtham vāikṛtagrahaṇam: ya- that shu and shū are cited in the rule in their altered form (not as su simply, which, by i.51, would include them both) in order to indicate that where their consonant is not lingualized they do not lingualize the following nasal; and he quotes in illustration su na ūtaye (iv.1.4²) and sū na indra (i.8.3). Both these passages are the same which have been already quoted to illustrate the conversion, and G. M. O. very properly put them into the form of another text (apparently a krama), reading su nah: na ūtaye, and sū nah: na indra. Shu converts n to n also at iv.6.5⁶. For krđhi svāh, the passage is brahmaṇā krđhi svar na cukram (ii.2.12⁶: O. omits the first word: the Calcutta edition has the false reading na); and the necessity of krđhi is shown by the counter-example svāhā svar nā 'rkaḥ svāhā (v.7.5²: O. omits the first word). For saṁ indra, saṁ indra no manasā (i.4.44¹); and vartaye 'ndra nardabuda (iii.3.10¹) shows that indra when not preceded by saṁ does not exercise the prescribed influence. For asthāri, asthāri no gārhapatyāni santu (v.7.2¹: only O. has santu). For uru, uru nas krđhi (ii.6.11³ and vi.3.2²): there is another like case at iv.7.14². For vāh, tasmād vār nāma ro hitam (v.6.1³: G. M. omit the last two words). For shat, shannavatyāi svāhā (vii.2.15). For tri, trinava stomo vasāndm (iv.3.9¹: G. M. O. omit the last word): the word trinava is found in a considerable number of other passages. For grāma, W. B. give grāmanī rājanyah (ii.5.4⁴), but G. M. O. have instead grāmanīyam prā 'pnuvanti (vii.4.5²): the word is found once more, at iv.4.3¹. For nih, nir nenijati tato 'dhi (vii.2.10²: G. M. omit the last two words); and nī no rayim (ii.2.12³) is added, to show that nī, without visarjanīya, has no alterant force. Nir nenikte (vii.2.10⁴) and nirñij (iv.6.8¹) are the only other cases I have noted for nih.

3. Also in hanyāt and upyamānam.

पारीपरिपरीप्रपूर्वः ॥४॥

4. Also after pârî, pari, parî, and pra.

The illustrative citations of the commentator are pârînahyasye "çe (vi.2.1¹), pari no rudrasya (iv.5.10⁴), vîravantam parîna- sum (ii.2.12⁶), and pra no devî sarasvatî (i.8.22¹: O. omits the last word). For pârî (p. pârî-nahyasya: compare iii.7) there is no other case; nor for pari (p. pari-nasam: compare iii.7); for parî, I find only parî nayati (ii.3.4³ et al.). But for pra the examples are quite numerous: we have pra nah at i.5.11⁴; 6.4³; 7.10² twice: ii.5.12¹; iii.1.11²; 3.11⁴; iv.2.6⁵; v.5.7⁵; vii.4.19⁴; pra nâmâ- pranîti (but p. su-pranîti) at i.5.11⁵ et al., prametar at iii.5.11³, and pranava at iii.2.9⁶. Parâmutti occurs only in composition (vi.2.3²; p. bhrâtrîya-parâmuttyâi).

5. And that, even when an a-vowel intervenes.

The word "even" (api) here brings down by implication, according to the commentator, the words in the preceding rule from pari on—that is to say, virtually, pari and pra, for there is no case of parî exercising such an effect. The examples for pari are agram pary anyat (ii.3.4³: all but O. omit agram: I find besides only pary anyan, at vi.5.7²), and paryânîyâ havanîyasya (vii.1.6⁶). For pra, we have prânîya svâhâ (vii.1.19¹; p. pra-anîya), and anu prâ nyât prathamâm (v.5.5²; p. pre 'ti: anyât: only O. has anu). The occurrence of prâna is very frequent: of other cases, I have noted only prâ 'nudata at vi.2.3², and prâ 'nudanta at vi.4.10³⁻⁴—where, however, the lingualization of the n is suspended in our text, as at present constituted, by the intervention between the preposition and the verb of the pause which separates the third and fourth divisions of the section.

A couple of counter-examples are given, to show us that the intervention of a letter of any other complexion than a prevents the change of nasal: they are pari minuyât sapta (v.2.6³: G. M. omit the last word), and pramînâma vratâni (i.1.14⁴).

वाहनउद्यमानोयानमयन्यवेनवच्च ॥ ६ ॥

6. Also in vâhanah, uhyamânah, yânam, ayan, yavena, and van.

According to W. B. O., the n becomes n in these words "when they are preceded as implied by the word 'also' (ca)," the commentary failing to tell us what this implication is. G. M., however, confess that pra only is brought forward (from rule 4): which is a marked departure from the ordinary usage of the treatise, since in the intermediate rule pra and pari were both distinctly understood. The commentator omits, not to say avoids, noticing the irregularity. Perhaps he would be justified in claiming that pari and pari are never found preceding the words specified in the rule, and that therefore it makes no difference whether they be regarded as implied or not: still, even that consideration would not wholly excuse the want of accuracy and consistency. The examples are: for vâhanah, pravâhano vahniḥ (i.3.3; p. pra-vâhanah); to this, W. adds a counter-example, to show that, after any other word than pra, vâhanah remains unchanged—namely havyavâhanah çvâtro 'si (i.3.3): B. tries to do the same, but only succeeds in repeating one of the counter-examples of the last rule, pari minuyât (v.2.6³), which is not at all in place here. For uhyamânah, prohyamâno 'dhîpatih (iv.4.9: p. pro-uhyamânah). For yânam, prayânam anv anyā id yayuh (iv.1.1²; p. pra-yânam: O omits the last three words, G. M. the last two). Ayan is declared a part of a word, including a number of cases, of which G. M. give only three, tasmād ādityaḥ prayāntīyah (vi.1.5¹; p. pra-ayanīyah: O. omits tasmāt), prayāntīyaṁ kāryam (vi.1.5^{3,5}), and prayānam pratishthām (i.6.11¹: p. pra-ayanam); while W. B. O. add two others, prayāntīyasya puronuvākyaḥ (vi.1.5⁵), and prayāntīye 'han (vii.2.8¹). There are a number of other passages for prayāntīya; and prayāna occurs again at i.6.11² and vii.1.13, besides its compounds, suprāyana (v.1.11²; p. su-prāyanāḥ) and agnisṭomaprāyana (vii.2.9¹; p. agnisṭoma-prāyanāḥ). For yavena, prayavena pañca (iv.3.11²; p. pra-yavena). Van, again, is (by W. alone) declared a part of a word, intended to include many cases: only two are given, yadi vā tāvat pravānam (ii.4.12¹), and āhavanīyāt pravānaṁ syāt (vi.2.6⁴), nor have I found any other, except the compound purastātpravānaḥ (v.3.1⁵; p. purastātpravānaḥ). Finally, we have a couple of counter-examples, showing the necessity of the implication from the preceding rule: they are asī havyavāhanaḥ (i.3.3), and udayanam veda (i.6.11²).

7. As also, when preceded by prā.

The "also" (ca) of this rule brings forward from the preceding rule only the word last mentioned there, namely van. The example is prāvanebhiḥ sajoshasuh (iv.2.4³; p. pra-vanebhiḥ: compare iii.5). I have noted no other case.

8. Also enam and kena, when preceded respectively by indrah and ayajuh.

There is nothing in the rule meaning 'respectively,' and if enam were found anywhere in the text preceded by ayajuh, or kena by indrah, their n's would doubtless require lingualization: yet the evident intent of the precept is as translated. The passages are indra enam prathamah (iv.6.7¹), and yad ayajushkena kriyate (v.1.2¹; p. ayajuh-kena: G. M. O. omit yat). I find no other cases falling under the rule: there are, however, one or two other forms, analogous with the latter of those here contemplated, which we might expect to find treated in the same way, namely anācīr-kena and sācīrkena (i.6.10⁴); but they are written by the pada-text without division of ācīrkena, or restoration in it of the dental n (thus: anācīrkena, and sa-ācīrkena).

Counter-examples are added: to show that enum and kena, when otherwise preceded, retain their dental nasals, rudra enam bhātvā (iii.4.10³), and brahmavādinaḥ kena tad ajāmī 'ti (vii.4.10²: G. M. O. end with kena); to show that indrah does not exercise a lin-

9. Also manāh, when preceded by nṛ or śrī.

The examples are nṛmanā ajasram (i.3.14⁵ and iv.2.2¹: W. reads yantrī instead of ajasram, but doubtless by a copyist's blunder, for nṛmanā yantrī is not found in the Sanhitā), and śrīmanāh gataparyāh (iv.6.3²); with the counter-example sumanā upāguhi (iii.3.11⁵). Of śrīmanāh I find no other example; nṛmanāh occurs also at iv.2.2¹ (a second time) and vii.1.12.

10. Also aṅgānām, one, gāni, gānām, gyāni, and yāmena.

These words in saṁhitā, says the commentator: that is to say, in the only cases in which they occur as padus, they take ṇ in the combined text. The passages are: yat tryaṅgānāṁ sumavadyati (vi.3.10⁶; p. tri-aṅgānām: only G. M. O. have yat, and O. omits the last word), āyushi durone (i.2.14³; p. duḥ-one: the pada-texts of the Rik and Atharvan do not separate this word), ati durgāni viçvā (i.1.14⁴; p. duḥ-gāni, like the other Vedas), purogānām cakshushe (iii.2.4⁴; p. puraḥ-gānām), suvargyāny āsan (v.3.5³; p. suvaḥ-gyāni), and anturyāmenā ntur adhatta (vi.4.6¹; p. antah-yāmena: O. omits the last word). I have found no second example for any of these words, although there may be occurrences of durone which I have overlooked.

11. Also havani, ahne, han, when preceded by r or shaḥ.

The cited examples are raha (i.6.8³; p. agnihotra-havani); śarady (i.2.14⁶; p. para-ahne: the Atharvan has apara-ahnah); and further, for han, which is declared to be a part of a word, involving several cases, rakshohanam (i.2.14⁶ et al.; p. rakshaḥ-hanam: O. omits this example), vāish- navī rakshohanāu (i.3.2²: G. M. omit the first word), and vṛtra-haṇam purāṇidaram (iii.5.11⁴ and iv.1.3³; p. vṛtra-haṇam: G. M. omit the last word). For han, besides the compounds here quoted, which are found repeatedly in other passages, the Sanhitā affords us also avīrahaṇāu (i.2.8²; p. avīra-haṇāu); for the other two words I know of no additional examples. Counter-examples are given, namely sāhna evā 'smāi (vi.6.11⁴; p. sa-ahne), and va-lagahanah (i.3.2¹ et al.).

There is good ground for questioning the correctness of the commentator's interpretation of ra in the rule as signifying the letter r (repha), and not the syllable ra. In none of the examples given are the words specified directly preceded by r, and it is not at all in accordance with the usage of the treatise to describe as "having r before it" a word preceded by another word containing r. All the versions of the comment, however, unite in this interpretation, and it is farther assured by the quotation of the rule above, under i.19, as a case in which r is called ra, instead of repha. It looks as if G. M. had made a blundering attempt to remedy the difficulty by reading the third word ahan instead of han, and also by understanding shah to mean 'the letter sh' (see the various readings, below), thus parallelizing the two specifications. The attempt, however, is an abortive one, only issuing, if carried out, in a host of new difficulties. I have made the translation of the rule conform to the requirements of the comment, but with much misgiving, having hardly a doubt that the meaning properly is 'when preceded by ra or shah.'

रूपूर्वो मयान्यनी ॥ १२ ॥

The passages are dārumayāni pātrāni (vi.4.7³; p. dāru-mayāni: O. omits pātrāni; G. M. omit the whole example), and tre vasāni purāṇika hotah (i.3.14²⁻³; p. puru-anika: O. omits the first two words, G. M. the last): purāṇika is found also at

वाघापपूर्वस्तट्म् ॥ १३ ॥

13. After vāghā and sh, t is changed to ṭ.

The passage for vāghā is given by O. as dārvāghātas te (v.5.15¹); all the other MSS. have only the first word, in its complete pada-form, dārvāghāta iti dāru-āghātaḥ. The same word forms the subject of Vāj. Pr. iii.47. As counter-example, showing that ta does not become ṭa after ghā except when the latter follows vā, we have praghāta ādityānām (vi.1.13⁴). For the conversion of t to ṭ after sh is quoted āyush ṭa āyurdā agne (ii.5.12¹: G. M. omit the last word, O. the last two), whose sh depends on rule vi.5, above. O adds a counter-example for this second part of the rule also, namely agnis te tejah (i.1.10³ and vii.5.17).

14. Also th to ṭh.

The cited example is goshtham mā nirmrksham (i.1.10¹: W. B. omit the last word); to which O. alone adds prati shṭhāpayanti (vi.1.4²). As counter-example is given gacha goshānam (i.1.9^{1,2}).

15. But not when t follows.

The commentator explains the connection of this rule by pointing out that the two preceding do not come under the introductory heading of the chapter—that is to say, that they deal with a subject unconnected with the rest of its contents—and that hence they are regarded as dropped out, and the present exception does not apply to them, but to the foregoing rules, for conversion of n into ṇ. This is well enough, though not a little awkward, as concerns the status of rule 15; but we should like to hear what he had to say in defense of the intrusion of rules 13 and 14 thus into a chapter where they do not belong, and where they sorely disturb the natural and desirable connection. Considering their near relation to the rules of the preceding chapter, they might better have been added there as an appendix; or else put at the head of chapter vii., before its general adhikāra.

Only a single illustrative example is quoted, namely pary antarikshāt (iii.1.10²), where rules 4 and 5 of this chapter combined would require an at the beginning of the second word, but for the exception here made.

This precept is an anticipation of one of the items of xiii.15, below, and might properly enough be looked upon as open to the charge of punarukti, or unnecessary repetition, which the treatise so carefully shuns, and the commentator not seldom labors hard to remove. It is characteristic of the method of the Tāittirīya-Prātiçākhyā that it does not attempt to state the real nimitta or occasion of the lingual n in the words rehearsed here, although it does so, fully and distinctly, in rule xiii.6, where the subject of the occurrence of n in the interior of a word is taken up.

16. Nor in nahyati, nūnam, nṛtyanti, anyaḥ, anyābhiḥ, anyāni; nor when final.

The ca in this rule indicates the continuance of the exception. These words, and a final n, are not subject to the rules given in the chapter for the substitution of lingual n. The commentator quotes as follows. For nahyati, vāsasā paryānahyati (vi.1.11²; p. pari-ānahyati: O. omits the first word): he notes that the case constitutes an exception to rule 5. For nūnam, prā nūnam pār-ṇuvandhurāḥ (i.8.5¹: O. omits the last word). For nṛtyanti, pari nṛtyanti (vii.5.10). For the three cases of anya, prā 'nyaḥ gāṁsati (vii.5.9³), prā 'nyābhir yachaty anv anyāi mantrayate (v.1.6⁴: O. omits prā in all these three examples, and in this, along with G. M., the last three words; B. omits the last word), and prā 'nyāni pātrāṇi (vi.5.11^{1,2}): the commentator remarks that all these (since nahyati) are cases of exceptions under rule 4. He then proceeds to raise the question why the three complete words are quoted in the rule, instead of the syllable an, which would include them all; and makes the very obvious answer, that it is on account of the passage anu prā 'nyāt prathamām (v.5.5²), already quoted under vii.5. Finally, as example of final n exempt from conversion, he cites vṛtrahañ chūra vidvān (i.4.42), remarking that it is a case otherwise falling under rule 11.

The exception of a final n from becoming ṇ is also one of those made below, in rule xiii.15, for the class of cases to which that chapter relates.

I have not discovered in the Sanhitā any case of a lingual nasal arising in the conversion of pada-text into saṃhitā which is not duly provided for in this chapter.

1. Now for changes of first mutes.

That is to say, of surds unaspirated, or k, c (only c nowhere occurs as a final), t, t, and p. The force of this heading only reaches, as the commentary points out, through rule 4—hardly far enough, one would think, to make a separate introductory rule necessary.

2. A first mute, followed by a last mute, becomes a last mute of its own series.

The examples selected by the commentator to illustrate this mode of combination are vāñ ma āsan (v.5.9²), shannavatyāi svāhā (vii.2.15), and tan mahendrasya (vi.5.5³). For the conversion of p into m he is able to offer no instance, as none occurs in the Sanhitā. As counter-examples, showing that only a nasal causes the conversion, and causes it only in a "first" mute, he brings up vāk ta ā pyāyatām (i.3.9¹: only G. M. have the last word), and imām no vācam (vi.4.7³).

All the Prāṭicākhyas join in treating this conversion as necessary, not as alternative with conversion into a sonant (see note to Ath. Pr. ii.5).

3. Followed by a vowel or a sonant consonant, it becomes a third mute.

The examples are ṛdhag ayād ṛdhag utu (i.4.44²), and yad vāi hotā (iii.2.9¹).

4. Also in kakut, when m follows.

Namely, in the passage kakudmān pratūrtir vājasātamaḥ (i.7.7²; p. kakut-mān: G. M. O. omit the last word). As counter-examples are given ya unmādyet (iii.4.8⁴: G. M. O. omit yah), and, according to W. B., kakut trayastriṅgaḥ (vii.2.5³); for which G. M. O. substitute kakuc chandaḥ (iv.3.12²). The commentator notices, finally, that the present rule establishes an exception to rule 2 of this chapter.

5. Now for changes of visarjanīya.

Departing a little from his stereotyped mode of explanation of atha, the commentary declares it in this rule to cause visarjanīya to be understood, in the character of that respecting which something is to be enjoined (lakshya), in the precepts that follow; and he adds that this understanding is to remain in force as far as rule 10 of the next chapter.

6. Visarjanīya becomes r before the classes of sounds last mentioned.

The examples are tad agnir āha (iv.2.8¹), and ācīr ma ūrjam (iii.2.8⁵: O. omits ūrjam); with the counter-example agniḥ ca me indraḥ ca me (iv.7.6¹). The commentator points out that it is the plural form of the pronoun (eteshu, literally 'before those') in this rule that shows the implication of the vowels and sonant consonants, in the character of following causes (paranīmitta), since those are the only things which have been mentioned above (namely, in rule 3). That is doubtless so; still, the reference must be regarded as an unusually blind one, involving a "frog-leap" (maṇḍākapluti) over two intervening obstacles, of which one is a general heading, that changes entirely the subject under treatment.

7. But not before r.

R, although a sonant consonant, and therefore included in the preceding rule, requires a different treatment in the final visarjanīya before it. What this different treatment is, is pointed out farther on in the chapter (rule 16 seq.). The examples here given are suvo rohāva (i.7.9¹), and ahorātre (i.5.9⁷ et al.: W. O. add pārcve, but there is no such collocation of words in the Sanhitā, and I suspect the word to be a corrupted reading for prāvīṣan, which follows next at the place referred to).

8. Visarjanīya becomes r in hvāh, abhāh, vāh, hāh, abibhah, ajigah, akah, anantah, vivah, suvaḥ, punaḥ, aharah, prātaḥ, vastah, ṣamitah, savitah, sanutah, stanutah, stotah, hotah, pitah, mātaḥ, yashtaḥ, eshtaḥ, neshtaḥ, and tvashṭah.

With this rule begins the detail of the cases of an original r after u and ā, which is protected and brought to light by a following sonant letter, being treated in quite a different manner from an original s, although both r and s are represented, as finals, by the indifferent visarjanīya. The commentator points out at the end the rules to which these cases constitute exceptions, namely ix.7,9,10. His illustrative examples are as follows. For hvāh, according to W. B., mā hvār mītrasya (i.1.4¹); but, according to G. M. O., mā hvār vasūnām (i.1.3): I have found the word only in these two sections. For abhāh, yonāv abhār ukhā (iv.2.5²). For vāh, vār nāma vo hitam (v.6.1³). For hāh, mā me pra hār asti vā idam (ii.4.12^{3,4}; vi.5.1^{1,2}: only G. M. have the last two words): the word is found also at ii.4.12⁵; 5.23⁵. For abibhah, as the only passage where it occurs (ii.5.1²) does not exhibit in smṛhitā the final r, we have the jatā-text quoted, namely abibhas tam tam abibhar abibhas tam. Ajigah, for the same reason, is treated in the same way in W. B. O., namely oshadhīr ajigar ajigar oshadhīr oshadhīr ajigah: ajigar ity ajigah (iv.6.7³); but G. M. read simply oshadhīr ajigah. For akah, devatrā 'kar ajakshīreṇa (v.1.7⁴: G. M. omit the last word): it is found also at i.3.14² twice; 5.23³; ii.4.9²; 5.7¹; iii.1.10³; 4.10⁴; iv.1.2⁴; v.2.1⁴, 8⁷; vi.4.8¹. As for this akah, the commentator supposes the objection raised that rule 9, which teaches that kaḥ and āvah change h to r in an unaccented word, combined with rule i.52, which would extend the force of that rule to kaḥ with a prefixed, is sufficient to cover the cases of its occurrence, without separate mention in the present rule; but he denies the pertinence of the objection, on the ground that the specification here made includes all instances of akah, without regard to their accentuation—for example, ākah at iv.1.2⁴, which is accented on the first syllable, but exhibits r in its jatā-reading, ārvā' 'kar ākar ārvā' 'rvā' 'kah. For anantah, yajñaparusho 'nantarītyāi (v.2.5⁶). A precisely similar objection is suggested to this word also, on the ground of rules viii.10 and i.53 combined; and it is similarly repelled, by reference to the difference of accent: ānantar has the acute on the first syllable, which rule 10 forbids. For vivah is given, again in jatā-text, ca vivar vivah ca ca virah: vivar iti vivah (iv.2.8²; only O. has the final repetition of vivah: the Atharvan reads vi vah, as two separate words, in the corresponding passage, iv.1.1). For suvaḥ, suvar asi suvar me yacha (v.7.6²: O. omits the last word): the numerous passages in which this word occurs it would be quite useless to rehearse. For punaḥ, punar āsadya sadanam (iv.2.3³: O. omits the last word): this, too, is of too frequent occurrence to be worth detailed reference. For aharahāḥ, aharahar havirdhāninām (ii.5.6³): the same repetition of ahāḥ is found further at i.5.9⁶ twice,⁷; ii.5.6⁶. In connection herewith is made the remark that ahāḥ when not at the end of a separable compound is the subject of rule 13, below; but that that rule does not apply to a case like the one here in hand. For prātaḥ, prātar upasadaḥ (vi.2.3³): prātaḥ is found also at i.4.7: ii.1.2⁵; 5.6³: iii.1.7¹; 3.8⁴; 4.10¹; vi.4.2¹. For vastaḥ, doshā-vastar dhiyā vayam (i.5.6²; p. doshā-vastaḥ): also at i.2.14⁴. For ṣamitaḥ, ṣṛtaṇ havish ṣamitar iti trishatyāḥ (vi.3.10¹: only G. M. have the first word, only O. the last). For savitaḥ, deva savitar etat te (iii.2.7¹): the word is found also in about a dozen other passages. For sanutaḥ, ārdc cid dveshaḥ sanutar yuyutu (i.7.13⁵). For stanutaḥ we are simply referred to "another text" (śākhāntara): but G. M. read sanutar, and omit stanutar in the rule itself. For stotaḥ, etaṇ stotar etena (vii.4.20). For hotaḥ, hotar yavishtha sukrato (i.2.14⁵: O. omits the last word): also at i.3.14³; 6.2²; iv.3.13²; v.1.4⁵; vi.3.8²; 4.3³. For pitaḥ, resort is had to the jaṭā-reading, since the only passage (iii.3.9¹) in which the word occurs does not bring to view the r: thus, marutām pitaḥ pitar marutām marutām pitaḥ. For mātaḥ, prthivi mātur mā mā hī-sīh (iii.3.2²: O. omits the last word). For yashtaḥ, agne yashtar idam namaḥ (i.1.12). For eshtaḥ, again a jaṭā-reading, aśy' eshtar eshtar aśyā 'cīy' eshtaḥ (i.2.11¹): its treatment before the word which follows it in saṁhitā is the subject of rules 18–22 of this chapter; that of the preceding word, of x.14. For neshtaḥ, once more the jaṭā is drawn upon, neshtaḥ patnīm patnīm neshtar neshtaḥ patnīm (vi.5.8⁶). For trashtaḥ, finally, śivas trashtar ihā³ gahī (iii.1.11²: O. omits the last word): also at i.3.7¹, 10¹; iii.1.11¹; vi.3.6², 11².

The commentary adds a couple of counter-examples, illustrative of the fact that these words show their r only before a vowel or sonant consonant: they are abibhas tam bhātāni (ii.5.1²), and pu-nas te mātī 'shām (iv.7.14³).

suruco vena āvaḥ: āvar ity āvaḥ (iv.2.8²: G. M. O. omit suru-cah). For āvaḥ I find no other example; kaḥ occurs further at i.4.45¹; ii.2.12¹. As counter-examples, kò 'syē "gvarāḥ (ii.6.7¹), and ā'vo vā'jeshu yām jund'h (i.3.13²: G. M. omit the last two words; O. omits the whole passage) show the necessity of the specification respecting accent; while adhīpām akah samashtyāi (vi.1.7⁶) shows that the r appears only before a sonant letter.
This last example, it may be remarked, is brought under the action of the rule by i.52: it would be an example also under the preceding rule; compare what is there said in connection with the cited word akah.

अन्तरनायुदत्ते ॥ १० ॥

10. Also in antah, except when accented on the first syllable.

The cited examples are: antār agne rucā' tvām (iv.1.9³; 2.1⁵), agnīm antār bharishyānti (iv.1.3²: O. omits the first word), and antaryāmē maghavan (vi.4.6³: but O. omits the example—reasonably enough, since it is given again later in this very comment, in illustration of a special point). It were to no good end to rehearse the other cases of occurrence of so common a word. To show the necessity of the restriction respecting accent, the commentator quotes eshō 'ntō 'ntam manushyāḥ (vii.2.7²), where we have the noun ānta, which the rule was especially constructed to avoid including. To prove, again, the continued implication of "followed by a sonant letter," is given antās te dudhāmi (i.4.3 and vi.4.6¹⁻²). Then the comment proceeds to justify the form in which the restriction respecting accent is made in the rule: it might have been said, "when accented on the last syllable;" but then the rule would have applied only under those circumstances; whereas now is included the case when the word is not accented at all, as in antarvedī mīthund'u (vii.5.9⁴; p. antah-vedī) and antaryāmē maghavan (vi.4.6³, as above: but G. M. omit).
The mode of statement selected, however, it may be remarked, has this inconvenience—that it renders necessary the separate specification, in rule 8, of anantah, because that combination, where it occurs, happens to be "accented on the first syllable" (see note to rule 8). It would appear to admit of question, indeed, whether ânantah was not fairly included in the present rule, since the antah part of it, at any rate, is not "accented on the first;" but the treatise chooses to avoid so nice a question of interpretation, and to take the safe side.

11. Also a visarjanîya followed by âvrt.

The quoted examples are jinvar âvrt svâhâ and ugnar âvrt svâhâ (both ii.4.7¹: B. has bhîmar for ugnar; O. reads in each case âvrt, according to the requirements of rule xiv.12). Other instances in the same and following divisions of the same section are bhîmar âvrt, tveshar âvrt, grutar âvrt, and bhûtar âvrt. The anomalous combination does not occur elsewhere.

12. And likewise when iti follows.

The word api in this rule, we are told, brings forward the implication of "a visarjanîya followed by âvrt." According to the commentator's exposition, further, the rule is intended to apply to the jatâ repetition of grutah with its predecessor iti: as, iti grutah grutar iti 'ti grutah (ii.4.7²). Nor do I see of what other interpretation it is capable, although it seems strange that the irregular conversion of h into r should be retained in the jatâ-reading of this word only, and not of the others, where repeated with their respective predecessors. It is clearly implied that we are to read, for example, in the first case falling under the preceding rule, varshan jinvo jinvo varshan varshan jinevâh.

As counter-example, showing the necessity of the implication signified by api, we receive rtubhir havanagrutah (ii.4.14³: G. M. O. omit the first word; G. M. add havam, but no such word follows in the Sanhitâ, and the addition is doubtless a copyist's error—possibly growing out of the attempt to repeat the compound, in its padâ or jatâ form). Here both the padâ-text (as the word is a compound) and the jatâ (as it stands before a pause) would read havanagruta iti havana-grutah, the ordinary sandhi being made of grutah and iti.

13. Also in ahâh, ahah, and suvaḥ, except at the end of a separable word.

There is a well-established difference of reading in the text itself of this rule. T. and W. read the last word anīgyāntāḥ, as plural, to agree with the three words mentioned, or else with the three cases of visarjanīya which they present; and at the beginning of the comment, both in W. and in O., is seen an attempt to explain the word as a plural—not, however, consistently carried out in either. As both readings are equally acceptable, I have adopted the one which is best supported.

The examples given in illustration of the rule are ahār jātavedā vicarshanīh (iii.2.5⁴: O. omits the last word), ahar māñsena (v.7.20: but G. M. substitute aharbhdjo vāi, vii.4.5¹), and suvar devāñ uganma (i.7.9²: O. omits the last word): and, as counter-examples, first, to show that the h in the words specified, when they stand as final members of compounds, is treated in the usual manner, abhipūrvam tryahā bhavanti (vii.3.9² et al.; p. tri-ahāh: O. omits the first word), pratyañ tryaho bhavati (vii.3.5³ et al.; p. tri-ahah: but B. has dropped out the whole example, and G. M. O. substitute, O. with omission of the first word, pratyañ shad-aho bhavati, vii.4.2⁵), and devasuva stha te (i.8.10²: but W. B. O. give simply the pada-reading of devasuvaḥ, namely devasuva iti deva-suvaḥ, since thus alone is the word put into circumstances which show its h not to be convertible into r); and second, to show that the conversion takes place only before sonant letters, prāyañīyam ahas tasmāt (vii.2.8¹: O. omits the first word), and suvaḥ ca mūrdhā ca (i.7.9¹ and iv.7.11²).

The commentator then proceeds to give an explanation, so far as ahāh is concerned, respecting the virtual intent of the rule, which, he says, is meant to establish an exception for that word when the final member of a compound; since the inclusion of hāh among the words cited in rule 8 would, under the operation of the often-quoted rule i.52, be authority sufficient for turning ahāh into ahār before a sonant letter: Upon this he next imagines the objection to be raised, that the reading in this rule also, as well as the other, should have been hāh, ahāh being then included along with it according to the principle referred to; and thus the liability to reproach for over-doing the explicitness of the rule would be avoided. But he replies, reasonably enough, that, as the rule says "when not the final member of a separable word," it is to be inferred that the words specified do occur as such members: and with hāh that is not the case; wherefore the distinction would be meaningless with reference to hāh. And it would be a poor enough side to take, and altogether unworthy of approval, to give a direction which did not apply to a word itself, but only to that word with a prefixed. Hence the quotation is made in proper form.

Just as long a disension might have been raised with equal reason over ahāh and suvaḥ, both of which are also included in the former rule. So far as ahāh is concerned, indeed, it is easy to see that this is the general rule, applying to the cases of occurrence of that word in the main, with a specific restriction; and that ahar-ahāh in rule 8 is a sort of exception in advance, made for a single case which would otherwise fall under this restriction (since, in ahāh-ahāh, the second ahāh is in fact the final member of a compound). But I am unable to discover any justification of the way in which suvaḥ is treated: it is made the subject of two general rules, to the one of which a needed restriction is attached, to the other, not. For ahāh and suvaḥ, the present rule should, it seems, have taken distinctly the form of an exception merely: nā 'hāh-suvar iṅgyāntāu; 'not, however, ahāh and suvaḥ, when final members of compounds;' and ahāh should have been separately treated, or else included with them and a further counter-exception added.

14. Not, however, when followed by bhih or bhyām.

There is violation of the ordinary usage of the Prāṭiśākhya in this rule also. The only one of the words mentioned in the preceding rule which is found with the case-endings bhih and bhyām following it is ahāh; and hence, to it alone the present precept applies. We should expect it, therefore, in accordance with the principle of which i.58 is an expression, to have been placed last in the trio of which it forms a member. The commentator does not remark upon the irregularity, but simply points out that the 15. Also not in añḥah, as all agree.

Some authorities, namely, the commentator informs us, accept this word as containing an anusvāra, others not; but all alike regard it as an exception under rule 13 (and therefore not liable to have its final visarjanīya converted into r under any circumstances). Those who accept the anusvāra still regard the word as falling under the action of rule 13, in virtue of the principle "a nose-sound occurring in the interior of a word is no bar to the application of a rule; hence it performs the offices of letters while itself only a quality" (if this be, in fact, the meaning of the second line of the verse, of which I am by no means confident; the readings of the manuscripts are here somewhat discordant, without being mutually explanatory). The first words of this verse were quoted in the comment on rule i.1, in connection with the discussion as to whether anusvāra was a concrete thing or a quality (see p. 8), and were credited to the Çikshā—which, however, in the form in which we now possess it, neither contains such a passage, nor seems to furnish a connection in which it should naturally be introduced. I should question the sober verity of the considerations whereby the commentator tries to justify the rule. It is hardly credible that añḥah and ahah should be fairly identified by any authorities. And anusvāra is not a nāsikya, but an anu-nāsika, in the view of this treatise every where. It might be bet-

The illustrative examples are añha indram evā 'ñhomucam (ii.2.7⁴: but O. writes ---- eva: añhomucam, as if the latter word were a separate citation: it is found in other passages), and añhomuce pra bharema (i.6.12³: but O. substitutes añhomuce puroḍāṣam, ii.2.7⁴).

16. But, when not preceded by an a-vowel, visarjanīya followed by r is omitted.

The commentator's example in illustration of the action of this rule is revatī ramadhvam (i.3.7¹ et al.; p. revatīḥ); and he adds as counter-examples, first, to show the necessity of the restriction "not preceded by an a-vowel," yo rudro agnāu (v.5.9³), and again, to show that the omission takes place only before a r, revatīr nah sadhamādah (ii.2.12³; 4.14⁴). This exhausts the evident intent of the rule: the tu, 'but,' which the latter contains, merely indicates the transition to a new and diverse subject; it intimates no distinction between the classes of cases in which the visarjanīya represents a s on the one hand and an original r on the other; and all the cases of final aḥ and āḥ are left to be treated alike, as prescribed by the rules given hereafter (ix.7-10)—aḥ being changed to o, and āḥ to ā. This truly represents the usage of the Sanhitā: the latter does not contain (if the special case which forms the subject of rules 18-22, below, be excepted) a single instance of aḥ converted into ā before r: the occurrence before r of aḥ standing for original ar is very rare, and the product is always o: besides the cases of ahorātre (pada-text, ahaḥ-rātre), I have Pr. iv.9, r. 28, 29; Vāj. Pr. iv.34; Ath. Pr. ii.19, iii.20) convert ah to ā in like circumstances; and at least the Rik and Atharvan afford several instances of the sandhi.

So much for the rule and its meaning. The commentator, unfortunately, has found occasion to give it a forced and false interpretation; it leads him into a nest of difficulties, through which he flounders as best he can, coming out at the end with much discredit. There happens to be a single passage (or, if there be another, I have not noticed it) where a word with original final r follows in the Sanhitā a word beginning with r—namely rukmo antaḥ (iv.1.10⁴⁻⁵; 6.5²; 7.12³)—and, of course, in the inversions of the ajāta-text, comes to stand before its predecessor. The accepted ajāta-reading, it appears (as given in full by the commentator), is rukmo antar antā rukmo rukmo antaḥ, the analogy of the Rik and Atharvan usage being followed in the treatment of antaḥ. In order, now, to find authority for this reading, the commentator declares that tu, 'but,' in the rule signifies that, even when preceded by an a-vowel, the words specified in rule 8 and its successors lose their visarjanīya and lengthen the preceding vowel. This is an attribution of portentous pregnancy of meaning to the particle such as is not very infrequently made, rarely with more evident falsity than here. The objection is immediately suggested—why, in that case, does not suvaḥ in suvo rohāva (i.7.9¹), lose its h and lengthen its a? Because, is the acute reply, it has been mentioned twice, once in rule 8, and once in rule 13. What possible connection is to be discovered between this repetition and the use to which he would fain put it, he does not give himself the trouble to inform us: he takes care to raise only such difficulties as he conceives himself able to remove. The next which it pleases him to evoke is—how is the o of ahorātre to be explained? We rather expect to hear him reply—because ahah also is twice mentioned, in the same two rules with suvaḥ. But no; we do injustice to the tenderness of his exegetical conscience, in supposing him capable of such gross arbitrariness of interpretation, when in rule 8, instead of ahah, aharahah is read. He alleges instead the competency of a form cited for another purpose (compare Rik Pr. i.13, r. liv,55): we have read in rule iv.11 ahorātre, where the pragrahas are under treatment, and this suffices, by analogy of form, to determine the reading also of ahorātrābhyām and ahorātrayoḥ. If this be so, it is next retorted, then, as the śh of adhishavane, which is cited in the same rule, is assured by the citation itself, rule vi.11, prescribing the śh, in the way of an exception to an exception, is out of order. That is true, the commentator confesses: but, granting that the śh of sava is established by the previous mention of adhishavane, how is that of sthāna, the other word specified in the same rule, established? the rule is therefore to be deemed of force so far as relates to that word, and to be regarded as intended for it. Of what follows, not all is clear to me: it appears that the rule is, after all, defended as it stands, on “the principle of sugar-candy and little tongue” (i. e. as merely giving more than is absolutely required of what one cannot receive too much of, as the palate of candy—?): for to establish the reading on the authority of a previous citation is only doing just what will answer (? ga-manikā occurs in only one other passage, the comment on i.18, and I find nowhere any thing that explains its use), while specific mention is a distinction; hence the rule has a meaning as applied to sava also: such is the understanding.

The commentator might much better, surely, have acknowledged that his text-book had omitted to provide for the special case of jaṭā-reading which has caused all this trouble, than have forced it within the contemplation of the rules at such cost.

17. And the preceding vowel is made long.

The “and” (ca) in the rule is declared to signify that the lengthening of the vowel takes place only when visarjanīya has been omitted. The cited examples are rurū rūdraḥ (v.5.19), tittiri roḥit (v.5.16), and viṣṇū rūpaṁ kṛtvā (vi.2.4²: only G. M. have the last word). As was noticed in the comment upon the preceding rule, there is no such case of ah changed to ā before r, except the one forming the special subject of the following rules.

18. As also, in eshtāh.

This word has been already mentioned, in rule 8, as one of those whose final h is liable to become r. It is here made the further subject of a special rule, because it is the only case in the Sanhitā of ah changed to d before r (see the note to rule 16). The passage in which it occurs is eshtā rāyah (i.2.11¹ and vi.2.26⁶).

We have seen, however, that the commentator has felt obliged to give a false interpretation to rule 16, and one which renders superfluous the present rule, as applying to a case already included under that one. He is well aware of the objection to his interpretation thence arising, and himself points out that eshtā rāyo rāya eshtar eshtā rāyah (only W. gives this) is a case analogous with rukmo antar antā rukmo rukmo antah (W. B. omit the last two words), and that the loss of h and lengthening of a in eshtāh is an effect of the tu in rule 16; but he does what he can toward removing the objection by alleging that the detail of discordant opinions which is to follow (in the next four rules) renders it more desirable to cite the case specially, in order that it may be understood to what those opinions apply. This is a tolerably ingenious subterfuge—but, after all, only a subterfuge.

19. Not so, according to some authorities.

The commentator gives two alternative explanations of this rule—both, however, as he notices, leading to the same reading of the phrase under question. Vararuci, namely, holds that, in the view of some, the rule denies the conversion of h to r in eshtāh, and therefore also the prolongation of the a; whence, by the general rule ix.8, the word would become eshṭo (in analogy with all the other cases in the text of ah before r). Māhisheya, however, understands that some are said to deny that the h of eshtāh is liable to conversion into r before another r—that is to say, he makes the rule establish so far an exception under rule 8 rather than rule

18. There can be little question that Vararuci's explanation is the true one.

In rule 21, below, we have yet another mode taught of arriving at the same result as regards the reading.

द्वावुत्तमोत्तरीयस्य रेफम् ॥ २० ॥

20. According to Uttamottariya, two become r.

Here, again, there are two interpretations, Vararuci giving one, Māhisheya the other. The former says that, in the opinion of the specified authority (gākhin, 'holder of a gākhā or recension of the sacred text'), the visarjanīya of eshta and the following r both become r—that is, as I should think it ought to mean, both fuse together into a single r: thus, eshtarāyah—but none of the manuscripts give this reading in illustrating the case: see the various readings below. Māhisheya, on the other hand, regards the individual referred to as owning the portentous name Dvāvutamottariya, and as holding that the h of eshta becomes r before r, making eshtarāyah.

Vararuci here maintains, in my opinion, his usual superiority over Māhisheya, as regards both the plausibility of the name assumed and the admissibility of the reading taught; and I have accordingly made my translation conform with his interpretation.

It is interesting to note the uncertainty of the tradition within reach of the commentators as to the personality of the authorities quoted by the Prātiçākhyā.

to the "some authorities" quoted in rule 19, above. This is pointed out by the commentator; who, however, declares that the reference to Sâmkṛtya in a separate place shows that he is not one of the people there spoken of. B. specifies (probably by a copyist's blunder) that the exposition given of the meaning of the rule is to be credited to Māhisheya.

उख्यस्य सपूर्वः ॥ २२ ॥

22. And, according to Ukhyā, along with the preceding letter:

That is, eshtar becomes eshtu, the h and its predecessor a coalescing into u. This is the only exposition given by W. and O. But G. M. and B., strangely agreeing for once to differ from the rest, ascribe this understanding of the meaning of the rule to Māhisheya, and report Vararuci as holding it to signify that the h of eshtaḥ, with its predecessor, becomes r. This last version of the saṁdhi seems little better than nonsense, and neither of the MSS. gives a reading to correspond.

The commentator declares, finally, that, in this net-work of alternative views, the first rule only (viii.18) is approved. In accordance herewith is the reading of the edited text and of my manuscript, eshtā rāyaḥ.

The most interesting circumstance connected with this waste of half a dozen rules over the reading of a single word, is the indication afforded of the anomalousness of the combination as a phenomenon belonging to the Tāittirīya-Saṁhitā, while it is in other Vedic texts a natural and usual thing.

23. At the end of the former member of a compound, before k, kh, or p, visarjanîya becomes sh—or s, if preceded by a.

The commentator notes the fact that, as a different following occasion is here introduced, the implication “followed by a vowel or a sonant consonant,” which has so long been in force (namely, since rule 3 of this chapter), comes to an end. His illustrative examples are: atho havishkṛtānām eva (vi.4.3³: O. omits eva), grasitām nishkṛhidati (vi.1.9¹: O. omits the first word), bahishpavamāna upasadyah (vi.4.9²: O. omits the last word), namaskārāir evāi nam (v.5.7⁴: O. omits enam), and pathaspathaḥ paripatim (i.1.14²: O. omits the last word). As counter-example, to show that the h must end the first member of a compound, not an independent word, we have pushpāvatīḥ prasūvatīḥ (iv.2.6¹), and namaḥ pitṛbhyo abhi (iii.2.8³: only G. M. have abhi).

This is a general rule, applying to almost all the compounds in the Sanhitā which show a final h before an initial k, kh, or p of the second member. A few exceptions are mentioned farther on (rules 32, 33).

of nish before p, I find besides only nish padyeran (vii.3.10²); before kh, nish khidati (ii.2.10⁵); before k, the cases are more numerous, with forms of krī (e.g.v.5.7²), and kram (vi.4.10²⁻³: doubtless; the separation of the divisions prevents the exhibition of the sandhi); cases of niḥ with accented forms of verbs in k are yet more frequent, but come under the preceding rule, not this one. For iḍaḥ, iḍas pade sam idhyase (ii.6.11⁴ and iv.4.4⁴: O. omits the last two words): on the other hand, we have iḍāyāḥ pade at vi.1.8². For ṣaṣvataḥ, ṣaṣvatas kar haste (ii.2.12¹). For apasah, apasas pāre asya (iii.2.11²: O. omits asya). For deva rishah, uror ā no deva rishas pāhi (i.4.45²: O. omits to deva); with sa rishah pātu naktam (i.2.14⁷; 5.11¹⁻²) as counter-example, to show that the prescribed effect takes place only after deva. For añhasah, añhasas pātu vāyuh (iii.2.4³: only O. has vāyuh): another case is found in the same division, añhasas pātām. For atī divah, atī divas pāhi samāvartran (i.8.14²: G. M. O. omit after pāhi); with divah prsthān svar gatvā miṣrāḥ (iv.6.5¹: only B. has the last word; O. omits the last three) as counter-example, to show that the prescribed effect takes place only after atī. For viṣvataḥ, viṣvatas pari havāmahe (i.6.12¹: G. M. omit the last word): other cases occur at i.5.3³; ii.1.11¹; 3.14¹; iii.1.11⁴; iv.2.1^{3,34}; 3.13⁸ (in the various repetitions of only two phrases, always before pari); and, as first member of a compound, hence falling under the preceding rule, at iv.6.2⁴: an exception is noted in a later rule (viii.32). For aśmanah, tvam aśmanas pari (iv.1.2⁵). For tamasah, ud vayan tamasas pari paśyantaḥ (iv.1.7⁴ and v.1.8⁶: only O. has the last word, and it omits the first two).

For pinva and pathe I find no further examples; but s before kr̥dhi occurs also at i.4.2 (where the edition has the false reading h), 3: iv.2.9⁴; 5.10²: v.7.6^{3,4}; vi.3.2²; 4.5⁴.

By its terms, the rule means that the prescription of the preceding rule becomes void when either of the words there mentioned is followed as here specified; but the cases of its application, so far as I am aware, all concern kr̥dhi. The commentator's illustrations are: tān mā āmanasaḥ kr̥dhi svāhā (ii.3.9¹: only W. has the first two words, and it omits the last one), ṣaṁ ca naḥ kr̥dhi: kratve dakshāya (iii.3.11⁴: O. omits the last word), and uru kshayāya naḥ kr̥dhi: ghr̥taṁ ghr̥tayone (i.3.4¹: G. M. O. omit the last word); and to the second of these there is a counter-example, uta no mayas kr̥dhi kshayadvīrāya (iv.5.10²), to show that only kr, not k alone, gives occasion for retention of the h. The words āmanasaḥ kr̥dhi svāhā occur again at ii.3.9²: I find no other cases to be specified in addition to those quoted by the commentator.

27. Also before patnī ve, patī, pate, pataye, patih, and patim.

The examples are: first, brahmaṇas patnī vedim (iii.5.6¹), with a counter-example, to show that the word patnī must be followed by ve, retodhāḥ patnī va ity āha (vi.5.8⁴: but O. reads indriyā-vataḥ patnīvantam, i.4.27); further, ṣubhas patī idam aham (iii.2.10²: only O. has aham), vāstosh pate prati (iii.4.10¹), pracyavasva bhuvas pate (i.2.9 and vi.1.11⁴), vācas pataye pavaśva (i.4.2), vācas patir vācam (i.7.7¹), and vācas patim viçvakarmānam ūtaye (iv.6.2⁵: G. M. O. omit the last word). The inquiry is now raised, why it was necessary to give all these words in detail, instead of comprehending them all in pat, and in reply is quoted the passage divaṁ gacha suvaḥ pata (iv.1.10⁵ and v.1.10⁵).

The cases of retention of s before the cases of pati are so numerous, that it would be highly convenient to be able to dispose of them at once by quoting in the rule the theme pati; but such a proceeding is permitted (by i.22) only with themes ending in a. I add the other combinations of this class which I have noted from the Sanhitā: manasas pati (i.1.13³; 4.44³), pathas pati (i.1.14²), brahmaṇas pati (i.5.6⁴: ii.1.57), jyotishas pati (i.5.11¹: iv.4.4⁶), çavasas pati (ii.2.12⁷), jagatas pati (ii.4.5¹), sadasas pati (ii.6.8²: iii.2.4⁴), çatinas pati (ii.6.11¹: iv.4.4¹), nabhasas pati (iii.3.8^{3.6}), and yas patih (iv.7.14³). We have the genitive pateḥ in br̥has-pateḥ (i.7.8⁴), but, as the padu-text reads br̥haḥ-pateḥ, the word does not fall under this rule: tapaspati (i.2.10²; p. tapah-patiḥ)

28. Also in divaḥ and sahasah, before pari and put.

The cited examples are divas pari prathamam (i.3.14⁵ and iv.2.2¹), divas putrāya sūryāya (i.2.9: O. omits the last word), and sahasas putro adbhutaḥ (iv.1.9²). We have sahasas putram also at iv.4.4³, and divas pari at iii.3.3³ and iv.2.10⁴; one case of divaḥ pari is excepted by rule 34, below. As counter-examples, are given divaḥ prthivyāḥ pary antarikshāt (iii.1.10² et al.: W. B. O. omit divaḥ, which is better, as this is used just below to illustrate another point), parushahparushah pari (iv.2.9²), and puṁsah putrān uta viśvāyushaṁ rayim (iv.6.9⁴: G. M. O. have only the first two words), to show that only the words specified show s before pari and put; and divaḥ prthivyāḥ pari (iii.1.10² et al.: G. M. omit pari, which is better this time), to show that those words show it only in the circumstances stated.

Put is declared a part of a word, involving more than one case.

29. Also in rāyaḥ, before po.

The commentator's examples are: paçavo vāi rāyas poshaḥ (v.4.6²), sam ahaṁ rāyas posheṇa (i.7.9²), çamtanutvāya rāyas poshāya (iii.2.5¹: G. M. omit the first word and add brhate, which makes the reference belong to iv.1.10²), and rāyas poshasya daditāraḥ syāma (iii.2.3¹: only O. has the last word). As counter-examples, he gives vibhuḥ posha uta tmanā (iii.1.11²), to show that the rule applies to no other word than rāyaḥ before po, and eshtā rāyaḥ pre'she bhagāya (i.2.11¹: G. I have not attempted to note the numerous instances of the occurrence of rāyas posha in the Sanhitā. In the derivative rāyas-poshavani (i.2.12³; 3.1²), where the division is before vani, the pada-text, according to its custom, leaves the s of rāyas unchanged (reading rāyasposha-vani).

30. Also in namah, before karo.

The examples illustrating the action of the rule are samvatsarena namas karomi (v.5.7³), and ubhayibhyo namas karoti (ii.6.9⁸: O. reads karomi); counter-examples, showing the uselessness of either specification of the rule without the other, are namah kapardine ca (iv.5.5^{1,9}: W. omits ca; O. omits the example), and ekahāyanād enah karoti (vi.6.3¹).

Other instances of namas karoti are found at v.5.5^{1,7}; vi.3.8⁴; and of -vatsareṇa namas karomi at v.5.7³ twice, 7⁴ twice.

The printed text has greyasas karat and vasyasas karat (but, by a strange inconsistency, immediately after, paṣumataḥ karat) at i.8.6²; but, as these combinations are unauthorized by the Prāṭiśākhya, and not supported by my manuscript, I do not doubt that the readings are erroneous.

The passage is sa idhāno vasuḥ kavīḥ (iv.4.4⁵), and I have found no other. 32. Not in adhvaram viçvatah, antah, jâtaḥ, viviçuḥ paruh, and punaḥ.

These words constitute exceptions under the foregoing rules. The commentator specifies in each case under which rule the exception falls. The first example is yajñam adhvaram viçvataḥ paribhâr asi (iv.1.11¹: O. omits the first word, W. B. the last): an exception under viii.24, which would require viçvatas; W. B. O. remark that the distinctive addition of adhvaram effects the exception, and W. O. add the counter-example indram vo viçvatas pari (i.6.12¹). For antah, the example is mahâdevam antahpârçvena (i.4.36: O. omits the first word): an exception under rule 23, antah being first member of a compound. For jâtaḥ, bhâtasya jâtaḥ patir eka âsit (iv.2.8²: O. omits the first word, and alone adds âsit; G. M. omit ekah also): an exception under viii.27. For viviçuḥ paruh, yâ âviviçuḥ paruhparuh (iv.2.6⁴); with the counter-example parushparur anughushyâ viçasta (iv.6.9³: only G. M. have the last word). For punaḥ, finally, punaḥpunar hy asmât (vi.5.13⁴: only G. M. have asmât). Both these last are exceptions under viii.23.

The versions of the comment to this rule are more than usually discordant, all being defective except W. and O., and even these having suffered considerable disarrangement. For the details, see the various readings below.

"By vicinage," says the commentator, is understood a negative, in this and in the next following rule. I have noted besides only parushahparushah pari (iv.2.9²). That the word containing dh or sh must follow the visarjanīya, not be the one that itself ends in that letter, is shown by the counter-examples adhaspadam kṛnute (iv.7.13³), and ṛtasya jyotishas patim (i.5.11¹).

Of these, the first is an exception under viii.28; the other, under viii.23. There is yet another passage, bahihprāno vāi manushyaḥ (vi.1.1⁴), which needs to be brought under the rule; and the commentator accordingly declares that the quotation of pra in this rule with short a is intended to connote prā also—just as, in a rule of the next chapter (ix.24), athā connotes atha also, by a converse principle. This, however, suggests a difficulty: why then is not rule vii.7, prescribing for prā an effect which had already been prescribed for pra, a superfluity? Because, is the reply, such connotation is only proper in the case of a word directly cited, not of one that is brought forward by implication merely: and in rule vii.6 the pra was thus brought forward [from rule 4], in virtue of the ca, 'and,' contained in the rule: whereas here the pra is expressly mentioned. This seems a case of rather questionable interpretation.

35. Not so with nih.

That is, as the commentator explains it, the exception established by the preceding rule does not hold good in the case of nih, which is treated as prescribed in rule 24, even before pra. The cases instanced in illustration of the rule are both of a doubtful character: the one is a jaṭā-reading, prāñcdu nir nish prāñcdu prāñcdu nih (vi.4.10²), the other an extract from the ending of the same anuvāka (vi.4.10), ātmanā parā nish pra śukraśocishā, these words being those which end respectively the first four divisions of the anuvāka. We shall find other quotations of the endings later; and their appearance is at least decisive of the recognition by the commentator of the breaking up of the anuvākas into divisions of fifty words each, whatever we may have to believe respecting its recognition by the Prātiśākhya. We are not, however, to take for granted that even the commentator accepted the division as now made in our manuscripts, involving a suspension of continuity of the samhitā-text after each fiftieth word: there was probably at first a mere enumeration made, with an expression of its results at the end of the anuvāka. The endings, as may be seen in the Calcutta edition, are carefully accented, and written according to the rules of combination as laid down by the Prātiśākhya. The same rules are followed in the jaṭā-text; and hence, as (by rule vii.2, above) nih converts the following initial n into n in samhitā, so does it also in the repetitions of the jaṭā (nir nish). As a yet farther consequence, it has the same effect in the rules of the Prātiśākhya, and I have therefore accepted the reading na instead of na in the repetition of the present rule, although it is supported only by T. and W.

1. Visarjanīya, when followed by a spirant which has a surd letter after it, is dropped, according to Kāṇḍamāyana.

The commentator, after a brief paraphrase of the rule, gives a couple of examples to illustrate its working: namely, catustanān karoti (v.1.6⁴; p. catuḥ-stanām), and vāyava stho 'pāyava stha (i.1.1). The mention of Kāṇḍamāyana is declared to be made on account of a difference of views: others, namely, hold that h is dropped before a spirant that is followed by a sonant letter as well, as adbhya svāhā (i.8.13³), ye cūklā syus tam (ii.3.1³: W. B. omit tam), yo hatumanā svayampāpaḥ (ii.2.8³: O. omits yo; G. M. omit pāpaḥ), and dānakāmā me prajā syuḥ (ii.2.8³; 3.4¹: O. omits the first word; G. M., the first two). I am not sure that I understand the consideration further alleged, in view of which it is decided that "the rule is all right;" it appears to be that, reference having thus been made to a discordance of views, those words will be hereafter specified in which there is omission made under any other prescription—but what this refers to, I am unable to see.

Every MS. that I have reads 'ghoshaparo as second word in the rule: but the comment so plainly implies the reading -pare, and the sense so obviously requires it, that I have ventured its adoption.

Although the prescription here given is put upon the authority of an individual, it is pretty evidently to be regarded as definitely adopted and taught by the Prâtiçâkhyas, and is usually (not without occasional exceptions) conformed to by the edition of the Sanhitâ, and by my manuscripts both of that and of the Prâtiçâkhyas and its commentary. I have, therefore, treated it as peremptory, and have everywhere governed by it the readings I have accepted. The same omission is prescribed by the Rik and Vâjasaneyi Prâtiçâkhyas, but not by the Atharvan (see Ath. Pr. ii.40, note).

2. Followed by a surd letter, it becomes the spirant of like position with that letter.

The commentator's examples are: yax kâmayeta (ii.1.2³ et al.; O. reads -yate); agniç ca me (iv.7.6¹: O. omits this and the next example), ulûkaç çaçah (v.5.18), agnis te tejah (i.1.10³ and vii.5.17: O. leaves out te), and yaf pâpmanâ grhîtaḥ (ii.1.3⁵, 4⁶: W. leaves off the first word; G. M. O. omit the last).

The requirements of this rule are by no means complied with by the manuscripts, nor have I followed them in the present work. In the first place, no manuscript that I possess, or have ever seen, attempts to represent any such sounds as the jihvâmâlîya and upadhmanîya (see i.9), or z and ç; for these, visarjanîya is universally substituted, as if the sect of Âgniveçya and Vâlmiki (see rule 4, below) had supplanted all its rivals; and, in the second place, the agreement to leave visarjanîya unchanged before a sibilant (according to the view of the authorities referred to below, in rule 5) is nearly as general. In my MS. of the Sanhitâ, I have noted about thirty cases of conversion to a sibilant, in place of unchanged retention, and they are nearly all in a single limited neighborhood (in iv.5), where a different scribe has developed his originality a little. As is hinted above, in the introduction, however, G. and M. make with great regularity the assimilation of h to the following sibilant; O. does it not infrequently; the others, almost never.

I have put together, in the note to Ath. Pr. ii.40, a statement of the variously conflicting views respecting the treatment of h before the different classes of surd letters held by the different Prâtiçâkhyas, or referred to in their rules; and it is unnecessary to repeat it here. The sole point upon which all authorities agree is the conversion into ç and s before palatal and dental mutes respectively—and this is also the only point left unquestioned by the rules which follow here in our treatise.

3. But not when followed by ksh.

That is to say, visarjanīya remains unchanged before ksh, the preceding rule for its conversion to jihvāmālīya being annulled. There is nothing corresponding to the usage here prescribed in either of the other treatises. The commentator quotes a number of examples: manah ksheme (v.2.1⁷), ubhayatahkkshnūr bhavati (v.1.1⁴: W. B. omit bhavati: the visarjanīya was exempted from conversion into s before the k by viii.33), ghanāghanah kshobhanah (iv.6.4¹), pūrvō 'rshtuh kshīyate (iii.1.7¹), and dyāuh kshāmā rerihaṭ (iv.2.1²: O. omits the last word).

4. Nor, according to Āgñiveçya and Vālmiki, when followed by a guttural or a labial mute.

The two authorities here specified (the commentator calls them "holders of a śākhā, teachers"), it appears, reject altogether the jihvāmālīya and upadhmanīya, since they prescribe the retention of visarjanīya in the only situations where those problematical sounds are liable to arise. The commentator quotes a couple of illustrative passages: yah kāmāyeta (ii.1.2³ et al.), and agnih paçur āsit (v.7.26: O. has dropped out what follows agnih). Then, to show that on other points these heterodox persons accept our rule 2, he cites madhuç ca mādhaveç ca (i.4.14 and iv.4.11¹), manas tatvāya (iv.1.1¹: but B. substitutes namas talpyāya, iv.5.9¹), āçuç çigānah (iv.6.4¹), yas somam vamiti (ii.3.2⁶).

tator, and although G. M. O. omit the negative in the interpretation (I presume, by a copyist's blunder only). Some authorities, who do not, like Āgñiveçya and Vālmiki, refuse to accept the jīhvāmāliya and upadhmāniya, nevertheless deny the doctrine of rule 2 to this extent—that they prescribe the retention of visarjanīya, not its assimilation, before a sibilant. Thus, they would write āṣuḥ ṣiṣānaḥ (iv.6.4¹). G. M., as is their constant custom, write here āṣuḥ; and so does O., as is its common, though far from invariable, usage: but this means nothing; for we have no good reason to expect the manuscripts of the commentary to conform themselves in any such case to a reading which will truly illustrate the matter in hand; they simply make the sandhi in the manner usual with them: for example, under rule 2, no MS. attempts to indicate the ṣ and ṣ, and W. B. give the ḥ instead of the sibilant before the sibilant.

If we reject this interpretation, our sole alternative is, so far as I can see, to hold that some authorities would accept rule 2 only so far as it relates to ḥ before a sibilant, but would retain ḥ every where else, even reading agnih te tejah, agnih ca me. This seems altogether inadmissible. Yet we must acknowledge that it is to some extent favored by the commentator's selection of counter-examples, namely manas tatvāya (iv.1.1¹: but B. substitutes again namas tulpyāya, iv.5.9¹) and yah kāmayeta (ii.1.2³ et al.). According to our preferred interpretation, there would be no particular reason for quoting the former of these, since the combination it illustrates has been made a question by no one: according to the other, it would be required (in the form manah tatvāya), to show what these dissidents held should be done in such a case.

6. Not according to Plākshi and Plākshāyana.

The natural interpretation of this rule would seem to be, that Plākshi and Plākshāyana are not of the number of those who hold the objectionable doctrine of the last rule, or of the last two rules. If, however, I rightly apprehend the commentator, he declares it to mean "in the opinion of these two authorities, it does not—that is, h does not follow the prescription of rule 2 either before a guttural or palatal mute or before a spirant." This is equivalent to a ratification of rule 4, and a ratification or rejection of rule 5, according as we adopt the one or the other of the two interpretations proposed for the latter; and it is, in my view, quite unsuited to the connection. The discordant explanations of some of the other views of designated authorities given in the rules of the treatise show us that the commentators had not in all cases, at least, any certain knowledge by tradition of the matters referred to, but simply interpreted as well as they were able the notices of their text-book—and we have the same right as they in this respect. If the particular point here under discussion were of more practical consequence, I should be inclined to go into a fuller discussion of it; as the case stands, it has perhaps cost us already more words than it is worth.

The commentator illustrates by repeating several of the quotations already given—namely yah kāmāyeta (ii.1.2³ et al.), yah pāpmanā (ii.1.3⁵ et al.), āguḥ ṣiṣānaḥ (iv.6.4¹): these as direct examples; as counter-example, according to W. O., manas tatvāya (iv.1.1¹), for which B. once more substitutes namas talpyāya (iv.5.9¹), while G. M. read agnic ca me (iv.7.6¹)—the readings of which, as regards the visarjanīya, each manuscript gives in its usual fashion (except that W. has this time āguḥ ṣiṣānaḥ, by a blundering divergence in the wrong direction), so that we are deprived of any farther aid from that quarter to the understanding of the rule.

Finally, rules 4–6 are declared not approved.

7. Ah, the whole of it, when followed by a, becomes o.

The commentator's cited examples are preddho agne (iv.6.5⁴ and v.4.7³), samiddho añjan (v.1.11¹), and so 'bravit' (ii.1.2¹ et al.). He then enters into a long exposition intended to prove the necessity of the specification sarvaḥ, 'the whole of it,' in the rule. Without it, we are told, the reading samiddho añjan (in the second example given) would not be established: for, by i.56, alteration and omission concern only a single letter; hence, if sarvaḥ were omitted, only the final visarjanīya would be converted to o; this, with the preceding a, would become āu by x.7; the āu would be converted into āv by ix.15, and the final reading would be samiddhāv añjan. Or, again [supposing the present rule not to be given], the visarjanīya would become y by ix.10, the y would be dropped by x.19, the preceding a would be exempted from further combination by x.25, and the samhitā-reading would turn out samiddha añjan.

The Ath. Pr. (ii.53) avoids the same difficulty by prescribing the conversion of the h into u, which then combines with the preceding a into o. The other treatises (Rik Pr. ii.12; Vāj. Pr. iv.42) treat the combination in the same manner as our own. What becomes of the following a is taught in the eleventh and twelfth chapters.

8. Also when followed by a sonant consonant.

Only one example of this combination is cited, namely mā no mitro varunah (iv.6.8¹: G. M. O. omit the last word).

The commentator raises against this rule the objection that, as prescribing the same thing with the one preceding, it should not have been made a separate rule at all; and, in reply, he promises that the exposition of the meaning of tu in the next rule shall explain the reason of the proceeding.

अवर्णपूर्वस्तु लुप्यते ॥ ९ ॥

9. But visarjanīya, when preceded by an a-vowel, is omitted.

In these rules, from 7 to 10 inclusive, the anuvṛtti, or continuance of implication, is intricate and irregular in an unusual degree, and even beyond the measure of what ought to be tolerated. The implication of visarjanīya being made all the way from viii.5 to ix.10 (as pointed out in the comment to .viii.5), rule 7 of this chapter ought to teach that “visarjanīya, when preceded by a, becomes o along with the latter, when a follows:” instead of which a new subject, “the whole syllable ah,” is introduced there; and visarjanīya, being thus replaced by something else in rules 7 and 8, ought to drop out of view altogether, or, if needed further, to be distinctly specified over again. But we find it implied without specification in the present rule; and, farther, the being followed by a sonant consonant is brought down “by vicinage” from rule 8, while the tu, ‘but,’ the commentator says, merely annuls the being followed by a, as specified in rule 7. This is little less than absurd: if the sequence of a was to be annulled at all, it should have been so in rule 8—or, rather, it was annulled by rule 8, and needs to be made no further account of. The tu is here, as often elsewhere, a simple sign of a change of subject, and the commentator’s attempt to give it a precise significance is—also, as often elsewhere—a failure. Our rule means, by its terms, that ah, āh, and āzh lose their h before a sonant consonant; only, as ah was already specially provided for by rule 8, it virtually applies only to āh and āzh. The statement is thus made more general than is needed for the case in hand, because the whole implication of “preceded by any a-vowel” is needed for rule 10, which is to teach that ah, āh, and āzh before a vowel—here, again, with the exception of ah before a, already provided for—convert their h into y, preliminary to dropping it altogether, by x.19. But rule 10 presents a more anomalous combination of two heterogeneous matters into one precept than is easily to be paralleled elsewhere in the Prātiçākhyā. It is really made up of two independent parts: one, atha svaraparāh, ‘Now then, when followed by a vowel,’ which is an introductory heading having force through this chapter and the next; the other, visarjanīyo yakāram, ‘h becomes y,’ and their combination is made in order that the implication of visarjanīya and also of avarṇapūrva may be made from what precedes, and may not require to be distinctly stated.

The commentator’s examples of the application of the rule are devā gātuviduḥ (i.1.13³; i.4.4³; vi.6.2³), and vicityaḥ somāḥ na vicinityāz iti (vi.1.9¹; somāz for somāzh, by protraction from somaḥ: G. M. omit the last two words, O. the last three). He adds, as his exposition of the connection of the rule, that the express specification of sequence by a, made in rule 7, is annulled by the word tu, and that an inferential sequence by a sonant consonant is assumed by vicinage [from rule 8]; and that the implication here of the latter only is the reason why rules 7 and 8 are given independently of one another. That is to say, such is the easiest way of arriving at the result desired, that the h of āh and āzḥ is not directly dropped before a, but passes through the intermediate step of conversion into y, as before the other vowels.

10. When followed by a vowel, it becomes y.

That is to say, visarjanīya does so, if preceded by an a-vowel (rule 9)—except in the case of āh followed by a (rule 7). And, as is intimated by the prefixion of atha, the specification “followed by a vowel” is of force also in the following rules (through chapter x.). I have remarked in the preceding note upon the anomalousness of this rule, as striving to fuse into one the winding-up of one subject and the introduction of another. It has not seemed possible to render the atha excepting by a longer and more tedious paraphrase than I was willing to introduce; accordingly, I have left it out in translating the precept.

The commentator's examples are āpa undāntu jīvase (i.2.1¹: G. M. O. omit jīvase), tā abruvan (ii.3.5²; 5.1³), and anvārabhyāz iti (vi.3.8¹; anvārabhyāz for anvārabhyāzḥ, by protraction from anvārabhyah); and he gives further, as counter-examples, āpo varuṇasya (v.5.4¹: a not unexceptionably selected example, since āpah even before a vowel might not follow the present rule), and agnir ekākṣareṇa (i.7.11¹: a case under viii.6, as the preceding under ix.8).

This conversion of visarjanīya into y is only the preliminary step to its complete loss, by rule x.19. The same course of conversion is followed by the Ātharvan and Vājasaneyi Prātiśākhya (Ath. Pr. ii.41; Vāj. Pr. iv.36), but not by that of the Rik (ii.9,10).

12. O becomes av.

The example is viṣṇav e 'hī 'dum (ii.4.12³). For the further treatment of the v thus produced, see x.19 and the following rules.

13. But not, in either case, when followed by a.

The dual number of the attribute in this rule, we are told, sufficiently shows that the two letters e and o, last mentioned, are its subject. There are two different rules in the treatise applying to the case of a final e or o coming to stand before initial a—namely rule 11, above [or rule 12], and rule xi.1, which directs that the latter shall be elided—and, since the rules of this chapter are of paramount force, as preceding the other, the present precept is required in order to annul them.

The commentator's examples are mā te asyām (i.6.12⁵), samid-dho añjan (v.1.11¹), and te 'bruvan (ii.5.1³ et al.).

The example is ahāv anadatā hate (v.6.1²).

उकारो ऽपृक्तः प्रकृत्या वकारो ऽन्तरे ॥ १६ ॥

16. An u, uncombined with a consonant, remains unchanged, and v is inserted between it and the following vowel.

The definition of apṛkta was given above, at i.54, and such a word was directed to be treated both as initial and as final (i.55). This rule makes an exception for the particle u, which becomes uv before a vowel—which, moreover, never occurs after an a-vowel except as combined with it, forming part of the class of pragrahas in o which were treated above, in rules iv.6,7. The examples given are sa uv ekaviñṣavartanīh (iv.3.3²), and adanty uv evā 'sya manushyāh (ii.3.7⁴): I have noted further only iv.6.9⁴, but am not sure that I have been careful to mark all the cases. As counter-examples, svapatyāya deva (v.5.4⁴; p. su-apatyāya) shows that the u must be apṛkta, and bhakshe 'hī (iii.2.5¹), that no other apṛkta vowel than u is thus treated.

The passages are tad v āhur utsrjyam (vii.5.7¹: O. omits after āhur), and tasmād v ācyam (vi.1.11⁶). So far as I have observed, these are the only instances which the text affords of u following a consonant and preceding a vowel. Compare the similar rules in the other treatises (Rik Pr. ii.28; Vāj. Pr. iv.87; Ath. Pr. iii.36). The preceding precept being thus annulled with reference to these two cases, they fall under the general rule x.15, and the u, like any final, is converted into v. To show the bearing of the specification sāṃhitah, 'in combined text,' the commentator gives us the two passages in padu and krama form: thus—tat: u: āhuh: tad u: uv āhuh: āhur utsrjyam (but G. M. O. give simply the first two krama-pada's), and tasmāt: u: āgyam: tasmād u: uv āgyam (here only W. has the statement in padu). It thus appears that the combination with the preceding consonant is indispensable to the treatment of the u as here prescribed; failing that, it falls under the preceding rule, and becomes uv.

18. A ṛ, when preceded by a short vowel, is doubled.

That is to say, when another vowel follows—the heading athā svaraparah (ix.10) still continuing in force. The commentator adds also "when occurring at the end of a pada," as he has done in his paraphrase of the preceding rules: this is a matter of course, as we are dealing only with the conversion of padu-text into sāṃhitā. His illustrative examples are nyaññ agñih (v.5.3²), and tam u tvā dadhyāññ rshih (iv.1.3² and v.1.4⁴: only G. M. have the first two words). That the preceding vowel must be short, he shows by parāñ ā vartate (iii.2.9⁷ and vi.3.8³); that a vowel must follow, by sadrñk samānāñ syāt (ii.2.8⁶: only O. has the last word; only B. G. M. have the inserted k, required by v.32, and G. M. convert it to kh, by xiv.12), and pratyāñk śhad-ahah (vii.4.2⁵: here all have the k, but only G. M. make it kh).

19. As does also a n.

The a in this rule brings down, we are told, the preceding cause of duplication and the duplication itself. The cited examples are nir avapann indrāya (ii.4.2²), and abruvann ṛdhnavat (i.5.1²). The counter-examples, given for the same purposes as those under the preceding rule, are niravapann yāny eva purastāt (ii.4.1²: O. omits the last two words), omanvati te smin (ii.6.9⁵: O. omits the last word), yān agnayo 'nvatapyanta (iii.2.8³: O. omits the last word; G. M. omit the whole example), and vidvān etam agniṁ cinute (v.6.5³). The commentator does not give himself the trouble this time to inquire why two rules are furnished to prescribe a single process: the reason is, evidently, because continued implication of n only is desired in the rules that follow.

20. In graha, ukhya, yājyā, prsthya, and hiranyavarṇīya passages, a n preceded by i or ū becomes r, preceded by ā becomes y, except before iti.

The remainder of the chapter is occupied with rules respecting these conversions of a final n after ā, i, and ū before an initial vowel—conversions of which the original ground is the same with that which causes the combinations ñce, ñst to result from the collision of n with c and t (v.20, vi.14), namely the partial retention of an original s which followed the n as part of the declensional termination of the word. See note to Ath. Pr. ii.27 for a full statement of the teachings of the other Prātiṣākhyaś respecting them. The conversion of n to y is equivalent to its omission, since the y is dropped by x.19. Rules xv.1-3 are also needed to complete the combinations intended, by the nasalization of the preceding vowel, or the insertion of anusvāra after it.

As in other similar cases, the commentator, after his preliminary paraphrase of the rule, proceeds first to define the passages of the Sanhitā designated by the titles it contains. By graha is meant the fourth chapter of the first book, excepting its last four sections—or i.4.1–42. By ukhya, the first two chapters of the “Agni” book (see iii.9), excepting their final sections (which are yājyā)—or iv.1.1–10; 2.1–10. The yājyās have been already defined (iii.9, note), as the concluding sections of all the chapters to book fourth, chapter third, together with ii.6.11. By prsthya are intended nine sections, pointed out by the citation of the first words of each: they are iv.4.12; 6.6–9; 7.15: v.1.11; 2.11; 2.12. Hiranyavarṇīya designates only a single section, v.6.1. Examples are then given from each set of passages. From graha passages, we have jahi çatrāñr opa mrdho mudasva (i.iv.42), and marutvāñ indra vṛṣabhaḥ (i.4.19: G. M. O. omit the last word): there are four other cases, at i.4.20 twice, 21,41. From ukhya passages, ye vā vanasputāñr am (iv.2.8³), and madhumāñ astu sūryaḥ (iv.2.9³): there are ten others, at iv.1.3³ twice, 9^{2,3}, 10^{2,4}; 2.4^{2,5}, 9⁵ twice. From yājyā passages, ṛtūñr ṛtupate yaje 'ha (iv.3.13⁴: only O. has the last two words), to which W. B. O. add amavāñ ibhena (i.2.14¹); but for this G. M. substitute madhumāñ indriyāvāñ (iii.1.10²), which is not in a yājyā passage at all, but falls under the next rule: I have noted more than thirty other cases, namely at i.1.14⁴; 2.14²; 3.14⁸; 4.46²; 5.11²; 6.12⁴; 7.13^{4,5}: ii.1.11⁵ thrice; 2.12^{3,8}; 3.14^{2,6}; 6.11¹ thrice ⁴ twice, 12^{1,3}: iii.1.11¹ thrice, 7; 2.11³ twice; 4.11³; 5.11²: iv.2.11³; 3.13^{2,3,4} twice. The same passages contain five exceptions, which are duly provided for in rules 23 and 24, below. From prsthya passages, the examples are çatrāñr anapavyayantaḥ (iv.6.6³) and jaghamañr upa jighnate (iv.6.6⁵): other cases at iv.6.7⁵, 9⁴ twice; 7.15⁷: v.1.11⁴. Finally, from the hiraṇyavarṇīya section, agnīñr apsushadah (v.6.1²), and sarvāñ agnīñ (v.6.1²), which are the only cases. Counter-examples, of n not converted as here prescribed, because occurring outside the passages specified, are trīn imāñ lokāñ iti (vii.3.2¹), paṣāñ evā 'va rundhe (v.1.1¹ et al.), and tāñ indro 'nturyāmenā 'ntar adhatta (vi.4.6¹: G. M. O. omit the last two words). And the bearing of the specification "except before iti" is illustrated by examples from the krama and pada texts, namely abhyavartantu dasyāñ: dasyāñ iti dasyāñ (i.6.12⁶; dasyāñ is thus repeated, as being the closing word of the anuvāka: but W. O. omit this repetition, which exhibits the very point requiring illustration, and B. adds only iti dasyāñ to the first dasyāñ), and idāvāñ iti 'dā-vāñ (iii.1.11¹; samhitā-reading, idāvāñ eshañ).

Any general examination of the aspect of this mode of combination in the Tāittirīya text I defer to the end of the chapter.

21. Also in the words martyāñ, ud ayāñ, amrtāñ, duryāñ not preceded by soma, so asmāñ, avimāñ, gomāñ, madhumāñ, haviṣmāñ, hūtamāñ before any vowel belonging to the text, cikītvāñ, idāvāñ, kakshivāñ, bāṇavāñ, hi payasvāñ, vaṣāñ, vidatrāñ, amitrāñ, arāñ, poshāñ, and mahāñ.

The ea in this rule, says the commentator, brings down from the preceding rule the specification "except before iti;" but we might fairly claim that it involves all the specifications there made excepting the restriction to certain passages: this exception the comment duly notes: "this and the rules that follow have a general application, without regard to special portions of the text."

The illustrative examples are: for martyāñ, martyāñ āviveṣa (v.7.9¹). For ud ayāñ, ud ayāñ ājasram (iv.6.3³): with a counter-example, vayobhīr evā 'yāñ ava rundhe (v.2.10⁷), to show that

O. omit mām etc.): there are two other cases, at i.2.13¹: vi.2.9¹; and a single exception, pra carā soma ḍuryān adityāh (i.2.10¹), quoted by the commentator in justification of the restriction "not preceded by soma." For asmān, so asmān adhipatin karotu (i.6.6⁴ and iii.2.7²): another example is at v.7.9¹; and asmān becomes asmāñ also at i.6.12⁴, but in virtue of the preceding rule. The counter-example, showing the necessity of prefixing so in the rule, is indro asmān asmīn dvitīye (iii.1.9²: W. B. omit the last word). For avimān, avimāñ aṇvī (i.6.6⁴; 7.6⁷: iii.1.11¹: but the last case falls under the preceding rule also). For gomān, gomāñ agne (i.6.6⁴; 7.6⁷: iii.1.11¹—that is to say, in the same phrase with avimān). For madhumān, madhumāñ indriyāvan (iii.1.10²). Next follows a counter-example, intended to show why mān would not have been enough of itself to include the last three words, without the prefixed parts avi, go, and madhu: it is paṇumān eva bhavati (vi.2.6² et al.). Then, for harishmān, harishmāñ ā vivāṣati (i.3.12): the word occurs a second time in the same section, and also at vi.4.2⁴. For hūtamān, devahūtamāñ ity ukhāyām juhōti (v.5.3¹: W. B. omit the last word): it is found again, in like form, in the succeeding division of the section. The specification "before any vowel belonging to the text (ārshe, 'coming from the ṛshis')," is declared to be meant as an annulment of the restriction, "except before iti," made in the preceding rule. And, to show that the n remains unchanged before a vowel not forming part of the fundamental text, is given the pada-reading devahūtamān iti deva-hūtamān. There is added further a remark which looks like a gloss that has worked its way into the text: "the specification 'before what comes from the ṛshis' has force in both directions, after the fashion of the crow's eye [Molesworth says, the crow is regarded as having a single eye, which shifts from one eye-ball to the other, as it is needed]—namely, from the beginning of the preceding rule to the end of the present one.” This appears to mean that an iti belonging to the sacred text itself would admit the conversion of the n before it, in any case falling under these two rules. The opinion is doubtless a sound one; but, to prove its expression pertinent here, we require an example showing that there is a passage in the text requiring its application: and none such is furnished us; on the contrary, the addition of ārshe to hūtamān alone implies that none is to be found. The example for cikivān is cikivān anu manyatām (iii.1.4¹: O. omits the last word). For idāvān, idāvān eshaḥ (i.6.6⁴; also at iii.1.11¹, but this is a case falling under the preceding rule). For kakshivān, kakshivān āucijah (v.6.5³). For bānavān, viśalyo bānavān uta (iv.5.1⁴: O. omits the first word). Next we have again a counter-example, rasavān eva bhavati (ii.2.4⁵), showing that, of words ending in vān, only those preceded as here specified undergo the prescribed effect. For hi payasvān, sam asṛkshmaḥi: payasvān agna ā'gamam (i.4.45³, 46²: only O. has sam; and G. M. O. omit the last two words): the necessity of the prefixed hi is shown by the counter-example ārjāvān payasvān ity āha (i.7.3⁴). Here, however, is a case of payasvān before an iti which comes from the rshis, and therefore might seem to require the reading payasvān, like hūtamān in the passage devahūtamān ity ukhāyām (v.5.3¹)—according to the extension made above of the natural and obvious meaning of ārshe; but the commentator declares that the mention in the rule of hi as necessary preceding word prevents the conversion of n to y in the passage: it is, to be sure, a case of payasvān before iti, but not of hi payasvān. For vagān, the example is stuto yāsi vagān anu (i.8.5¹). For vidatṛān, W. O. give suvidatṛān apī'tu (i.8.5²), while G. M. have instead suvidatṛān avitsi (ii.6.12³): B. is defective here, dropping out the last part of this quotation, and the first part of the next (reading suvidatṛān apabādhamānah); G. M. are in the wrong this time, for the passage they quote falls under the preceding rule. For amitrān, amitrān apabādhamānah (iv.6.4²): an exception is provided for in the final rule of the chapter. For arān, arān ivā'gne nemih (ii.5.9³: O. omits the last word). For poshān, poshān apushyat (vii.1.9). For mahān, agne mahān asi (ii.5.9¹): another case at i.4.20.

The implication here, the commentator tells us, is of a n preceded by ā only: he does not explain why, but would have a right to appeal to the mention of ān last in rule 20, and the exclusion of any other cases than those of a final ān in rule 21. His examples are as follows. For indro me, sapatnāñ indro me (i.1.13¹; 6.4²: iv.6.3⁴); with a counter-example, yushmān indro 'vr̥pita (i.1.5¹), to illustrate the need of specifying me. For akāḥ, nigrābhenā 'dharāñ akāḥ (i.1.13¹; 6.4²: iv.6.3⁴: that is to say, in the same passage as the preceding: O. omits the first word). For ūdhvam, yāyam devāñ ūdhvam (i.3.8²: O. omits the first word). For ihā, agne devāñ ihā "vaha (i.3.14⁸; 5.5³: iv.6.1³); with a counter-example, yajñiyan iha yān havāmahe (i.5.10³: only W. has the last word), to show that the nimitta in this case is ihā, not iha. For apy etu, gharṇo devāñ apy etu (i.5.10⁴: B. omits gharṇo: again at i.6.3²); with the counter-example, vidvān api junyeshu (vi.1.6⁶), to show that api without etu does not cause the conversion. For agamna, svar devāñ agamna (i.7.9²). For vahāñ devāñ idenyān (ii.5.9⁶). For āyajishthaḥ, svasti (iv.3.13¹; 6.1⁵: O. omits the last word). For ā ca, devāñ ā ca vakshat (iv.6.3⁴ twice, and v.4.6⁶ twice); but this example is omitted by G. M., and they also omit the item ā ca in the rule itself. A counter-example, yān ā vaha uçataḥ (i.4.44²: G. M. omit the last word), is given by all but O.: in G. M., it should show that ā causes āñ only when followed by yajishthaḥ; in W., only by yajishthaḥ and ca; but W. states the occasion for it in the same manner as G. M., and B. alone sets it in its proper relation to both the foregoing examples. For rtu, the example is, in W. B., vājo devāñ rtubhiḥ (iv.7.12²), but G. M. O. give instead yebhir devāñ rtubhiḥ (i.1.14⁴): I have found no other case. For akurvata, vittvā kāmāñ akurvata (i.5.9³). For aduhat, yajño 'surāñ aduhat (i.7.1¹). For aditiḥ, vivasvāñ aditiḥ (i.5.3³). For agre, agnis tāñ agre (iii.1.4²): we have also vāyus tāñ agre in the same division. For adharān, anyāñ adharān sapatnān (iii.2.8⁵); with a counter-example, bhrātreyān adharān pādāyāmi (iii.5.3¹). For alim, puroḍāçāñ alim kurv iti (vi.3.12²). Finally, to show that the rule applies only to ān, paridhān akurvata (vi.2.15⁶).

The comment closes with an exposition which I must confess that I do not fully understand. It is evidently intended to determine the readings which the words treated in these rules shall have in jatā-text; and it furnishes abundant illustrations, in reference to the form of which, however, there is not a little difference between the different recensions: G. M. O. generally citing the passage first in its samhitā-form, and adding only a single sandhi from the jaṭā-text, while W. B. give the complete jaṭā-readings, and only those. The former quote first amartyo martyāñ dviveṣa (v.7.9¹), and add martyāñ amartyah; W. gives amartyo martyān martyāñ amartyo 'martyo martyān, and martyāñ dviveṣa "viveṣa martyān martyāñ dviveṣa"; B. only the latter (and, blunderingly, treats it as amartyāñ dviveṣa, throughout); next, G. M. O. have ud asthām amṛtān anu: amṛtāñ asthām (i.2.8¹); W. B., amṛtāñ anu anu amṛtāñ amṛtāñ anu. Then, in illustration of a second point, we receive two more examples: G. M. O. read agne 'vimāñ aṣvi: avimāñ agne (i.6.6⁴ et al.), for which W. B. substitute agne 'vimāñ avimāñ agne 'gne 'vimāñ; and G. M. O., again, ud ayāñ aṣasram (iv.6.3³), O. this time adding the full jaṭā-reading ud ayāñ ayāñ ud ud ayāñ, which G. M. also seem to mean to give (they actually have only ayāñ ud ayāñ); while W. B. set down the jaṭā-form of the other pair of words: ayāñ aṣasram aṣasram ayāñ ayāñ aṣasram. Yet once more, two examples for a third point close the tale: in G. M. O. agnis tāñ agre: tāñ agniḥ (iii.1.4²), in W. B. tāñ agre 'gre tāñ tāñ agre; and, this time in all alike, anyāñ adharān adharān anyāñ anyāñ adharān (but G. M. have, doubtless by a copyist's blunder, anyān the second time, before anyāñ). It will be seen that the two versions are in part inconsistent with one another as regards the special points of combination to which they direct attention; and I am not able to make out what are the three classes of cases meant to be distinguished. The three points which one would most naturally think of as needing to be noticed are, perhaps, first, the occurrence of a word like amṛtān before itself—thus, amṛtāñ amṛtān—in the jaṭā repetition; second, its occurrence before a preceding word (not its defined or natural nimitta) when that word begins with a vowel—thus, amṛtāñ asthām; and third, its occurrence in jaṭā before the word which causes its alteration in samhitā—thus, amṛtāñ anu—if, indeed, this last can be regarded as requiring any special prescription. Or, the second and third cases might be expected to concern the treatment respectively of a word, on the one hand, like martyān, which is itself quoted in the rule as suffering the prescribed change (which is at the same time grahana and nāimittika, or nāimittikaṁ grahaṇam), and might therefore naturally be inferred to be liable to the change under all circumstances before a vowel; and one, on the other hand, like anyān, which is pointed out by means of the quotation of the following word adharān (which is itself, therefore, nāimittika, while adharān is grahana; or which is grahananāimittika, 'undergoing a prescribed effect under the influence of a quoted word'), and which one might suppose changeable only before that word. It is in accordance with this latter explanation that the last two pairs of examples are taken, the one from under rule 21, the other from under rule 22. At any rate, the general conclusion appears to be pretty well assured, that a word which shows a final ñ in saṁhitā shows it also in jaṭā before a following vowel of whatever kind. This is markedly different from its treatment in pada, where, by the initial specification of rule 20, its power of conversion to ñ is lost altogether: and even in jaṭā (as was shown in the note to iii.1), an altered letter usually exhibits its saṁhitā form only under the specific circumstances which condition that form in saṁhitā-text.

23. The n of raçmīn, çrapayān, yamān, patañgān, samānān, arcān, yajiyān remains unchanged.

All these are words occurring in the passages respecting which the comprehensive prescription of rule 20 was made; needing, therefore, to be specifically exempted from its action. The commentator quotes the phrases in which they occur, as follows: pu-ru-trā ca raçmīn anu (iv.1.2³), aditiḥ çrapayān iti (iv.1.5⁴), su-yamān ūtaye (iv.7.15^{4,5}), patañgān asaṁditaḥ (i.2.14¹), samānān samānān uçann agne (iv.3.13³; only G. M. have the first word), arcān indra grāvāṇaḥ (i.6.12⁶; G. M. have dropped out all but arcā), and yajiyān upasthe mātuh (i.3.14¹; O. omits the last word). The first two are from ukhya passages, the third from a prsthya, the rest from yājyā—as is noted also by the commentator (but G. M. omit these notices, save the first). Under the second, he further suggests the objection that, as the word following çrapayān is iti, the case might seem not to fall under the rule (since this expressly says "except before iti"); but he urges in reply that the word ārshē in rule 21 (that is to say, of course, according to his

24. Nor a n followed by ut or athā.

The phrases to which this rule relates are, as quoted by the commentator, amitrān un nayāmi (iv.1.10³), and vidvān athā bhava (iii.2.11²⁻³; our saṃhitā-text has atha, because the word stands vibhāge, at the end of a division of the section: see rule iii.10 and note): I have noted no other cases. The commentator gives a counter-example to the former, showing why ut could not have been extended to uta, but needed to stop at the consonant (hal): it is trīṇr uta dyaṇ (ii.1.11⁵). Such a counter-example is quite out of the usual course, and very superfluous: the example itself would be counter-example enough; the substitution of uta for ut would have excluded the very passage aimed at. Of the two phrases, the one comes from an ukhya-passage, the other from a yājñā: the commentator might better have spent his spare energy in telling us this.

What remains of the comment to this rule is not altogether free from difficulties. First the statement is made that the word athā in it implies also atha, with short a; in illustration, W. repeats, without change, vidvān athā bhava; B. gives the same twice over; only O. has, in krama-text, vidvān atha: athā bhava—which is doubtless correct, and shows the krama-reading (along, we may suppose, with the jaṭā) to be the matter aimed at. That the now accepted saṃhitā-reading—vidvān atha: 2: bhava—is contemplated, is not at all to be assumed. Both the statement and its illustration are wanting in G. M.: and this, although those manuscripts contain, under viii.34, the reference to it in advance there made. In regard to what follows, also, the recensions are considerably at variance. The jaṭā-text is again under treatment; and it appears to be laid down that any word has in that text the same form as under analogous circumstances in saṃhitā, whether it fall under an exception or under a rule. Then, as example of an exceptional word, is given, as established by the present precept, amitrān ud ud amitrān amitrān ut (iv.1.10³), amitrān retaining its n throughout; and again, as examples falling under the more general rule, so asmāñ asmānt sa so asmān: asmāñ avahāyā 'vahāyā 'smāñ asmāñ avahāyā (v.7.9¹: under rule 21).

So far, now, as I have been able to discover, the teachings of the Prātiçākhyā in rules 20–24 of this chapter precisely correspond with the conditions of the known Tāittirīya text: I have not found in the latter a single case of final āñ, īñr, ūñr which they do not duly notice, nor an exception to the more general rules which is not provided for. Of course, my observation is more to be trusted upon the former point than upon the latter.

The sandhi here treated of is comparatively unusual in our Saṃhitā, as it is in those of the other Vedas. According to my count, there are (including repetitions) 115 cases of āñ (including also one at iv.6.6⁷, omitted above), 5 of īñr, and 4 of ūñr—in all, 124; while, of final ān remaining unchanged before a vowel, I have noted down over 450 instances (and probably not without overlooking a score or two), of ān, about 150, of īn, 16, and of ūn, 4—in all, about 620, or not less than five times as many. The numerical relation in the Atharva-Veda is probably nearly the same. See the end of the note to Ath. Pr. ii.27.

CHAPTER X.

CONTENTS: 1–9, combination of final and initial similar vowels, and of final a or ā with initial vowels and diphthongs; 10–12, resulting accentuation and nasalization; 13, special cases of uncombinable final ā; 14, of elision of final a, ā before initial e and o; 15–17, combination of final i and u vowels, and resulting accentuation; 18, special cases of uncombinable final i; 19–23, elision of final y and v; 24–25, uncombinable final vowels.

अथैकमुभे ॥ १ ॥

1. Now for the coalescence of two vowels into one.

An introductory heading to the whole chapter. The commentator paraphrases: “both syllables become one form, of the same kind.”

2. In the case of a simple vowel, followed by a similar vowel, the product is long.

For the terms samānākshara and savarna, see rules i.2,3, where they are defined. The grammatical construction of the rule is not simple, or easily made homogeneous with that of its predecessor. The commentator brings it out thus: "there being a simple vowel, followed by one that is of like nature with itself, these two, being put in the relation of predecessor and successor, become a single long vowel." His examples are tvacām gr̥h̥niṣṭvā 'ntaritū rak-shah (i.1.8: only O. has the first word; only G. M. the last), rāśnā 'si 'ndrānyāi (i.1.2²), and sāpasthā devo vanaspatih (i.2.2³: only G. M. have the last word).

अथावर्णपूर्वे ॥ ३ ॥

3. Now for cases in which an a-vowel stands first.

A new sub-heading, having force as far as rule 9, inclusive. The word avarṇapūrve is explained by the commentator after the manner of a karmadhāraya compound, as meaning 'that which is both an a-vowel and first,' but I do not see how such a construction can be defended: we have, rather, to understand akshare, and make the meaning analogous with that of rule 2: "when there is a syllable that has an a-vowel before it."

4. When an i-vowel follows, the product is e.

The commentator explains ivarnapare in the same manner as avarṇapūrve in rule 3. The interpretations might hold good, if pūrva and para were taken substantively; but they are not so used anywhere in the treatise. His chosen example is ne 'shtir bhava-

The commentator again very elaborately explains ekārāikārapare as a karmadhāraya compound, formed upon ekārāikāra as a dvandva; and remarks that the same explanation applies also in the following rule.

8. When r follows, the product is ar.

The examples are ardharca ekām (i.6.10⁵), and āgneyya rca 'gnīdhram (iii.1.6¹; p. āgneyyā: rca).

I have not noticed a single example in the Tāittirīya Sanhitā of that retention of r unchanged after a and ā, only with correption of the latter, which is the rule in the Rik and Vājasaneyi Sanhitās, and which appears also in the Atharva-Veda, though against the authority of its Prātiśākhya (see Ath. Pr. iii.46 note).

9. If a preposition precedes, the product is ār.

The commentator points out that, as the implication "when an a-vowel stands first" is still in force from rule 3, this virtually means "if a preposition ending in a or ā precedes," r, of course, is inferred from the preceding rule. According to the list of prepositions given at i.15, then, ā, pra, ava, and upa would be the only words authorized to form with initial r the vrddhi vowel instead of the guṇa, parā and apa being excluded. The commentator brings up but one example from the text, namely upā rchatī (i.5.9⁶: G. M. read upā rchaty askandāya, which I do not find anywhere: we have askandāya after other words at i.5.8⁵: ii.5.8⁶: vi.3.8^{1,3}, the last time following upā 'syati; possibly this text was in the mind of the scribe who added askandāya in the comment on the present rule); he gives another from the jatā-text, rtavyā upo 'pā rtavyā rtavyā upa (v.3.1¹; 4.2¹), and, further, as counter-example, showing that only a preposition ending in a or ā produces the prescribed effect, vyrddham vā etat (v.1.2¹ et al.: O. omits the last word). Additional cases of the same combination, with ā and ava, are quoted under rule 10 (at the end); if the text affords yet others, I have failed to note them. Nor have I observed any cases of the different treatment of parā and apa before r; so that here also I do not discover any reason for the strange restriction of the class of prepositions made at i.15.

10. When an acute enters into the combination, the result is acute.

That is to say, as the commentator points out, when the first constituent, or the second constituent, or both constituents, have the udatta accent, their combination is udatta. He gives a long list of examples in illustration of the working of the rule, promising that they shall exhibit the whole series of vowel-combinations just prescribed, from the second rule to the ninth, with all possible conditions of accentual combination. Thus, savitā' prā' rpayatu (i.1.1; p. prā: arp: W. reads -yati) brāhma yachā' pā' gne (i.1.7¹; p. yacha; āpa), yājyā'i' vā'i nam (ii.3.5³; p. yājyā: ā: evā: enam: the pada-manuscripts have ē'ti for ā'; and so with the other prepositions), pāshā' dhutta (i.5.1²; p. pāshā: ā: adhatta: W. B. read -tte), divi' va cākshuh (i.3.6² and iv.2.9⁴; p. divi: iva: for this accent, which is opposed to the teachings of all the other Prāticākhyas, see under rule 17 of the present chapter), adyā vāsu vasati' ti' ndro hi devā'nām (ii.5.3⁷; p. vasati: iti: indra: O. reads at the end 'ndram eva, which I do not find anywhere in the Sanhitā), māitrāvaruṇi' ty āha (ii.6.7⁴; p. -nī: iti). The question is then raised, whether the word sūnnīyam (vi.2.4¹) does not fall under this rule, since it exhibits a coalescence into one syllable of two vowels, whereof one is acute; but the reply is made, that a special rule in a later part of the chapter (r. 17) prescribes for it the circumflex. The examples are continued: rēto dadhātā' t sakthyōh (vii.4.19¹; p. dadhātu: ut), vānaspātayō 'nā' t tishthanti tā'n (vii.4.8³; p. ānu: ut: only G. M. have tān), and tā' dikshā' pā' dadhata (v.5.5⁴; p. dikshū: āpa: G. M. omit tā). So many are examples of the combination of two similar simple vowels into a long vowel: the rest illustrate the cases of coalescence in which a or ā precedes. They are sē' mā'm no havayādā- opinion of some authorities that final simple vowels, not pragrahas, are nasal; and he states that the present precept has reference to them: if such a nasal vowel, being acute, enters into a combination of the kind above described, the resulting single syllable is nasal. Examples, he says, are those already given. And he adds that the rule is not approved.

I cannot at all believe this to be the true interpretation. The rule seems, on the other hand, to belong to and represent the same view of the nature of a syllable ordinarily regarded as containing anusvāra, which appears so unequivocally at xv.1; and to mean that when such a syllable, being looked upon as one containing a nasal vowel, instead of a vowel with succeeding anusvāra, enters into combination with another vowel (of course, a preceding one), the result is also nasal. Thus, for example, yah with añḥum would make yo 'ñḥum; svāhā and añsābhyām (vii.3.16¹⁻²), svāhā 'ñsābhyām.

12. When circumflex and grave are combined, the result is circumflex.

The examples of this accentual result of combination, as given by the commentator, are as follows: kanyē 'va tunndā (iii.1.11³; p. kanyā: iva), chavīm chavyō 'pā'kr̥tāya svā'hā (v.7.20; p. chavyā: upa-ā'kr̥tāya: G. O. end with 'shā), and ātha kvā 'syā havanī'ya iti (v.7.4²; p. kvā: asyāh: O. omits the last two words). He then goes on to point out that the word svarita, 'circumflex,' being used in the rule without any distinctive sign, we are to understand the "constant" (nitya) or "independent" circumflex (see rule xx.2) to be intended. For this alone arises at the time of production of letters and syllables, elements of words; but the other kinds of circumflex arise after the time of origin of words, in connection with the euphonic combination of syllables and words, by the requirement of such rules as xiv.29 and xii.9; and therefore primary quality belongs only to the "constant" circumflex: whence, by the rule "when a general statement is made, that which is primary should be regarded as intended," it is proper that the constant circumflex should be here understood. In such cases, then, as āthā 'bravīt (iii.2.11³), where the long ā resulting from the combination of the final a of ātha, which has the enclitic circumflex (by xiv.29), with the initial a of abravīt, which is grave, has itself the enclitic circumflex, this is not in virtue of the present rule, but falls under the same general rule (xiv.29) that prescribes the enclitic circumflex.

To this effect the commentator: and, whatever we may think of the argument by which he attempts to prove that svarita in the rule means only nitya svarita, we shall not question the soundness of his conclusions.

13. Exceptions are dhā, mā, and pā, when followed by asi; also budhniyā, jyā, ā pūshā, and aminanta—before a vowel belonging to the text.

That is to say, these words constitute exceptions, not to the last rules respecting accentuation, but to those which prescribe the combination of a final a or ā with the following initial vowel. The commentator cites the passages in which the first three occur before asi, as follows: svadhā asy urvī (i.1.9³), sahasrasya pramā asi (iv.4.11³: O. omits the first word), and dhanvann iva prapā asi (ii.5.12⁴: O. omits the first two words). I have also noted, for dhā, varcodhā asi (i.2.1¹), dhā asi svadhā asi (ii.6.4⁴), and abhidhā asi (vii.1.11¹); for mā, pratimā asi, vimā asi, and unmā asi, all in the same section and division (iv.4.11³) with pramā, as quoted; and, for pā, vratapā asi (i.1.14⁴; 2.3¹: vi.1.4⁶) and cakshushpā asi (i.2.1²). To explain the added specification "when followed by asi," the pada-readings are quoted for us, namely svadhe

Further, to explain the final specification ārshe, 'before a vowel belonging to the text,' W. gives next the jaṭā readings of svadhā asi and prapā asi, namely svadhā asy asi svadhā svadhā asi, and prapā asy asi prapā prapā asi; O. has only the former, and substitutes for the latter dhruvā 'si dharunā (iv.2.9¹; 3.7²), which would be in place as a counter-example showing that other words than those specified in the rule are not treated as it prescribes before asi, but is not introduced as such, and does not make its appearance at all in the other versions; B. also has only the former (reading at the end svadhā 'si), and adds evam ādī, 'and so on.' G. M. give no jaṭā-readings at all here, but pass directly from the pada-readings to the quotations illustrating the remaining words of the rule, namely: pra budhniyā irate (iv.3.13⁶: G. M. omit pra); dhanvañ jyā iyaṃ (iv.6.6¹⁻²: only G. M. have the first word); ā pūshā etv ā vasu (ii.4.5¹), with a counter-example, tam pūshā 'dhatta (i.5.1²), to show that pūshā after any other word than ā is not uncombinable; and ā te suparnā aminanta evāih (iii.1.11⁵: G. M. omit the first two words, O. the first three). Now the question is asked again, "why is it said, 'when a vowel from the text follows?'" and W. B. O., having settled the point already so far as dhā, mā, and pā were concerned, reply by quoting the jaṭā-readings of the other four words, each with its successor, thus: budhniyā irata irate budhniyā budhniyā irate (but B. reads budhniye "rate, and O. budhniye "rate, the last time), jyā iyaṃ iyaṃ jyā jyā iyaṃ (B. O. again have jye 'yam at the end), pūshā etv etu pūshā pūshā etu (B. O. again pūshāi 'tu in the third repetition), and aminanta evāir evāir aminantā 'minanta evāih (B. O. once more aminantāi 'vāih to close with). G. M., however, who have the application of ārshe in the first part of the rule still to illustrate, give us here a most liberal series of extracts from the jaṭā-text: first, for asi svadhā (i.1.9³ or ii.6.4⁴), namely asi svadhā svadhā asy asi svadhā; then for svadhā asi, as set down above (with svadhā 'si at the end, like B.; but it seems a merely accidental coincidence, for in all the other cases the third pair of words reads like the first, with the hiatus); for iva prapā, iva prapā prapā 've 'va prapā; for prapā asi, as above reported from W.; for pra budhniyā; for budhniyā irate, as in W.; for dhanvañ jyā; for jyā iyaṃ, as in W.; for ā pūshā, ā pūshā pūshā " " pūshā; for pūshā etu, as in W.; for suparnā aminanta, suparnā aminantā 'minanta suparnā suparnā aminanta; and for aminanta evāih, as in W. From all this illustration, we seem authorized to draw the inference that the words mentioned in the rule as having endings exceptionally uncombinable in samhitā nevertheless combine with iti in pada-text, and also exhibit their uncombinable quality in jatā only, before the words whose sequence calls out that quality in samhitā—pāśhā, for example, uniting with its predecessor ā into pāśhā, and aminanta with itself into aminantā 'minanta (only, if we may trust the example given, svāhā being held apart from its predecessor asi, because this happens to be the same word with its successor; and it is by no means impossible that the manuscripts are in the wrong upon this point). But this would be quite sufficiently intimated by the single restriction ārsha, without adding asi also; and that the latter is specifically intended to apply to the pada-readings, and the former to the jatā, is not easily to be believed. The asi would have best reason to be introduced because the words mentioned occur also before other vowels, with which they enter into combination—only, to be sure, I have not noted any cases in which they do so.

14. When followed by eshtaḥ, etana, eman, odman, oshtha, or evah, an a-vowel is elided.

That the elision mentioned in the rule is of an a-vowel is a consequence of the continued implication of the introductory rule x.3, above—although, as the commentator fails to point out, that implication was interrupted by rules 10-12, and was expressly stated at the outset to remain in force through rule 9. The passages contemplated are quoted by the commentator, as follows: aśiy' eshtaḥ rāyah (i.2.11¹), gamitārā upetana (iii.1.4², 5²), apām tv' emanant sādāyāmi (iv.3.1), apām tv' odmant sādāyāmi (iv.3.1: G. M. O. omits sādāyāmi in both these citations), svāh' oshthābhyām (vii.3.16¹), upayāman adharen' oshthena (v.7.12: O. omits the first word), and nir aminat' evaḥ chandah (v.3.5⁴: O. omits the last word). These are, so far as I have discovered, all the cases of application of the rule that the text contains. The commentator notes that rule i.22, which allows a theme ending in a, quoted in a rule, to stand for its various derivative forms, is the warrant for regarding oshthābhyām and oshthena as involved in oshtha. 15. An i-vowel and u become respectively y and v.

Here, the commentator tells us, the implication "preceded by an a-vowel" ceases, but the implication "followed by a vowel" has force—which implication comes all the way from rule 10 of the preceding chapter. The rule says 'ukāra, "short u," instead of uvarna, 'an u-vowel,' because long ū has already (by iv.5) been declared pragraha, and protracted ūs is made uncombinable below (by x.24). The examples are abhy asthāt (iv.2.8¹), ūty acyāma (i.3.14²), and ā pāshā etv ā vasu (ii.4.5³).

The word "and" (ca), we are told, brings down from the preceding rule the "i-vowel and u," there described as suffering a certain effect. As counter-examples, we have first nīcā' tām dhakshy atasām (i.2.14²) and mādhv agnā'u juhōti (ii.3.2³), to show that unless the converted vowels are acute, no circumflex appears; and then, to prove that the following vowel must also be grave, tād yād rey ādhy akshārāni (ii.4.11¹: G. As examples of the combination and its accentual result are given sūn-nyam iva (vi.2.4¹; p. sū-unnīyam), sūdgātā (vii.1.8¹; p. sū-ud-gātā), and māsū 'tīstham (vii.5.2²; p. māsū: ut-); to which G. M. add dikshū 'padādhāti (v.5.5⁴; p. dikshū: upa-dā-). The only other case of the kind which I have noted in the Sanhitā is sūpa-sadanah (vii.5.20; p. sū-upasadanah). The commentator adds a couple of counter-examples: the first, sūpasthā' devāh (i.2.2³; p. su-upasthā'h), shows that the former u must be acute; the other, tā' dikshū' pā' dadhata (v.5.5⁴), that the latter u must be grave.

A later rule (xx.5) gives this particular variety of the circumflex accent the name praçliṣṭa.

None of the other Vedic texts has an accentual usage corresponding with this. Indeed, there is not in the Atharvan a single case of a combination of two u's such as is here contemplated, nor has any from the other Vedas come to my notice; if such there be, they are left to follow the general analogy of combinations of acute and grave into one homogeneous vowel (as illustrated under rule 10, above), the acute element raising the other to its own pitch and making the result acute. On the other hand, an exception to this general analogy is made in the other Sanhitās (and duly explained in their Pratiçākhyas: see Rik Pr. iii.7, Vāj. Pr. iv.132, Ath. Pr. iii.56) in favor of the coalescence of two short i's into a long i; if the former be acute and the latter grave, they produce together a circumflex. Of such a combination, I have

18. Exceptions are çyetî and mithunî.

That is to say, these words are exceptions to rule 15—and, being thus exempt from the conversion there prescribed, and there being no other rule requiring their alteration, they remain unchanged, as if they were pragrahas. The examples are çyâitena çyetî akuruta (v.5.8¹: O. omits the first word; çyetî occurs also in the next division of the same section, though not before a vowel), and na mithunî abhavan (v.3.6²: B. omits na). The latter word is found in two other places—at iii.4.9¹ and vi.5.8⁶—exhibiting the same uncombinable quality; and in the latter place it has been made (at iv.53) the subject of special exception as not a pragraha. The pada-text, in fact, writes both words as if no peculiar character belonged to them.

19. But y and v are elided, when preceded by an a-vowel.

The word “but” (tu) in this rule, the commentator says, annuls the application of the rule to any other y and v than such as are the products of prescribed euphonic processes, and makes these alone the subjects of its action. As a y or v can never occur as final except by euphonic conversion, the particle has no very useful office to fill, according to the interpretation. Evidently enough, it is used here, as elsewhere in the treatise where a specific force is sought for it by the comment, simply as indicative of a sudden change of subject.

Vastly the largest class of cases falling under the rule is that in which, by ix.10, a visarjanîya has been converted into y after a, â, â before another vowel than a. In illustration of this class, the commentator quotes âpa undantu (i.2.1¹), dhruvâ asmin gopatâu (i.1.1: G. M. O. omit the last word), and na vicityâs iti (vi.1.9¹). The next class consists of cases of final e and âi, converted into ay and ây by ix.11,14: the examples are îma evâ 'smâi (ii.4.10³), and âsâmahâ ece 'mâu (vii.5.2¹). Yet another class embraces the endings in ân of which the n was turned to y (with nasalization of the â, or with anusvâra added, by xv.1–3) according to the rules at the end of the last chapter (ix.20–24): the selected example is martyâñ âviveça (v.7.9¹). But the rule teaches also the elision of final v; and O. boldly gives examples for this, as well: namely, vāyav ishtaye (ii.2.12⁸: W. adds durone), and ahāv ānādata (v.8.1²), although the text, by a usage which the comment ratifies under the next rule but one (x.21), retains the v in such cases, and it is retained by O. in these very phrases given to illustrate its omission. W. has only the former of the two, foolishly prefixing to it avarṇapārva iti kim, 'why is it said, "when an a-vowel precedes"?' The other manuscripts pass the point without notice here, leaving it to be settled under rule 21. The true counter-examples for this precept, showing that the elision takes place only after an a-vowel, are given by all alike: they are abhy asthāt (iv.2.8¹), and hrtvasah (iv.2.11³).

20. Not so, according to Ukhyā.

Ukhyā denies that y and v are omitted in any case; and would therefore read āpay undantu, imay eva, martyāny ā, and so on.

वकारस्तु सांकृत्यस्य ॥ २१ ॥

21. Not v, according to Sāṃkrtya.

The connection of this rule is somewhat anomalous, but its meaning is sufficiently evident. Sāṃkrtya dissents from the principle laid down in rule 19, like Ukhyā; "but" (tu) his dissent does not go the whole length of the latter's; according to him, only v is "not" elided. As the commentator has it, the fact that this rule teaches an exception is inferred, "by vicinage," from its predecessor: its tu is intended as an annulment of the opinion of former teachers. And he declares that it alone is approved, while the two that precede (the former of them, of course, only so far as it is inconsistent with this) and the two that follow (B. O. omit this) are rejected. The examples are those already given by a part of the MSS. under rule 19, namely vāyav ishtaye durone (ii.2.12⁸:

W. B. omit this example; O. puts it after the other one, and leaves off durone); and ahāv amadātā hate (v.6.12²: O. omits hate).

This is rather the most striking example afforded us of the overriding by the commentary of the obvious intent of the Prāṭisākhya itself. The usage of the existing Tāittiriya text is on the side of the comment: we have a similar resolution of the final a of vocatives into av, with retention of the v, at i.2.13² twice; 4.39; 6.12³: ii.2.12^{4,5}; 4.12³; 6.11¹: iii.2.10¹: vi.4.3². Of av as result of final du before a vowel, I have failed to collect the examples; but had there been any cases of the omission of the v, I think I should not have omitted to observe and note them.

22. According to Mācākiya, both are omitted when followed by u or o.

Instead of Mācākiya, the southern manuscripts have, both in the rule and in the commentary, Māyikāya.

All the manuscripts of the commentary declare that "respectively" (yathāsamkhyam) is to be understood in the rule—that is to say, that it directs us to drop y before u, and v before o; but their examples do not support this interpretation, and it is palpably a false one. It is difficult to believe that the rule itself is not corrupted, and that it ought not to read ukārāukāraparo lupyate, 'v is dropped before u or o' (it does not occur in the text before u); for, while we can discover no phonetic reason for the omission of y before a labial vowel, there is a very obvious difficulty in the utterance of v (vo) before u (no real Sanskrit word begins with vu, nor can I recall it in the interior of a word except as the rare result of sandhi); and, as thus amended, Mācākiya's view would accord with the accepted doctrine of the Rik Prāt. (ii.9–11), and with one mentioned, though not adopted, by the Vāj. Pr. (iv.125).

The illustrative examples given are in part those which have appeared already, even more than once, under the preceding rules:

āpa undantu (i.2.1¹), and yā ośadhayah (iv.2.6⁴⁻⁵: so W. B.; but G. M. O. give instead yā jātā ośadhayah, iv.2.6¹); to which O. adds an example for v, namely çatakratav ut (i.6.12³: it ought, in illustration of the rule, to read çatakrata ut), putting it between the other two. Counter-examples are ta enam bhishajyanti (ii.3.11⁴: we are to understand, apparently, that Mâcâkiya would read tay enam), and vâyav ishtaye (ii.2.12⁸).

The commentator remarks in conclusion that the repetition of lupyete in the present rule (it was read above, in rule 19) is intended to remove all suspicion of the continued implication of the negative which forms a part of the two preceding rules.

23. According to Vâtsapra, they are imperceptibly uttered.

It might admit of question whether the "they" here spoken of are final y and v in general, or only y and v followed by u and o, as specified in the last rule. As things stand, the use of the demonstrative etayoh rather favors, though not unequivocally, the latter interpretation, and it is the one adopted by the commentator. But if the preceding rule be restored to what we have suggested above as its more probable original form, then the etayoh will be very well in place here as referring to y and v in general; and this interpretation is supported by the fact that the Ath. Pr. (ii.24) and Pāṇini (viii.3.18) ascribe a like opinion to another grammarian, Çakatāyana, whose peculiar views upon the subject are likewise hinted at by the Vāj. Pr. (iv.126). As the meaning of leṣa is defined to be luptavaḍ uccāraṇam, 'utterance as if omitted,' there is not much for the two opposing parties to contend about.

rule pointing out that it has a bearing so extensive. Only one example is given for each class: astu hīs ity abrutām (vii.1.6¹), and te enam abhi (ii.5.6²).

The commentator points out, as he did not take the trouble to do under rule 18 of this chapter, that, the rules of combination being thus suspended with reference to these two classes, and no other rule being given about them, they remain in their natural condition.

All the Prātiçākhyas have rules equivalent to this (Rik Pr. ii.27; Vāj. Pr. iv.84; Ath. Pr. iii.33: in the note to Ath. Pr. i.73 I overlooked the present precept of the Tāittirīya-Prātiçākhyā); none assumes that the pronouncing a vowel to be pragraha exempts it, eo ipso, from phonetic combination.

25. Also the remaining vowel.

That is to say, the vowel remaining after the omission of the final y or v is, like those mentioned in the preceding rule, exempt from farther combination. According to the commentator, the "also" (ca) of the rule brings forward "y and v," the fact of their constituting an exception is inferred from the neighborhood of the preceding rule, and paraḥ means 'another,' and qualifies samdhīḥ understood: "no further combination takes place." This seems to me inadmissible, as there has been no suggestion of any such word as samdhī. Perhaps para may be better understood of the vowel "following" the y and v of which the chapter has been treating. It needs, at any rate, some violence to bring in the rule with the meaning which it is evidently intended to bear: no one would have any right to guess, from its form and position alone, at what it is aimed.

The commentator's examples are āpa undantu (i.2.1¹) and agra imam (i.1.5¹). In reply to the objection that it would be enough to state the implication of the rule as "where an omission has taken place" instead of "an omission of y or v," he brings up se 'd u hotā (i.1.14⁴), sāi 'nā 'nīkena (iv.3.13² et al.), and sāu 'sha-dhīḥ (iv.2.3³), as examples of an elision of a final which does not prevent the further combination of its predecessor and its successor under the rules of this chapter.

CHAPTER XI.

CONTENTS: 1, initial a elided after e or o; 2–18, exceptions, cases of retention of initial a after e or o; 19, dissident view as to the nature of the elision.

लुप्यते त्वकार एकरीकारपूर्वः ॥ १ ॥

1. But a is elided when preceded by e or o.

The subject of the omission or retention of initial a after final e or o, and of the accent thence arising, occupies the whole of this chapter and of the one next following, the cases of retention being mostly rehearsed in this. No attempt is made, here any more than in the treatment of other similar matters in the work, to effect a real classification—much less, an explanation—of the facts dealt with. Nor have I, on the other hand, drawn up such a classification, as I did for the Atharva-Veda (see Atharva-Prâtigākhya, under rule iii.54). Doubtless, if drawn up, it would show nearly the same state of things to prevail in the Tāittirīya as in the Atharvan text: namely, that the elision is the greatly prevailing, almost exclusive, usage in the prose passages; while, in the metrical passages, the a is more usually retained where the metre requires its retention, and omitted where the metre requires its omission—although with numerous exceptions, of which the most regular is that the a is dropped in writing at the beginning of a pāda, where, of course, it was always retained in metrical utterance. The general subject of the relation of the written and spoken texts to one another in regard to this special point is well worth an elaborate investigation, founded on all the Vedic texts.

For the word “but” (tu) in the rule is given an alternative explanation. Some, the commentator says, regard it as suspending the force of the exceptional rule x.24: others, as marking the discontinuance of the general direction “followed by a vowel,” which has been in action since ix.10. As in other like cases heretofore, we have no good reason for applying it to any particular rule or phrase; it merely marks an abrupt transition to a new subject, somewhat exceptional in its relations to the principles already laid down. The subject was, however, anticipated and provided for in rule ix.13.

To illustrate the rule, only two phrases, both of frequent occurrence, are quoted: namely te 'bruvan (ii.5.1³ et al.) and so 'bravīt (ii.1.2¹ et al.).

In the other Prātiçākhyas, the apparent loss of initial a after e or o is treated as an absorption of it into its predecessor, or a unification of the two. See Ath. Pr. iii.53 and note, and rule 19 of this chapter, where a somewhat similar view seems suggested.

All the MSS. excepting B. read in the rule ekāraokārapūrah; and, where the rule is quoted (i.61 and ix.13), we have six cases of this reading against three of ekārāuk-. But the former is simply an instance of the usage, so common in the commentary (see above, p. 4), of separating, for the sake of clearness, the elements of compound words, or otherwise disregarding the rules of sandhi.

2. Now follow cases of non-elision.

The rest of this chapter is occupied with an enumeration of the cases in which initial a is retained. First, in rule 3, a number of passages are specified in which non-elision is the rule, and elision (as determined by the rules of the next chapter) is exceptional; then, in the following rules, more isolated cases are disposed of.

3. The a is not elided in the following sections: those beginning with dhātū rātiḥ and upa; those styled vājapeya; those beginning with jush'a and cyenāya; those styled ukhya; those beginning with dhruvakshitih, iyam eva sā yā, and agnir mûrdhā; the first and the next to the last of the rudra chapter; and those styled vikarsha, vihavya, hiranyavarṇīya, yājyā, and mahāpr-shīthya.

Here are pointed out not less than seventy-three sections or anuvākas, in which a is not elided (except in the cases specified in the rules of the next chapter). Those designated by the annotation of their first words are i.4.44; 5.5: iii.1.10; 2.8: iv.3.4, 11; 4.4. The vājapeya sections are six, namely i.7.7-12. The ukhya sections (as pointed out above, under ix.20) are twenty, namely iv.1.1-10; 2.1-10. The rudra chapter is iv.5, containing eleven sections; those here referred to, then, are iv.5.1,10. The name vīkarśha belongs to five sections, namely iv.6.1-5. Three sections, iv.7.12-14, are styled vihavya. The hīraṇyavarṇīya section (as shown under ix.20) is v.6.1. The yājyās have been repeatedly the subjects of prescription in earlier chapters (iii.9,11; ix.30); they are twenty-three sections, namely i.1.14; 2.14; 3.14; 4.46; 5.11; 6.12; 7.13; 8.22; ii.1.11; 2.12; 3.14; 4.14; 5.12; 6.11,12; iii.1.11; 2.11; 3.11; 4.11; 5.11; iv.1.11; 2.11; 3.13. The mahāprsthīya sections, finally, are the first six of those which (as seen under ix.20) bear the name prsthīya; they are iv.4.12; 6.6-9; 7.15.

Section i.4.44 is quoted by its two first words, instead of by dhātā only, according to the commentator, because of the occurrence in another śākhā of a section beginning dhātā devebhyo 'surān (G. M. omit asurān). Again, iv.3.4 is quoted by dhruva-kshitih, instead of by dhruva (the first padā of dhruva-kshitih, i.48), because dhruva (by i.22) would include dhruvak, and there is another section beginning with this word, and containing eases of elision, dhruvo 'si dhruvo 'hañ sañāteshu bhāyāsam (ii.3.9¹: only G. M. have the last two words), which would otherwise be violations of the rule. Yet again, to quote iv.3.11 by iyam simply would not answer, because i.2.4 begins with iyāñ te śakra tanāḥ, and contains a case of elision, sagarbhyo 'nu sakhā sayāthyah (i.2.4²: only O. has the last word; G. M. omit the example). But why quote by so long a phrase as iyam eva sā yā, of which the last two words are unnecessary? To this objection there is an alternative answer: some say that it is for the benefit of the dull-minded; others, that it is intended to include a verse which, though occurring in another place (at i.4.33), is a remainder to this, and which contains the case of non-elision o te yanti ye aparishu paśyān (i.4.33: G. M. O. omit paśyān). Now it is true that the single verse constituting i.4.33 is of kindred subject with iv.3.11, and in the Rig-Veda forms part of the same hymn (i.113) with parts of the latter; and it is also true that the combination ye aparishu is not otherwise authorized by the Prātiśākhya; but it is, of course, little less than absurd to assert that an excessive quotation of the beginning of the one anuvāka has any right, or can have been intended, to include the other. The right of i.4.33, it may be remarked, to stand in the text to which our Prāticākhya applies, is assured by the contemplation of others of its phonetic phenomena by rules found elsewhere (most unequivocally by vi.5); its case of non-elision would seem to have been overlooked by the makers of the treatise, but discovered by the commentators, some of whom have tried to force it violently within the ken of their rules. It is necessary to quote iv.4.4 by two words, because i.6.3 also begins with agnih, and in it we find yo me 'nti dūre 'rātiyati (i.6.3¹: the example is wanting in G. M.). Finally, instead of prshthya passages, the mahāprshthya are specified, because of such cases as prthivi te 'ntariksheṇa (v.2.12²: the anuvāka is prshthya, but not mahāprshthya).

The commentator cites one or more examples from each of the sections or sets of sections which the rule specifies, as follows. From the section beginning dhātā rātiḥ is taken nidhipatir no agnih (i.4.44¹); it contains three more cases, and one exception. From that beginning with upa comes āre asme ca (i.5.5¹); it contains six other cases, and one exception. From the rājapeya sections, te no arrantaḥ (i.7.8²) and te agre agrom ā 'yuñjan (i.7.7²); they contain eleven examples, and eleven exceptions. The section beginning with jushta yields yas te aṅguh (iii.1.10¹), and O. alone adds yo drapso aṅguh (iii.1.10¹); there are two other cases, and no exception. From the śyenāya section, namaḥ pitrbhyo abhi (iii.2.8³) and viṣṇe arapā edhate (iii.2.8⁴); there are four other cases, and two exceptions. From the ukhya sections, grvanti viṣṇe anṛtasya putrah (iv.1.1²: only W. has putrah) and namo astu sarpebhyah (iv.2.8³); they yield seventy-five cases, and forty-five exceptions. From the section dhruvākshitiḥ are cited the only two examples, viṣṇe abhi grñantu (iv.3.4²) and ārmir drapso apām asi (iv.3.4³: only G. M. have asi); there are no exceptions. From the section beginning iyam etc. are taken ketum kṛvāṇe ajare (iv.3.11¹: G. M. omit ketum) and trayo gharmāso anu (iv.3.11¹); there are three other cases, and one exception. The first example here is not well chosen, since the e of kṛvāne is pragraha, and pragrahas are not contemplated in the general rules for elision: see xii.8 and note. From the agnir mārḍhā section, sa yojate arushah (iv.4.4⁴) and enā vo agnīm namasā (iv.4.4⁴: O. omits namasā); there are three other cases, and one exception. From the specified sections of the rudra chapter are taken namo astu nilagrivāya (iv.5.1³), drāpe andhasas pate (iv.5.10¹), and utā mā no arbhakam (iv.5.10²); they afford fourteen cases, and five exceptions. From the vikarsha sections, anyām te asmat tapantu (iv.6.1^{3,5}: only W. has tapantu) and pāvako asmabhyam (iv.6.1¹ etc.); there are thirty-three cases, and ten exceptions. From the vihavya sections, viṣve adya marutah (iv.7.12¹: O. omits marutah) and viṣve devāso odhi vocatā me (iv.7.14²: only O. has viṣve); ten cases and five exceptions. The hiranyararnīya section affords three cases only, of which one is cited, eko devo apy atishṭhat (v.6.1³). The yājyā sections afford a hundred and twenty-nine cases, with thirty-eight exceptions; the selected examples are supathā rāye asmān (i.1.14³; repeated at i.4.43¹) and kāmena kṛto abhy ānat (i.1.14²: W. B. O. end with abhi). From the mahāprsthīyis, finally, come vivasvad rāte abhi nah (iv.4.12⁴) and somo adhi bravitu (iv.6.6⁴: O. adds no dīm, doubtless for no dītiḥ, which follows in the text); they contain thirty-eight cases and nine exceptions.

This rule, accordingly, disposes at one stroke of three hundred and fifty-one cases of the retention of a; but it is at the cost of creating a formidable body of exceptions, a hundred and thirty-one in number, which have to be provided for by the counter-rules of the next chapter—while, once more, a considerable number of the cases falling under the rule have to be individually specified, partly in that chapter and partly in the two following rules of this, as exceptions under the counter rules. It is a complicated process, but it successfully attains at last its purpose.

4. Also in añhasaḥ, añhatih, anishṭṛtaḥ, avantv asmān, avadyāt, and ahani.

The cases of non-elision referred to are as follows: for añhasaḥ, pramuñcanto no añhasaḥ (iv.3.13⁵); for añhatih, pari dveshaso añhatih (ii.6.11²); for anishṭṛtaḥ, vardhatām te anishṭṛtaḥ (iv.1.7²); for avantv asmān, te avantv asmān (ii.6.12³), with a counter-example, te no 'vuntu pītaro haveshu (ii.6.12⁴: only G. M. have haveshu), to prove the necessity of giving asmān along with avantv in the rule; for avadyāt, mitramaho avadyāt (i.2.14⁶); and for ahani, çuciḥ çukre ahany ojasinā (iv.4.12¹: G. M. O. stop at ahani). All of them occur in passages which are the subject of the preceding rule, and the commentator points out that the "also" (ca) of the rule brings forward the implication of those passages, and that to any of the words specified, if occurring elsewhere in the text, the rule does not apply; citing as example sa evāi 'nam pāpmano 'ñhaso muñcati (ii.2.7⁴: all but G. M. stop at añhasaḥ). At first sight, then, the rule appears to be a superfluous repetition of part of the cases involved in the preceding one; in fact, however, its value is that of a rehearsal of exceptions under rule xii.4, which teaches that even in the sections above specified, an a before a y, v, n, or h, if those letters be followed by a vowel, is elided. The only thing calling for explanation about the matter is the connection in which the counter-exceptions are given, which is, to say the least, quite peculiar.

5. Also in anu, when preceded by gharmāsaḥ, āpaḥ, martah, rathah, tvah, datte, and vātaḥ.

This rule belongs, in part, in the same category with the preceding, as pointing out cases in which the a of anu is retained according to rule 3 of this chapter, notwithstanding the prohibition of rule xii.4; but in part it is of a more general character, since the last two cases lie outside the sections specified in rule 3.

The commentator explains the phraseology used as signifying that the words rehearsed, having their final visarga [with the preceding a] converted to o [of course, excepting datte], have the office of preceding causes—that is, of producing an effect upon the word that follows them; but he gives no hint of the partial suspension of the implication made in the preceding rule; intimating rather, that the cases rehearsed are all of them exceptions under rule xii.4. He quotes the passages, as follows: trayo gharmāso anu (iv.3.11¹), tasmād āpo anu sthāna (v.6.1³), yadā te marto anu (iv.6.7³), anu tvā ratho anu (iv.6.7³), pīyati tvo anu tvaḥ (iv.2.3⁴: only G. M. have the last word), śukram ā datte anuhāya jāryāi (iii.2.2²: G. M. O. omit jāryāi), and dhanus tad vāto anu vātu te (v.5.7^{3,4}: O. ends with anu). To show that other words than anu are not relieved from the action of xii.4, he gives us amushmīṇ loke vāto 'bhi parate (v.4.9⁴: all but G. M. begin at vāto); and further, to show that anu retains its a only after these words, anu gāvo 'nu bhagah kauṇām (iv.6.7³: only G. M. O. have the last word).

I have noted ten cases in which the a of anu is elided under the operation of rule xii.4.

6. Also (after vātaḥ) in abhi vātu and apah.

The ca, 'also,' here brings down as pūrvanimitta simply vātaḥ, the word last specified in the preceding rule. The cases have nothing to do with xi.3: they are mayobhār vāto abhi vātā 'srāḥ (vii.4.17¹: G. M. omit the first word, and they alone have the last), and yad vāto apo agamat (vii.4.20: O. omits agamat); and, as counter-examples, the commentator quotes vāto 'bhi (v.4.9⁴) to show the necessity of giving vātu after abhi in the rule, and ava rundhe 'po 'gre 'bhiryāharati (vi.4.3²: G. M. omit the last two words) to attest the implication conveyed by the ca.

7. Also (after apah) in anu and agamat.

Here, again, the ca, 'also,' brings forward only the last word in the preceding rule, namely apah—and what is more, gives that word a new character, changing it from nimittin to nimitta or affecting cause. Of this the commentator takes no notice, and we are doubtless to regard it as quite in order, and as merely adding another to the formidable list of uncertainties involved in the curious system of anuvṛtti or continued implication. The passages had in view are apo anr acārishum (i.4.45³, 46²: B. reads āpo adyā 'nr, which is the version of the Rig-Veda, i.23.23) and apo agamad indrasya (vii.4.20); as counter-example, is given paçavo 'nū 'd āyan (ii.1.5¹), to prove the implication of apah.

The necessity of specifying napāt after apām is shown by vārunīr āpo 'pām ca (ii.1.9²), and the restriction to preceding āpah by so 'smān pātu (v.5.5¹).

9. In asmān, also, if followed by a, when rāye, sah, and indrah precede.

The ca, 'also,' again brings down the word last mentioned in the preceding rule. The passages for sah and indrah are mā so asmān arachāya (v.7.9¹) and indro asmān asmin dvītiye (iii.1.9²: O. omits dvītiye): and other cases of asmān after sah are to be found at i.6.6⁴ and iii.2.7². As counter-examples, are given so 'smān pātu (v.5.5¹), to show that the asmān must be followed by a; and smo 'smān anutra (vi.6.1⁴: all the MSS. of the commentary have the false reading so 'smān; such a phrase would be precisely out of place here as illustration), to show that it is only after the words specified that asmān, even before a, remains unmutilated.

The other case, that of preceding rāye, makes more difficulty, since the saṁhitā contains no passage in which asmān, when itself followed by a, has rāye before it. The commentator first declares the passage had in view to belong to another text (śākhā); but adds, as an alternative explanation, that the precept relates to the jaṭā-text, where we read rāye asmān asmān rāye rāye asmān (i.1.14³; 4.43¹). He proceeds further to say that, in case any one objects that in the saṁhitā form of the passage the example does not hold good, since asmān is not there followed by a (it reads rāye asmān vigvāni), he shall reply that the case is one falling under i.61. It is there taught, namely, that a passage of three words or more, if repeated in the text, reads as it read on its first occurrence: now the one in question first appears in i.1.14, which is a yājñā section, and hence the a of asmān is retained by xi.3; at i.4.43, then, its retention is assured. But then there ought to be no necessity for specially establishing its retention in jaṭā, any more than in any other case where an a is retained in saṁhitā. This difficulty the commentator evidently perceives, although he does not state it; for otherwise the jaṭā explanation would have satisfied him, and he would never have thought of suggesting another śākhā. The difficulty really remains unsolved, and a serious one: either there was a blunder on the part of the makers of the treatise, or a passage not contained in the present Sanhitā was contemplated by them: I incline to think the former more likely.

15. Also when āvinnaḥ or somaḥ precedes and agni follows.

It may be made a question whether the rule should not read gnīparah (without sign of omission), and mean 'also an a preceded by āvinnaḥ or somaḥ and followed by gnī.' But the authority of the comment (see below) is decidedly, though not unequivocally, in favor of what I have given, and the construction, though a peculiar one, has its analogies elsewhere in the treatise (compare x.4 etc.). The further difficulty remains, however, that the only passages in the text to which the rule can apply read agnīḥ, in the nominative singular, after the two words specified, so that there appears to be no reason why we should not have simply 'gnīḥ, instead of 'gnīparah. This the commentator does not fail to perceive, and accordingly—resorting, as we cannot well help saying, to one of his usual subterfuges—he declares agni (or, according to W. B. O., gni) “a part of a word, intended to include a number of cases occurring in another çākḥā,” not going so far, however, as to quote any of these cases. I suspect gniparah to be either a corruption of gniḥ, or originally intended as equivalent with it.

The passages are āvinno agnir grhapatiḥ (i.8.12²) and somo agnir upa devāḥ (iii.2.4¹); and the commentator adds counter-examples, so gnir jātaḥ (v.1.4¹) and āvinno 'yam asūru (i.8.12²).

M. O. the last three), and payo aghniyāsu hrtsu (i.2.8¹: O. omits hrtsu, which would make the citation include also vi.1.11³). This exposition seems to prove that the proper reading at the end of the rule is aghniya, and I have ventured to adopt it, though all the MSS. (except T., which is ambiguous, running rules 17 and 18 together in sundhi) give aghniyā. Aghniyā would answer as including aghniyāsu, but it would not include also aghniye.

18. Also in adhvara, when a vowel follows [the r].

The examples given in illustration of the rule are satyadhvar-māno adhware (i.2.1²), havishmān devo adhvarah (i.3.12), and upaprayanto adhvaram ity āha (i.5.7¹). In regard to the last of them, it is remarked that rule i.61 is not of force for it, since the conditions imposed by that rule do not arise in it. The rule, namely, directs that a passage of three words or more, being repeated in the text, is to be read as where it first occurred; now upaprayanto adhvaram was found at i.5.5¹, where the retention of the a comes under rule 3 of this chapter; but here only two words, instead of three, are cited in the repetition. As counter-examples, showing the value of the restriction "when a vowel follows," are given çug vā agnih so 'dhvaryum (v.6.2⁴) and andho 'dhvaryuh syāt (v.1.3¹ and vi.1.8³: O. alone has syāt, and, without that addition, the phrase is found also at v.1.3²). This proves that what is to be "followed by a vowel" is the r of adhvara; but how that meaning is conveyed by the terms of the rule is not easy to discover. The MSS. are at variance as to the reading of the first word of the rule, T. W. B. O. giving adhvara, and G. M. adhvare, between which I am at a loss to decide confidently, because neither of them appears to be what is wanted. But I prefer adhvara, both because it is better supported, and because it is not the usage of the treatise to put in a case-form the words or themes which it cites from the text.

An additional case falling under the rule is īrdhro adhvarah (i.1.12); and yet others (as i.5.5¹ twice, and, doubtless, i.4.46²⁻³), to which it would else apply, are disposed of under the general rule xi.3.

19. In the opinion of some, it becomes half-similar with its predecessor.

This is a very blind precept, and we are permitted to doubt whether its purport is interpreted aright by the commentary; in which, moreover, there are peculiar and unintelligent variations of reading. What letter is the subject of the rule—the elided a, or the non-elided? The comment says the latter (although the majority of MSS. blunderingly say the "non-protracted" instead), and states that it acquires a quantity similar to half a mora, or becomes one and a half moras long. It is added, that no special examples are given, because such would not bring to light any difference (? only O. has the reading that means this: W. B. omit the "not;" G. M. are unintelligible). This appears to me quite unsatisfactory. The distinct demonstrative sa in the rule ought to point back to something distinctly stated above, and that is the akāra which in rule 1 is said to be dropped after certain "predecessors." We have had no akāra ahuṭa spoken of, but only cases of alopa of akāra. And it seems to be taught here, in accordance with the doctrines of all the other Prātiçākhyas (see note to Ath. Pr. iii.53), that some regard the a as (not elided, but) so absorbed into the preceding diphthong as to become assimilated to, or identified with, the latter half of that diphthong. We may with plausibility conjecture the rule to be a later addition to the original substance of the chapter.

CHAPTER XII.

CONTENTS: 1-8, elision and non-elision of initial a after final e or o in exceptional and special cases; 9-11, resulting accent.

अथ लोपः ॥ १ ॥

1. Now for cases of elision.

This is a general heading to the chapter (that is to say, to its first eight rules); which, as the commentator points out, has for its sphere of action the passages specified in rule 3 of the preceding chapter. This is a matter of course: the general rule (by xi.1) being elision, there can be need of an additional authority for elision only where that rule is contravened by another of opposing character, and of wider application than to specific cases only.

2. The a of asi is elided.

The examples given are suparno 'si garutmān (iv.1.10⁵; 6.5³: v.1.10⁵: O. omits the last word) and pratho 'si prthivy asi (iv.2.9¹: O. stops at 'si). The elision is not infrequent in this word, usually occurring in the little prose phrases which are inserted among the verses in the sections concerned; I have noted eighteen other cases: but they are hardly worth detailed reference.

3. But not when garbhah, sāmnaddhah, yamah, or bhadrah precedes.

The examples quoted by the commentator are garbho asy osha-dhīnām (iv.2.3³), sāmnaddho asi vidayasva (iv.6.6⁵), asi yamo asy ādityah (iv.6.7¹: G. M. O. omit the last word), and tvam bhadro asi kratuh (iv.3.13¹). There is another case of asi after garbhah at iv.1.4², which is then repeated at v.1.5³, the a standing this time unelided by rule i.61.

As usual, the commentator thinks it necessary to account for the inclusion of the double pada sam-naddhah, instead of simply naddhah, in the rule. Some, he says, quote as counter-example upanaddho 'surah (iv.4.9); but its propriety is questionable, since the passage does not fall under xi.3, and moreover, there is no asi in it (O. has the good sense to pass without notice this most absurd suggestion); and the valid counter-example is to be sought in another śākhā. We have here an unusually clear example of the arbitrary way in which the plea śākhāntare is resorted to, in order to avoid the attribution of a slight inconsistency to the treatise-makers.

4. A is elided before y, v, n, and h, when these are followed by a vowel.

The examples given are hiraṇyagrāgo 'yo asya pādāh (iv.6.7⁴: O. omits pādāh), vanaspate 'ra sṛjā rarānah (iv.1.8³: O. omits rarānah), varenyo 'nu prayāṇum (iv.1.10⁴), and jambhayanto 'hiṁ vṛkam (i.7.8²: O. omits vṛkam). These are but specimens selected from among a considerable number of cases: namely, before y, two; before v, nineteen; before o, fourteen (all but three of them, cases of anu, the counter-exceptions to which form in part the subject of xi.5); before h (which, as the counter-exceptions noted in xi.4 show, includes also ñh), five; in all, forty. To show the necessity of the restriction "when these are followed by a vowel," are cited śukraṁ te anyut (iv.1.11²) and agre ahnāñ hitah (iv.1.3⁴: O. omits hitah).

There is a well-established difference of reading here in the rule itself: T. B. G. M. have yavanuṭha svarapareṣu, only W. and O. adding para (which I have amended to paraḥ) after ha. So also, where the rule is quoted under i.21, W. alone (there is no O. for that part of the work) introduces para; under xi.4 and 5, W. and B. alike have yavanahaparatva etc., but the testimony as to the rule is equivocal, since para might well have been added there by way of exposition instead of quotation. I have, as usual, followed W., although not without suspicion that the para is a gloss, introduced to help the otherwise blind and inaccurate phraseology of the rule—which latter, however, is not altogether discordant with the usage of the treatise elsewhere.

The exceptions under this rule, instead of being rehearsed after it, as is the general habit of the Prâtigākhya, are given in rules 4 and 5 of the preceding chapter, and, in the latter rule, mingled with instances of a wholly different character. Here, then, a particular specification of cases already included under a general rule is regarded as insuring against inclusion in a more general statement of exceptions under that rule. I believe that the treatise offers no other example of this canon of interpretation.

5. Before j and gn, a is elided if acute.

The examples are ojo jāyathāḥ (i.6.12⁴) and ṣuciḥ pāvaka vandyo 'gne (i.3.14⁵); and the counter-examples, of a unaccented remaining unelided, are nā tatṛśhānō ajārah (iv.6.1²) and nidhi-pāṭir no agnīḥ (i.4.44¹). There is, as the examples show, a real reason in the accent: ājāyathāḥ and agne are both words that are accented only at the beginning of a pāda, where (as remarked under xi.1) the elision of a is an almost universal rule. All the other cases of elision before gn (nine in number) are of the same kind; not, however, those before j (only two).

6. Before gn, also when preceded by maḥ, vacaḥ, dadhānaḥ, and sthe.

The ca, 'also,' of this rule, brings down simply gn from its predecessor, the intent being to point out the cases where the a of agni is elided even when unaccented. Maḥ, it is stated, is a part

The other passages had in view by the rule are vaco 'gnaye bharatā brhat (iii.2.11¹: O. omits the last two words), dadhāno 'gnir hotā (iv.1.3⁴), and sadhasthe 'gnim purishyam (iv.1.3¹: O. omits purishyam). To prove the implication of gn only, is given sadhasthe adhy uttarasmīn (iv.6.5³; 7.13⁴: v.7.7²: O. omits).

fall under xii.4.⁶ Its inclusion here is necessary, because in saṁhitā the word becomes anv, so that its n is no longer “followed by a vowel,” as required by that rule. The question might arise, whether rule i.51 would not, at any rate, cause anv to be implied along with anu; but the commentator does not raise it, and the course taken by the treatise is evidently the more reasonable and safer one.

The last three cases which the rule deals with are of a peculiar character, and quite different from all the rest falling under this chapter, being those in which a final pragraha or uncombinable vowel elides an initial a, either in the passages specified in xi.3 (like the last of the three) or elsewhere (like the other two). This the commentator points out, and declares that in every other instance the a remains after a pragraha. I have already noticed (under iv.6,7) what the usage of the text is after pragrahas in o: that, against the two cases here mentioned of a elided after a vocative in o, there are but two in which the a remains; but that after a final o containing the partiele u we have twenty-one cases of a retained, and no case of its elision. The passages where a is retained after an e that is pragraha, I have omitted to note: but there is a considerable number of them, including many (e. g. i.4.30: ii.5.6⁵: vi.3.5³: vii.5.3²: the commentator cites a single one, ime aṣvīṇā saṁvatsarah, v.6.4¹) where the retention is not otherwise authorized: so that inability to cause elision is unquestionably involved in the very character of a pragraha vowel, according to the view of the treatise, and needs not to be expressly stated. At this we have a right to be surprised, especially for two reasons: first, that it is thought necessary to teach (see x.24) that pragrahas are not liable in general to combination with the initial vowels that follow them; and secondly, that according to this treatise there is no combination of the initial a with the preceding e or o, but an actual loss of it, leaving the e or o unaffected (except sometimes as to accent). But the essential character of the pragraha vowels, the reason of their peculiar treatment, and the proper significance of the term by which they are called, are obscure points as yet in Hindu phonetics and nomenclature.

It remains to inquire how complete and accurate is the enumeration by the Prātiśākhya of the cases of elision or non-elision of a occurring in the Tāittiriya Saṁhitā. I have, in looking through the Saṁhitā, carefully considered every case with reference to the rules of the treatise, and the result is that, apart from ye aparīṣhu

(i.4.33) already treated of under xi.3 (p. 244), I have found only two cases of a retained which are not accounted for: namely ūrdhvo asthāt (v.2.1⁵; R-V. x.1.1) and so agnih (v.2.3³; R-V. vii. 1.16); and both these I suspect to fall under i.61, I having failed to note the previous occurrence of the passages. Of cases explained by i.61 there is a considerable number; only, as was remarked under that rule (see p. 47), there are three among them to which, if the commentator's forced interpretation of its terms be admitted, it cannot be made to apply. Of cases of elision of a unaccounted for, I have found none. Of course, my examination of the Sanhitā, having been made by the help of a single samhitā manuscript, is not to be credited as absolutely accurate: yet I have a good deal of faith in the trustworthiness of its result.

तस्मिन्ननुदात्ते पूर्व उदात्तः स्वरितम् ॥ १ ॥

9. When the elided a is grave, the preceding diphthong, if acute, becomes circumflex.

All the Prāticākhyas, and the usage of the known Vedic texts, are in accord upon this point (see note to Ath. Pr. iii.55). To the particular circumflex hence resulting, the treatise gives later (xx.4) the name abhinihata; the others call it abhinihita. The examples given are tē 'bruvan (ii.5.1³ et al.) and sē 'bravīt (ii.1.2¹ et al.).

The representation of the tone of the elided a in the resulting accent of the eliding diphthong, of course, favors the view that regards it as absorbed into the latter, rather than elided.

10. When it is acute, the preceding diphthong, if grave, becomes acute.

This, also, is a universal usage. The commentator quotes two examples: āva rundhatē 'satraṁ vā'i (vii.3.8¹; O. omits ava) and annūpatē 'nnasya (iv.2.3¹ and v.2.2¹).

स्वरितश्च सर्वत्र स्वरितश्च सर्वत्र ॥ ११ ॥

11. As also, in every case, if circumflex.

The commentator explains ca, 'also,' as bringing down udātte,

'when the elided a is acute,' from the preceding rule, and sarvatra, 'in every case,' as signifying 'whether the circumflex be independent or enclitic.' His examples are bheshajām gārē 'śvāya (i.8.6¹) and ōjō 'jāyathāh (i.6.12⁴), where the final syllables of gāve and ōjah have the enclitic circumflex by xiv.29, and ātho 'kthyō 'thā 'tirātrāh (vii.1.5⁴: G. M. O. omit the first word), where the final syllable of ukthyāh has the independent circumflex before the elision.

We might perhaps also fairly conclude that sarvatra implies an inclusion of the case treated of in rule 9, and virtually teaches that a final circumflex, eliding an initial grave, is still circumflex.

With this chapter ends the first praṇa, or section, of the treatise. The division into praṇas is a purely external and formal one, and (as I gave notice would be the case, in the Introductory Note to the Atharva Prātiçākhyā) is made no account of in this edition. References made to the succeeding chapters by section and chapter will easily be found by adding twelve to the number of the chapter as given.

A general heading, of which, however, the force extends but a very little way (through rule 4). The subject is a supplement to that treated at v.27-31, where we are told what is done with m before a mute, or before any other semivowel than r.

2. A m is omitted, when followed by r or a spirant.

This omission of m is accompanied, according to xv.1-3, by the nasalization of the preceding vowel, or else the insertion of anusvāra after it. Respecting the relation of these alternative views to one another, see the note to ii.30. The definition of the m as lost or omitted accords best with the former view: it is sufficiently logical and consistent to say that the consonant is lost and the vowel nasalized; if, however, an anusvāra, as a separate vocal element, is to take the place of m after the vowel, the only acceptable form of statement must be that the m is directly converted into anusvāra. This form of statement is in fact adopted by the Rik (iv.5) and Vāj. (iv.1) Prāṭicākhyas, which acknowledge an anusvāra, while the other is rightly preferred by the Ath. Prāt. (ii.32, i.67), which holds the theory of the nasalized vowel: our own treatise, as was pointed out above (p. 68), trims between the two views.

The commentator's examples are pratyushtaṁ rakshaḥ (i.1.2¹ et al.), sañcitam me brahma (iv.1.10³: v.1.10²), taṁ shuḍ āhāni (v.5.2⁶), sañ-sam id yuvase vṛshan (ii.6.11⁴: iv.4.4⁴: only G. M. have vṛshan), and tvañ ha yad yaviṣṭhya (ii.6.11¹). Counter-examples are given: to show that m before other letters is not dropped, idaṁ vām āsye (iii.3.11¹); to show that the dropped m must be a final, tasmāt tāmrā āpah (vi.4.2⁴). The commentator, namely, has quietly introduced the limitation padāntah, 'when final,' into his explanation of the rule, without pointing out whence he derives it: it comes, in fact, only from the general scope of the treatise, which thus far, having the relation of pada and samhitā texts under treatment, has dealt almost exclusively with final and initial letters.

3. As also, according to some teachers, when followed by y or v.

2. *rephaparaḥ*¹ co² "shmaparaḥ ca padānto³ makāro lupyate. yathā⁴: praty-....: sañ-....: tañ-....: sañ-....: tvañ-....⁵ 'evampara iti kim: idaṁ-....: padānta iti kim: tasmāt-....⁶ rephaḥ co "shmāṇaḥ⁶ ca 'rephoshmāṇaḥ: te pure⁷ yasmāt sa tathoktaḥ.

The authorities here quoted are, as the commentator does not fail to point out, the same with those referred to above, in v.30, where we were taught that some teachers hold m not to be assimilated to a following y or v, any more than to r. The accepted teaching of the treatise, however, is (v.28-9) that m before y, l, and v becomes a nasal counterpart to those letters respectively: whence the present rule is pronounced unapproved. For the bearings of the discordant doctrine, see note to v.30.

The examples are tvam̐ yajñeshv̐ idyah (i.1.14⁴; 2.3¹⁻²: O. omits idyah) and tañ vā etañ yajamānuh̐ (v.6.9³: O. omits the last word): the ordinary and approved reading would be tvam̐, tam̐, and etañ—as all the MSS. in fact read, neglecting the illustration of the opinion set forth in the rule. A counter-example is given, yam̐ kāmuyeta (i.6.10⁴ et al.).

4. But not the m of sam and sām, when followed by rā.

This is a precept applying only to the two words samrāj and sāmrajya, and in the other Prātiçākhyas (see note to Ath. Pr. ii.36) these words or the root rāj are particularly specified; since, however, the syllable rā does not chance to occur in the Tāittiriya Sanhitā except in these words after sum or sām, there is no inaccuracy in the more general statement as here made. The examples of the occurrence of the words in question selected by the commentator as illustrations are pru samrājam (i.6.12³) and sāmrajyāya sukratuh̐ (i.8.16¹: O. omits sukratuh̐). As counter-examples, we have gañ rājann̐ oshadhūbyah̐ (iii.2.3¹) to show that no other words

According to W. B. O., the particle iti in the rule is intended to deny the application to the word here had in view of rule xiv.28, respecting duplication, and to assure the duplication of the m before the r. But G. M. insert tu, 'but,' in the rule after iti, ascribing to it the effect just defined, and making the iti simply signify that the words mentioned, and no others, are the subjects of the rule. And G. (not M.) writes the examples accordingly, sammrājan and sāmmrājyāya. That this bit of constructive interpretation is a pure figment of the commentators does not need to be pointed out; respecting its occasion and bearing, see the note to xiv.28. I have adopted the reading of W. etc., which is presumably the older and more genuine: in the comment on xiv.28, even G. M. agree with the others in making iti the bond of connection between the two rules.

5. Now of individual sounds.

According to the comment on rule xxiv.2 (see the note to that rule), we have here one of the main division lines of the treatise. Thus far, from the beginning of the fifth chapter, we have had to do chiefly with the combination of separate words or padas into connected text; now we turn to the determination of individual letters, which are read alike in both forms of text. That the intention of the treatise-makers recognized so grand a transition here may be doubted; but that the change is one of some importance is not questionable.

Already, in a previous chapter (vii.1–12,15,16), we have had detailed all the cases in which a n is changed to ṇ in the course of the combination of words into phrases, in the conversion of pada into saṃhitā; now, the treatise sets out to account for every single n occurring in the whole text. And the present is the leading general rule, involving, with the extensions and restrictions imposed later, by far the greater number of cases.

The commentator's examples are tribhīr ṛṇarā jāyate (vi.3.10⁵: O. has a lacuna, involving the beginning of this citation), tvāñ hotṛnām (iv.3.13⁴), esha vā ṛco varṇaḥ (vi.1.3¹: but W. has instead esha vā ahno varṇaḥ, vi.1.3¹⁻²), and kṛshṇo 'si (i.1.11¹); his counter-examples are devānām vā antam jagmushām (vii.5.8¹: but G. M. have only devānām, which of course is found in various places; and O. omits altogether), where none of the lingual letters specified comes before a n, and ebhir no arkāih (iv.4.4⁷: O. omits arkāih), where the r is in another word than the n. All these are cases in which the alterant letter immediately precedes the altered.

7. Even though other sounds are interposed.

Rule 15, below, puts a restriction upon this, pointing out what letters may not intervene between the affecting and the affected letter. The examples are aparaguerkṇam dahati (v.1.10¹: W. B. omit dahati; O. inserts ha between the other two words), ātmann evā 'ramanām kurute (vi.5.11⁴: only O. has the first two words, and it omits the last), adhishavanam (i.1.5²: but G. M. O. have adhishavane, iv.7.8 or vi.2.11⁴), and kṛshamāṇaḥ pratishtḥākāmaḥ (iii.4.3³).

The only passage in which the word occurs is quoted by the commentator: hiraṇmayam dāma dakṣiṇā (ii.4.13: O. omits dakṣiṇā). The intent of the rule is to establish in advance a counter-exception to the exception "not when followed by a mute," made in rule 15, below.

9. Also, in the inflectional and derivative forms of pāṇi, gaṇa, punya, kaṇva, kāṇa, gāṇa, bāṇa, veṇu, guṇa, and maṇi, the first nasal is ṇ.

The word pravāda is not found elsewhere in our treatise or its commentary. From the latter's explanation and use of it we derive for it a meaning somewhat different from that which, according to Regnier (note to Rik Pr. ii.39), it bears in the Rik Prātiçākhyā. The latter makes it mean 'theme;' in our comment, on the other hand, it evidently signifies a derived form of a theme, in any gender or case, in composition, or in extension by secondary suffix; and I have translated it accordingly. So far as I can see, however, the same signification belongs to it in most of the passages of the Rik Pr. also, and Regnier's exposition of its use calls for revision.

There is an abrupt change of implication here, without any intimation of it in the terms of the precept itself; it is only at the end of rule 14, below, that we find the word prākṛtāḥ, which we must understand as applying to rules 9-14—a kind of footing instead of heading (adhikāra): see another like case in the third chapter, rules 2-7 (note on iii.2). In this connected paragraph of rules we have an enumeration of the words in which a ṇ is "original," and hence found equally in all the forms of the text.

The examples are supāṇiḥ svaṅguriḥ (iii.1.11⁴: iv.1.6³: O., in this and the two following examples, has only the first word), vṛshapānayo 'cṛāḥ (iv.6.6³), and hiraṇyapāniḥ ūtaye (i.4.25: ii.2.12²): the text contains half a dozen other examples of the pravādas of pāṇi;—gaṇānāṁ tvā gaṇapatiḥ havāmahe (ii.3.14³: O. omits the last word), gaṇā me mū vi tṛshan (iii.1.8²), gaṇena gaṇam (v.4.7⁷), and dūreṇamitraḥ ca gaṇaḥ (iv.6.5⁶): the cases,

M. end with kānah) and akarnayā 'kānayā 'gloṇayā (vi.1.6⁷: only W. has the last word): there is no other case;—gānapatyān mayobhūr e 'hi (iv.1.2²: O. has only the first word; only G. M. have the last two): I have noted but one other case;—viṇalyo bāṇavān uta (iv.5.1⁴: O. omits the first word): we have a declensional case of bāṇa at iv.6.4⁵;—venur vāinavi bhavati (v.1.1⁴: O. omits the last word), venunā vi mīmīte (v.2.5²), and yad venoh sushiram (v.1.1⁴): there are a couple more of cases;—yuthā guṇe guṇam (vii.2.4²): we have elsewhere only dviguṇa, at v.2.5^{2,3};—and maninā rūpāni (vii.3.14): elsewhere only manivāla, at v.6.13. To explain the limitation pūrvah, 'the first nasal,' in the rule, the commentator quotes parts of passages already given—namely gāṇānām tvā, venunā vi, and maninā rūpāni (but O. omits the second example, and the second word of the third)—in which the pravādas exhibit a second nasal which is dental. He raises the objection, moreover, that the mention of gāṇa in the rule is unnecessary, since the word is a pravāda of gāṇa; but replies that the word (gānapatyā) aimed at is a pravāda of ganapati, not of gāṇa. It is true, now, that gānapatyāt stands one degree farther removed from gāṇa than does, for instance, ganapatibhyah, or than would gāṇikah if it occurred in the text; yet we should hardly have expected it on that account to receive a different treatment.

13. As final of the former member of a compound, ṇ is found in vṛshan, ṣirshan, brahman, akshan, carman, and carshan.

The term avagraha, we are told, is here taken in the sense of avagrahastha. The same interpretation has been given before (under vi.9); and the whole use of avagraha in the treatise verges toward an equivalence with its derivative. Only T. O. change the ṣ of ṣirshan to ch after n; but, as this is in accordance with the teaching of the Prātiśākhya (v.34), I have adopted it.

The examples quoted by the commentator are vāto apām vṛshan-vān (ii.1.11¹: O. omits vāto), ṣirshanvān medhyo bhavati (vii.5.25¹), brahmanvanto devā āsan (vi.4.10¹: W. This disposes of all the avagrahas cited in the rule save carshan. No such pada as carshan is to be found in the Tāittirīya-Saṁhitā, nor, so far as has yet come to light, in any other Vedic text; nor does the word seem like one that could anywhere occur. One cannot help surmising that its presence in the rule may be by a blunder merely, it being, perhaps, an unintelligent repetition of carman. But, by whatever hap or mishap it found its way in, it is now an accepted part of the text, and has to be dealt with. And the commentator first creeps out of the difficulty through the hole to which he usually betakes himself in a like case, asserting that the passage aimed at is read in another text (çākhā). He then proceeds to state that "some quote as here referred to the passage mītrasya carshanīdhṛtaḥ çaravā (iii.4.11⁵ and iv.1.6³: O. omits çaravā): this is not good, since the words are quoted in the rule by way of antecedent exception to an exception [to rule 6] which is to be made farther on, by the words 'nor when final, nor by the omission of u' (rule 15); and in carshanīdhṛtaḥ the n is not final. Or: others are of opinion that the words in question are specified for the sake of removing any doubt which might arise as to whether the n in them were a product of alteration under rule 6 of this chapter; and, in this aspect, the citation of mītrasya carshanīdhṛtaḥ is to be approved." The logic of this final conclusion I entirely fail to see: for no question can possibly arise as to whether the n of carshanīdhṛtaḥ falls under rule 6; that it does so is palpable and undeniable.

As we should expect, considering the way in which the Prāticākhya treats the cases, these words are read with n in the pada-text also: namely vrshan-vān, brahman-vantāḥ, and so on. The same is the case in the pada-texts of the Rik and the Atharvan (see Ath. Pr. iv.99).

The commentary, after pronouncing the citations of the rule "parts of words, intended to include a number of cases," quotes examples, as follows: svayamātrṇṇām upa (v.2.8¹; 3.2¹, 7⁴; 5.4³: O. omits upa), asañtrṇṇe hi hanū (vi.2.11³: O. omits hanū), and svayamātrṇṇā jyotiḥ (v.7.6²): I have noted ṛṇṇ elsewhere only in anāchṛṇṇām (v.1.7⁴); abhishanṇo yasmāt (ii.4.2³), nishanṇāya svāhā (vii.1.19¹: only G. M. have this example), and daṣamāśā nishanṇā āsan (vii.5.1¹, 2¹: O. omits the first word); pūshṇo rañhyāi (i.3.10²), pūshṇā sayujā saha (iv.1.2² and v.1.2⁴: only G. M. have saha), and pūshṇe prapathyāya svāhā (vii.3.15: G. M. O. omit svāhā): I have noted further only pāushna (i.8.9² et al.); aryamne caruṁ nir vapet (ii.3.4¹ twice, ²: G. M. O. stop at caruṁ): I find besides sutrāmne (i.8.9² et al.) and ṛṇṇa (i.7.13²), which last, however, the rule was not specially intended for; finally, dadhikrāvno akārisham (i.5.11⁴ and vii.4.19⁴: O. omits akārisham) and ā grāvṇaḥ (vi.3.2³: O. omits this example): further cases of dadhikrāvno and grāvno are met with in the text showing the combination ṇṇ; I have noted no other words in which it occurs. Counter-examples, showing that ṇṇ follows rā only, would have been easy to furnish: thus, rāyasposhadārṇe, at i.2.10¹.

Cases of quite various and discordant nature are here thrown together. Most unequivocally calling for treatment in the Prātiçākhyā, in order to determine their reading, are the three passages in which sanna is altered to shanna after abhi and ni, since (as quoted by the commentator below) the puḍu-text restores the original form of the word, reading abhishanna ity abhi-sannaḥ etc. Its s is converted to sh according to vi.2, but there is no authority excepting here for the change of nn to ṇṇ; chapter vii. does not deal with this, because it takes up only those cases in which the alterant cause and the altered nasal are found in different paḍas; and rule 6 of the present chapter does not apply to it because its first n is protected (according to xiii.15) by being "followed by a mute," and its second n by "having a lingual mute interposed." The case of ṛṇṇa is akin with this, only with the important difference that the alteration of its nasals lies beyond the ken of the Prātiçākhyā, the ṇṇ being read in every text. The remaining three all fall under rule 6 of this chapter, but they require specification because they are also covered by one of the exceptions in rule 16; for they exhibit, as compared with their themes (aryaman, -krāvan, grāvan), a “loss of a” (alopa): compare what is said of this alopa below.

As regards the application of the term prākṛta, ‘original,’ their discordance is more essential, and, indeed, irreconcilable. In ṛṇṇa, to be sure, the cerebral ṛ’s are as original as in the words specified by rule 13, since, in all alike, the alteration is an accomplished fact in all the forms of text, although ultimately referable to the cause laid down in rule 6. But the last three cases, although also read alike in all texts, are introduced here as counter-exceptions to rule 15, and their ṛ is no more original than is that of any other of the words falling under rule 6. And finally, there is no sense whatever in which the lingual nasals of -shaṇṇa are “original.” To call them all original, then, seems even more than a looseness or inaccuracy in the use of that term: it is a blunder.

The commentator perceives the difficulty, and attempts to remove it by a lengthy passage of special pleading. The term prākṛta, he says, is mukhya, ‘of primary value’ or ‘of full force,’ as applied to the words beginning with pāni (rule 9) and ending with carshan (rule 13), since in them the lingualized nasal is found in all the four samhitās; but in ṛṇṇ and the rest it is not mukhya, but is simply intended to authorize the nasalization even in the absence of a rule prescribing it. Thus, namely: in ṛṇṇ etc. (i. e. in ṛṇṇ and shaṇṇ), the first nasal constitutes an exception (under rule 6) as being followed by a mute (rule 15); the other nasal, as having a ṛ-mute between it and the altering cause (rule 15). In shṇ and mṇ, again [why not in rāṇ?], the nasal falls under the exception touching the loss of a (rule 15). And if it be objected that the lingualization is assured by the competency of the citation—still [it is answered], the implication is avoided that the occasion of the citation is the originality of the ṛ [?]. Moreover, the word ca, ‘also,’ in the rule, being used in the sense of subsidiary adjunction (anvācaya), shows the lingualization to be not of primary value; if it were primary, it would be found in all the four kinds of text; but it is not so found; for we read in pada-text abhishanṇa ity abhi-sannah and nishanṇāye ’ti ni-sannāya. And since, from the words pūshan and aryaman, which end in n, such forms as pūshṇo rañhyāi and aryamṇe carum are read in the varṇa-text, therefore the conversion into ṇ (all but O. say “non-conversion into ṇ”) in varna-text is to be inferred also for run and shann (O. says rāvn) in virtue of association with the others, they being found in the same rule with them; for all who understand the rules of affairs hold that the determination of equivocal classes is made by mention in connection with words unequivocal. Therefore the meaning of prākṛta (all but O. say prākṛti) as defined by us is alone acceptable.

By comparison with the explanations given above, it may readily be seen how much of reason there is in all this talk. The commentator raises an obscuring dust about the difficulty, but does not at all remove it. The mukhyatvam of the term prākṛta as here applied is more easily disproved than its mūrkhātvam.

It would be rather more in accordance with the ordinary usage of the treatise to make five distinct rules of the five independent and unconnected specifications which are here crowded together into a single precept: in fact, we should be guilty of no great violence if we were to divide it into five, affixing to each its own (independently constructed, as if for an independent rule) portion of the comment. But in that case, at any rate, the first rule should read na shumno'gnyushmānītaḥ (not 'gnir'). It is not unobjectionable as it stands, since we should expect the first and third complete padas to be quoted as they stand in the text, and the second, which is only a fragment of a pada, to be distinguished as such from a possible agnih. As to the first, moreover, there is a difference of reading among the MSS. of the text: only T. W. have shumno; B. O. have sumno; G. M. have sushumno; and, as is seen below, even W. has sumnaḥ in the reiteration of the rule by the comment. G. M., it may be added, read cyavāyishu for -yeshu in the last specification.

Under the first part of the rule, the passages aimed at are quoted as follows: sushumnah sūryaraçmih (iii.4.7¹), indrāgnibhyām tvā sayujā (iv.4.5¹: G. M. omit sayujā; the pada-reading is doubtless indrāgni-bhyām, so that the r and n are samānapade, as required by rule 6), and yushmānīto abhayaṁ jyotiḥ (ii.1.11⁶: only Ō. has jyotiḥ; from its inclusion here, the word must remain undivided in pada-text, though in that of the Rîg-Veda [ii.27.11] it is read yushmā-nītaḥ).

Examples of final n not lingualized are pitṛn havishe attave (ii.6.12¹) and pra mṛnīhi çatrān (i.2.14²).

The precept touching the omission of an a has reference, so far as I can discover, only to the oblique cases of *vrtra*han, of which two (and I have failed to note any others) are cited, namely vrtra-ghna indrāya tvā (i.4.1¹: O. omits the example) and vrtraghna stomāh (iv.7.15¹)—for the derivative adjective vārttraghna (ii.5.2⁵ et al.) can hardly be aimed at; and yet, the authority of this rule is needed to establish the dental n in this word also, which would otherwise fall under rule xiii.6. The mode of definition of the cases here intended is in very remarkable contrast with the usage elsewhere of the treatise, which, as has been repeatedly pointed out, differs from the other Prâṭicākhyas especially in avoiding all reference to grammatical categories, forms, and derivations, and defining the words to which its rules relate simply by external circumstances of position and surroundings in the text. And this departure from its custom is a quite unfortunate and ill-judged one: for, in the first place, it renders necessary a part of the specifications of the preceding rule (namely shu, mṇ, and rāvu), which really lie outside the province of the treatise, and have no good reason to be mentioned; and, in the second place, as the commentator points out, it involves an inconsistency with the general subject of the chapter, which has to do with conversions arising samānapade, 'within the limits of the same pada,' while in vrtra-ghnaḥ etc. the affecting cause is in one pada and the nasal to be affected in another. The commentator explains that the intent is, by a far-reaching glance backward (literally, 'a lion's look'), to lay down a further example to a rule in the seventh chapter, where the restriction samānapade is not in force: ghnaḥ etc., namely, are altered forms of han, whose nasal, by vii.11, is liable to lingualization. But han, by the usage of the treatise, signifies 'the syllable or audible complex of sounds han,' not 'the theme han and its derivatives;' and, as the text contains no example of the combination ghn, it would have been easy to exempt n from lingualization ghakārāt, 'after gh.'

The cited examples of n remaining unchanged when followed by a mute are saṃkrandano 'nimishah (iv.6.4¹: O. has the first word only), ava rundhe tārpyam (ii.4.11⁶: O. omits the last word), and nakhanirbhinnam (i.8.9¹).

The commentator then proceeds to enter into a long discussion of more than usual subtilty and obscurity, of which I am by no means confident that I apprehend the meaning. The point aimed at, indeed, seems quite clear: by xiv.4, the n of such a word as pūrṇa is to be doubled, making pūrṇna; here, then, is a case where the first n is "followed by a mute" (sparyaparah), and so would seem to have its lingual character forbidden by the present rule. The reasonable reply to so hair-splitting and impertinent an objection would appear to be that, a duplication being ordered by the treatise, the product can be nothing but nn, since nn would be no duplication at all. The commentator, however, prefers to get around the difficulty by limiting the word sparyā, 'mute,' as here used, to one which is not the product of express prescription (?). For in pūrṇa paścāt (iii.5.1¹ et al.) there is duplication, making pūrṇnā (not one of the MSS. writes the duplication), the one n being prescribed by xiv.4, the other being its occasion or root (mūla). With this, O. prudently ends; the other MSS. go on to explain "express" (? prasiddha) by referring to the word nakhanirbhinnam, already quoted above, as, with its like, also exhibiting an instance of occasion of prescription. This word, namely, falls under rules xiv.4,5 (becoming thereby nakhanirbhinnna); and in rule 5 the term "succeeded by a consonant" (ryañjanottara) is used in a different sense from "followed by a consonant" (ryañjanapara); the meaning of which will be there explained at full length (as we shall find to our cost, in one of the obscurest discussions of the entire treatise). The appositeness of the whole reference I do not understand.

Finally, examples are quoted of the suspension of nasalization by

M. have the false reading -pradhā-, and O. has dropped out a part of the word, giving jananāya).

In the note to Ath. Pr. iii.94, I have pointed out the physical reason why these sounds, by their interposition, prevent the lingualization of the nasal: they are, all of them, such as call into action for their utterance the tip of the tongue, throwing it out of adjustment for the lingual contact. The tendency which the history of Aryan language in India exhibits toward the conversion of dentals into linguals shows itself most actively in the case of the nasal: the tongue, being rolled back into the position of lingual articulation by the utterance of ṛ, ṛ̥, ṝ, or sh, hangs suspended there, as it were, and makes the next nasal contact lingual, unless the tendency is satisfied by the intermediate production of such a contact, or frustrated by the transfer elsewhere of the articulating organ.

The Prāticākhyā's enumeration of the cases of occurrence of the lingual nasal is, so far as I have been able to determine, complete. No one of the other treatises undertakes such an enumeration.

16. In the opinion of Pāushkarasādi, l after a mixed vowel becomes ḍ.

The mention of Pāushkarasādi (O. has everywhere Pāuskarasādi), the commentator says, is out of respect, and not because the rule is not a peremptory one. "Mixed vowel" is a term which is not elsewhere employed by the treatise, nor does the latter contain anything that should intimate an explanation of its meaning. The comment glosses it by 'the sound ṛ.' it appears, then, that ṛ is thus styled, from having its vocalic quality "mixed" with consonantal, namely, with the ṛ-sound. The other Prāticākhyas (see note to Ath. Pr. i.37) directly define it as so composed. The l liable to the change into ḍ is called in the comment duḥḥliṣṭa, 'ill joined,' i. e., I presume, 'of difficult articulation' (G. M., to be sure, seem to apply this title the first time to the ḍ instead of l, and only O. attaches it the second time clearly to the l, the others' readings being corrupt; yet there can hardly arise a doubt as to its true connection); it is, of course, the lingual l which forms an acknowledged part of the alphabet of the Rig-Veda (Rik Pr. i.11-2, r. 52 etc.). But no such articulation belongs to the alphabet accepted by this treatise—although, on the strength of the present rule alone, it is crowded into that alphabet by the commentator under rule i.1. Nor does the edition of the Śaṅhitā, nor do the MSS., so far as known to me, make any use of a lingual l. As for the MSS. of the Prātiśākhya and its comment on this rule, B. O. write the ordinary l throughout; W. alternates irregularly between the two; G. M. and T. have the lingual letter only. As regards the binding force of the rule, the commentator is right so far as this—that a ḍ, not l, is read of necessity in the words to which it relates; but that this is, to the makers of the Prātiśākhya, the result of alteration of an original l there is no reason to believe; the euphonic exchange of the two letters is not less strange to the Tāittirīya text than to the Vājasaneyi (of the Mādhyandina śākhā: see Vāj. Pr. iv.143, viii.45) and Atharvan; and the rule is really pājārtham only, and an intrusion into our treatise of something foreign to its system.

The commentator first gives his own explanation and illustration of the precept. As example of the operation of the rule, he cites mṛdāti "ḍṛṣe (i.1.14³); and, as counter-example, to show that the change is made only after a "mixed vowel," he has nothing better to offer than an alleged passage "from another text," nalam plavam. For, in such words as ūḍitaḥ (i.1.11¹), pravodhum (i.1.14³), idāyāḥ (i.2.5¹), ayād (i.4.45²), hedah (i.5.11³), grāuśad (i.6.11¹), where the Rig-Veda reads regularly the lingual l and its aspirate, the Tāittirīya-Saṅhitā maintains the ḍ, not less firmly than after r. This, the commentator goes on to say, is an interpretation (but the term he uses is pāṭha, properly 'reading' or 'version') of the rule founded on the authority of the grammarians, who assert a homogeneity of the duḥḥṣṣṭa l and of the ḍ, as being both produced in the lingual position: and if the question is raised as to how it is so founded, reference is made to a rule of Pāṇini (i.1.50), which prescribes that, in case of substitution, the most nearly related letter is to be taken. I do not see that this exposition and reference have any pertinence whatever.

Then, the commentator adds yet another interpretation, which, he remarks, is also highly esteemed. It differs from the one already given only in implying (apparently, from xiii.6) saṁānapade, 'within the limits of a single pada;' taking, then, a different example, te no mṛdayantu (iv.4.3² et al.), with the counter-example ilāṁdam bhavati (vii.5.9¹)—which, in view of the frequent occurrence in the Sanhitā of idā, idāvant, and their like, is not much to the point—and finally, as further counter-example, to justify the restriction saṁānapade, the phrase pitṛlokaṁ somena (ii.6.2¹; p. pitṛ-lokam), where the l does not become ḍ after r. But in this last case is involved an additional difficulty; namely, that in the compound pitṛloka-kāmasya (vi.6.4¹; p. pitṛloka-kāmasya) the r and l do meet saṁānapade, and yet the l maintains itself: over this, the commentator hobbles as best he may, with the plea that, prohibition having been made in the case of pitṛloka, it is extended by association to the further compound.

The groundlessness and unintelligence of all this special pleading, resorted to for the purpose of forcing in as an integral part of the Prāticākhyā a precept altogether foreign to it, is palpable enough; and one grudges the time and words spent in its exposure.

CHAPTER XIV.

CONTENTS: 1-7, duplication of one of the members of a group of consonants; 8, duplication of ch, kh, and bh, in certain cases; 9-11, insertion between a surd spirant and mute; 12-13, aspiration of a surd mute before a spirant; 14-28, exceptions to the rules for duplication, and discordant views of certain authorities respecting them; 29-33, occurrence of the enclitic circumflex.

स्वरपूर्वं व्यञ्जनं द्विवर्णं व्यञ्जनपरम् ॥ १ ॥

1. A consonant preceded by a vowel is doubled, if followed by a consonant.

The intricate and obscure subject of duplication in consonant-groups is treated at more length in this than in the other Prâtiçâkhyas (compare R. Pr. vi.1-3; V. Pr. iv.97-114; A. Pr. iii.26-32; also Pânini viii.4.46-52), but chiefly on account of the liberal citation here made of the discordant views of various teachers respecting it. The doctrines of the treatise itself are mainly in accordance with those of the rest. This first and leading principle, that the first consonant of a group is doubled, is stated in equivalent terms by all. The principal restrictions to its application are, as stated below, that r, h, z, φ (rule 15), and a letter doubled, or a mute followed by another of the same series (rule 23), are exempted from duplication. For the details, see the following rules.

Of course, in applying the rules for duplication, we have to assume the form of the consonant-groups as determined by the other precepts of the Prâtiçâkhyas—treating visarjanīya, for example, as is prescribed in the ninth chapter, and making the insertions pointed out in the fifth (v.32,33 etc.). And further, to finish the matter, the rules for yama, nāsikya, and svarabhakti (xxi.12-16) must be duly taken into account.

In an additional note to the Atharva Prâtiçâkhyas, I gave a complete list of the consonant-groups of the Atharva-Saṁhitā, with the forms which they come finally to assume under the laws of combination. It has been necessary to prepare a similar one for the Tāittirīya-Saṁhitā, in testing the reach and bearing of the rules of the present treatise: but the scheme is hardly worth giving in full.

1. *svarapūrvam vyañjanam¹ vyañjanaparām² dvivarnam āpad-yate. yathā³: uru----- evampūrva iti kim: tat----- evampara iti kim: uru----- vyañjanam iti kim: pra----- svarah pārvo yasmāt⁴ tat⁵ svarapūrvam: vyañjanam asmāt param iti vyañjanaparam: dvayor varṇayoḥ samāhāro dvivarnam.*⁶

The commentator offers a single example, uru prathasva, i. e. uru pprathassva (i.1.8 et al.: the MSS. of the comment only very rarely and irregularly write the groups in their duplicated form, so as to illustrate the rules of the chapter), and adds counter-examples: first, to show that the consonant is liable to duplication only after a vowel, tat pravāte (vi.4.7²: hardly a well-chosen example, since, though the p of pra is this time unchanged, the t before it must be doubled, tatt pr-; a pra after a pause would have answered better); second, that the duplication takes place only before a consonant, urukṛd uru nah (ii.6.11³); third, that only a consonant, not a vowel, in the defined position, is duplicated, prāṅgam uktham (iv.4.2¹). O. appends a new set of counter-examples, as if a part of a new exposition; namely prajamanam (i.5.9¹), pudbhyām dve savane (vi.1.6⁴: an ill-chosen example, containing eases of duplication as well as of its omission), and uganā uta (iv.1.10²).

2. Likewise, according to Pāuṣkaraśādi, a mute preceded by l or v.

The commentator declares that the ca, 'likewise,' in this rule brings down from the one preceding the being preceded by a vowel, and duplication. The former part of the defined implication is at least otiose, since l and v never occur in the Saṁhitā before a mute, except as themselves preceded by a vowel: v, indeed, is found in combination only with the nasal mutes, n and ṇ; l, in the groups lk, lg, lp, lb, lbh, lm, and lpy. The examples quoted are kalpāṇ juhoti (v.4.8⁵) and vibhūdāṇe (iii.5.8^{1,92}: all save B. actually read this time -dāṇne, with doubled n). According to the interpretation given to the next rule, the worthy Pāuṣkaraśādi does not regard the duplication of the mute after the semivowel as suspending the duplication of its predecessor also, by rule 1; and he would accordingly read kallppāṇ and -dāṇne; and this part of his doctrine is, as we shall see, declared unapproved.

Counter-examples are given: kalyāṇi rūpasamṛddhā (vii.1.6⁶: to be pronounced kallyāṇi, or, by rule 21, kalyāṇi) and vāyavyam (i.8.7¹ et al.: to be made vāyavyam), to show that no other letter than a mute is thus doubled; and kūgmāṇ chakabhiḥ (v.7.23) and tasmād etat (vi.3.11⁶), instancing other consonants than l and v, with the following mute not doubled: in these words, the sibilant is itself doubled (except by Hârîta, rule 18), a first mute of the same series with the nasal is inserted before the latter (rule 9), and between the two mutes a yama (xxi.12); so that we have as final result the formidable combinations ṣṣppm and ssppm.

The Rik Pr. (vi.2) also requires a double mute after l, and the Vāj. Pr. (iv.99) after any semivowel—which last is equivalent with our rule, since y is never followed by a mute.

We have a right to be surprised at the introduction of this and the rule next following before rule 4, since the duplication they teach is analogous to that after r, and of secondary importance to it.

स्पर्श द्वैकेषामाचार्याणाम् ॥ ३ ॥

3. According to some teachers, the mute only.

That is to say, in the combinations just treated of, the mute is duplicated, but not the preceding semivowel also; and we are to read kalppān and vibhādānne.

According to the commentator, this rule represents the approved usage in the śākhā. It seems very strange to find such approved usage laid down in the Prātiśākhya merely as the dictum of certain authorities. But a rule (xiv.7) is given below, without any restriction, which plainly implies the validity of the present one.

रेफात्परं च ॥ ४ ॥

4. Also a consonant that follows r.

The r itself being, by rule 15, not liable to duplication. This is the rule second in importance in the whole system, and is found in all the Prātiśākhyas and in Pāṇini. The Ath. Prāt. (iii.31), the Vāj. Prāt. (iv.98), and Pāṇini (viii.4.46) ascribe the same effect to h as to r: and it is strange that our treatise, which is so liberal in its citation of discordant opinions, makes no reference to one so well supported as this. After h we find in the Saṃhitā only the three nasals specified in rule xxi.14 as requiring the insertion of a nāsi-kyā, and the three semivowels y, r, v; r, on the other hand, forms numerous groups as first member: I have noted twenty-four of two consonants, forty-three of three consonants, and five of four consonants; a few of them are exempted from duplication by rules 16, 20–23. The cited examples are arcanty arkaṃ arkinah (i.6.12³:

The ca, 'also,' of the rule, according to the commentator, implies duplication, and precedence of the r by a vowel (bringing down svarapūrva from rule 1). The question is raised by an objector whether sequence of the consonant following the r by another consonant (in virtue of vyāñjanaparam in rule 1) is not also implied: but such sequence is declared not obligatory; and it is pointed out that later rules (15,16), exempting a consonant in pausā, and a spirant before a vowel, from duplication after r, prove that the present rule prescribes duplication also where no consonant follows, and where a vowel follows; since there would be no propriety in denying by a special rule what had not been already enjoined by a general rule. In support of his assertion that the r must be preceded by a vowel, the commentator cites the word tryambakam (i.8.6²), in which he says that the y must not be doubled: and he fortifies his claim by appealing to Pāṇini's rule (viii.4.46), which expressly restricts duplication after r and h to cases in which these letters follow a vowel (G. M. add the remark that in Pāṇini also no implication of vyāñjanaparam, 'followed by a consonant,' is found). The Vāj. Pr. (iv.102) makes an equivalent restriction explicitly. The groups are not numerous in the Tāittirīya-Saṁhitā in which a r that does not stand first is followed by a consonant, and the only consonant so following is y: the combinations are jry, try, ñtry, ttry, ntry, stry, and tstry.

This finishes the proper exposition and illustration of the rule; but the commentator suffers himself to be enticed into a lengthy and tedious refutation of a trivial suggestion which some one has been impertinent enough to make. There are those, he says, who maintain that the analogy of svarapūrvam in rule 1 would require rephapūrvam, 'preceded by r,' to be employed here (instead of rephāt param, 'following r'), and that the difference of phraseology intimates a difference of meaning—namely, that a consonant coming after a r which is the product of euphonic alteration, as in ahar devānām āsīt (i.5.9²: only W. B. have āsīt), is not doubled. But this, he replies, enters upon a path which is at variance with the reading of this cākhā; and he proposes himself to set forth the true ground of the different term employed. If rephapūrra, namely, were used, the rule would be liable to the suspicion of meaning the direct opposite of its real intent, since rephapūrvam admits of being understood as rephāt pūrvam, 'preceding r.' And if it be retorted that this false implication is of no account, since the case it would involve is already provided for in the first rule of the chapter, and the present rule would be a mere useless repetition, and that the avoidance of such repetition is of itself enough to refute the implication—then the farther reply is made, that that is not sound doctrine, in view of the principle stated in the verse "non-contact with mud is far preferable to the washing of it off;" and the teacher uttered the rule in its form as given, with the intent that not even a particle of suspicion of wrong meaning should find occasion from it.

There is no good reason to suppose that the author of the treatise, in saying rephāt param, intended to do anything more than use a lawful discretion in the selection of his phraseology. The ambiguity which the commentator ascribes to the other reading is suffered to pass in numberless other cases. The more desirable cleanliness of him who has incurred no need of ablution has been referred to once before (under iv.23), in a case somewhat similar.

5. In place, however, of second and fourth mutes, when followed by consonants, is put the preceding mute.

That is to say, when an aspirate occurs between a preceding vowel (as the commentator specifies in his paraphrase of the rule) and a following consonant, or in such circumstances that by rule 1 it would be doubled, it receives instead an increment (āgama) of the mute next preceding it in its own series, or of its corresponding non-aspirate. Examples are vikhyāya (i. e. vikkhyāya) cakshushā tvam (iv.1.2³; only G. M. have the last two words) and meghyā (i. e. megghyā) vidyato vācah (v.2.11¹; only G. M. have vācah); to which W. B. add tat savituh (i.5.6⁴ et al.; the t is converted to th by xiv.12, and to the th is then prefixed t, making tatth savituh) and sādhyā (i. e. sāddhyā) vāi devāh (vi.3.4⁸ et al.). To show that only the aspirates are thus treated, is quoted ādyam (i. e. ād-dyam) asyā 'nnam (ii.2.5⁶; O. omits annam); to show that a vowel must precede, vashat svāhā (vii.3.12; by v.33, t is inserted between t and s, and the inserted letter is made th by xiv.12; then, by this rule, no farther change of the th occurs, and we read vashattth, not vashatttth; W. goes so far on this road as to read vashath svāhā) and pādbhyām (i. e. paddbhyām, not paddbbhyām) dve savane (vi.1.6⁴)—but G. M. O. substitute for the former another similar case, vat svayamabhiḡtāya (iii.2.8¹ seven times: i. e. vattth sv-; O. writes vatth sv-)—; to show that a consonant must follow, ukhāyāi sadane sve (iv.1.9³ et al.; W. B. omit sve) and meghāyate svāhā (vii.5.11¹). The word tu, 'however,' in the rule, the commentator (with more than his usual success in dealing with this particle) explains as intimating the denial of duplication, enjoined by rule 1. He adds that some give the particle a different interpretation, as signifying that the increment-consonant is not itself to be doubled; but justly pronounces this to be inappropriate, as such duplication is forbidden by rule 23 of this chapter.

In this and the three following rules is contained, for all the cases which come within the purview of the Prātiśākhya, the explicit prohibition of a double aspirate. Such double aspirates are, however, sometimes written by the Hindu scribes, both in situations where the authority of the phonetic treatises directly forbids them, and elsewhere. Thus, my manuscript of the Tāittirīya-Saṁhitā has, three times, dh dh instead of ḍ dh as the result of combination of t and h (at ii.6.12⁵: iii.4.1⁴: v.3.12²), and the Calcutta edition, so far as printed, gives, unadvisedly, the same. Both authorities agree in reading dididhḍhi at iii.1.11⁴. The edition, absurdly enough, gives adhaththāḥ at i.1.13², where my manuscript has adhaththāḥ. And I find a few cases of khkh and chch, which will be noted under rule 8, below.

As under the preceding rule, the commentator here also enters into a tedious and useless discussion of a verbal question; namely, why 'followed by consonants' is represented by vyañjanamottarayoh instead of vyañjanaparayoh. Some, he says, have maintained that a difference of meaning is intended by the difference of phraseology; that it is desired, namely, to except cases like abhy asthāt (iv.2.8¹), where the following consonant is the product of euphonic alteration. The ground alleged for this claim is not entirely clear to me: it seems to be that a specified following cause (one that produces an effect in something that precedes it) is common to the saṁhitā-text and that which is not saṁhitā; hence, a cause of increment occurring in either kind of text being in question, a citation of words from outside the saṁhitā is alone suitable, on account of their constancy—that is, abhi: asthāt not being citable as an example under the rule in its pada-form, it must not be so treated in its saṁhitā-form, as well. But the claim is disallowed, as being opposed to the actual reading, and also to the fundamental rule. For, the intent is to cast out or deny a duplication established by the fundamental rule (xiv.1), where the being preceded by a vowel and followed by a consonant was implied; and there no limitation was laid down for the following consonant; hence, it is improper to lay one down here, where an exception is prescribed.

The commentator then goes on to say that he will set forth the real intent of the difference of phraseology, with due regard to the Ṭikshā, and in accordance with the accepted reading of the text. But I am compelled to confess myself incapable of extracting a satisfactory meaning from his exposition and argument. The point of it is an asserted absence of niyama in the two rules (1 and 5), as of one suffering and the other prescribing exception. Niyama, 'obligatory force,' appears to signify here joint application, and so a mutual or reciprocal influence. When a vowel precedes, he continues, a consonant is doubled only when followed by a consonant; and second and fourth mutes take increment of the mute that stands before them in the alphabet only when followed by a consonant. But the pair of rules in question is constructed with the intent of multiplicity ('diversity' or 'independence?' prācurya is not found elsewhere). How does an absence of niyama appear? Why, from the fact that otherwise a twofold effect would in some cases come to light. In attā haviṁshi (ii.6.12²) and in annapate (iv.2.3¹ et al.), and so on, there is duplication; in prachac chandah (iv.3.12³: G. M. have instead acchāvākaḥ, the reference for which I have failed to note) and addhi tvam deva prayatā (ii.6.12⁵: G. M. O. omit prayatā), and so on, there is increment of a preceding mute; but in tān haste (vi.1.3⁷: W. has tāns te [iv.1.10³], but doubtless by accidental omission of ha), even though it falls under the rule, the same effect is not seen: hence, there is absence of niyama. The examples here furnished, which ought to give us the clue to the commentator's meaning, seem to leave us wholly in the dark, since not one of them falls under either of the rules in question: the first, second, and fourth are by rule 23, below, exempt from duplication; the third is a case under rule 8; and the combination ñh is (see under rule 15) treated as a simple h. Next, the Çikshâ is quoted, to the effect that "in some cases, also, duplication of the first consonant of a group after a vowel is prescribed; not, however, of a second mute, nor of a fourth, under any circumstances;" and, by those versed in the subject, the statement is explained [in conformity with what follows]: "in some cases, there is duplication of a consonant between two vowels, in accordance with rule; so there also is to be understood prefixion of the preceding mute, by those skilled in alphabetic sounds" (in the known Çikshâ, it may be remarked, no such verses as these are to be found). And the final conclusion is, that the different term in vyañjanottarayoh is intended to signify an absence of niyama of this sort. That is to say, perhaps, the real independence of the two rules is intimated by the choice of a different term in expressing the common factor which they contain.

6. As also, in all cases, when they follow r.

This, it is pointed out, has the value of an exception under rule 4. The dual number of rephapūrvayoh shows that the pair, "second and fourth mutes," spoken of just above, is intended. "Also" (ca) implies the increment by prefixion of the next preceding mute. And the meaning is, that second and fourth mutes, with the limitations prescribed, as preceded by r, take always their respective predecessors as increment. Thus, ūrdhvo (i. e. ūrdhvo) bhava (i.2.14²), and ardhyavān (i. e. ardhy-) prāṇaḥ (vi.5.2²: only G. M. have prāṇaḥ). Nityam, 'in all cases,' implies that the increment is made after r when the mute to be increased is followed by a vowel also (not alone when it is vyañjanottara, as specified in rule 5). Thus, in artheta (i. e. arth-) sthā'pām (i.8.11: only B. has apām), mārkkhām (i. e. mārkkhām) tajjaghanyām (vii.1.6⁴), and goargham (i. e. goarggham) eva (vi.1.10¹).

7. And when l precedes.

The ca, 'and,' here brings down from rule 5 only the fourth mute [the last of the two there mentioned] and the increment. The second mute is not also included, because (see note to rule 2) no second mute occurs after l in the Sanhitā. The examples are pragalbho (i. e. -galbbho) 'śya jāyate (ii.5.5³: only G. M. have jāyate) and namo madhyamāya cā 'pagalbhāya (i. e. -galbbh-) cu (iv.5.6¹)—but, in place of the latter, G. M. give apagalbho jāyate (ii.5.5³: O. reads agagalya simply, which doubtless means the first word of this).

As was remarked above (under rule 3), the laying down of the present precept without any limitation appears to confirm the commentator's interpretation of rules 2 and 3, as teaching the accepted doctrine of the śākhā. It would, to be sure, be not impossible to understand lbh for lbh as required here, without any reference to the other groups—lk, ly etc.—in which the duplication after l depends upon the earlier rules; but that seems quite unlikely.

8. Also the preceding mute is inserted before ch, khi, and bhuja, when these follow either a preposition, pātha eshaḥ, ati, āti, dhāma, parama, or bhūte.

The examples after a preposition (in which situation alone the increment of khi and bhuja is made) are first given by the commentator: they are ā echrṇutti (v.1.7⁴: the preceding word, andechrṇam, might well have been included, as an additional instance; my MS. has simple ch in both cases); nama ākkhidate ca prakkhidate ca (iv.5.9²: G. M. omit the first word, G. M. O. the last two); oyakshmayā paribbhujā (iv.5.1⁴), with vibhu ca me prabhu ca me (iv.7.4¹⁻²: O. stops at the first me) as counter-example, to show the necessity of saying bhuja, instead of bhu simply, in the rule; and yā ca ricchandāḥ (v.2.11¹). Then follow counter-examples: first, to show that kh is increased only when followed by i, nikhātam manushyānām (vi.3.4⁶) and datsv adhi khādati (vi.2.11⁴: only G. M. have datsv); next, to show that the increment takes place only after a preposition, sachandā yā (v.2.11¹). The examples after the remaining words, as particularly specified in the rule, are priyam opy etu pāthah : esha echāgah (iv.6.8¹: only O. has priyam), with ṛtubhir vā esha chandobhiḥ (vii.5.15²), to prove the need of quoting pāthah along with esha in the rule; aticchan-

Further examples of the increment of ch, falling under this rule, are âcchad and pracchad (at iv.3.12^{2,3}) and âcchettâ (i.1.2¹): if there are others, I have omitted to note them. The usage in the manuscripts, of our commentary and of the Sanhitâ, is quite irregular, varying between ch simply, ccch, and chch, without much regard to whether the case is one to which this rule applies or not. I have collected the cases in which my manuscript of the Sanhitâ has chch: they are dhâmachchad (ii.4.10²; but dhâmachad in the same division), prachchuch chandah (iv.3.12³), and âyachchad-bhyah (iv.5.3²); and, in the combination of separate words (besides the case just quoted), âcchach chandah (iv.3.12²), kakuch chandah (iii.1.6³), and yuch chreshthah (iii.4.8¹). In every one of these instances, the Calcutta edition, so far as it yet reaches, reads correctly ccch.

I have found no other cases of the increment of khi under the rule; but my manuscript has (without authority) udakkkkhidat (ii.1.1^{4,5}), sam akkkkkhidat (vi.6.11¹), and akkkkkhidrah (iii.5.8), while (along with the MSS. of the comment) it reads kkkh instead of kkh in the example (iv.5.9²) cited above. The edition reads kkh at ii.1.1^{4,5}, remarking at the latter place that its manuscript authorities have kkkh. Of course, the doubled aspirate is to be rejected, here as elsewhere, in obedience to sound phonetic theory as well as to the concordant authority of the Prâtigâkhyas.

that in the Rik Pr. (vi.2) which allows, but does not require, duplication of a mute after the spirants (namely ç, sh, s, h, ç, φ, ñ). The Ath. Pr. (unless such a precept is lost by the lacuna occurring in the treatment of this subject: see note to Ath. Pr. iii. 28) and Pāṇini have nothing similar. Our rule, however, is quite alone so far as the treatment of a nasal after a spirant is concerned, making an insertion of a surd non-aspirate, instead of a nasal: and, as will be seen, the next rule quotes an opinion which would bring the Tāittirīya usage more nearly into accordance with that of the Rik and Vājasaneyi Sanhitās; but the commentator pronounces that opinion unapproved.

The examples quoted are as follows: yaḥ kāmāyeta (i. e. yax kkām-: ii.1.2³ et al.); açmann (i. e. açpman, or, after all rules are applied, aççpman) ārjam (iv.6.1¹: O. omits the example and puts here, instead of below, that for φ); grīshme (i. e. grīshpme or grīshshpme) madhyandine (ii.1.2⁵); ayasmayam (i. e. ayaspmayam or ayasspmayam) vi ertā bandham (iv.2.5³: only W. has bandham); yaḥ pāpmanā (i. e. yax ppā-: ii.3.13²): O. adds to this last tasmīn (vii.1.5¹ et al.: to be treated like ayasmayam, above), and, after madhyandine, prā'çnāti (prāççtīnāti): I have overlooked this citation in searching out the references). As counter-examples, we have first çarady aparāhne (ii.1.2⁵: but O. substitutes brahmavādino vadanti, i.7.1⁴ et al.), to show that the sonant spirant, h, does not require a like insertion (the case is one of nāsikya, xxi. 14); then rukman upa dadhāti (v.2.7^{1,2}: the case is one for yama, xxi.12), to show that a mute receives the increment only after a spirant; and lastly ishvā ca rajreṇa ca (v.7.3¹), to show that a mute only is increased after a spirant. For the second of these counter-examples, O. substitutes two of the same character, namely yam apnavānah (i.5.5¹) and sa pratnavat (ii.2.12¹ et al.); for the last, it gives (in a passage which has strayed out of place, and got inserted near the end of the comment to rule 10) agnaye svāhā (i.2.2¹ et al.).

In all these combinations, ç and φ are exempt from duplication by xiv.15, but the sibilants are doubled, except as some authorities (xiv.17,18) would leave them unchanged.

The commentator illustrates with groups of two consonants only (of which the Sanhitā presents twenty-three that would come under the action of the rule); the question arises, then, whether in groups of three or more consonants (of which there are over fifty)—where the mute is followed by another consonant (as zkl, gny, shky, stm, stry, qpr), or where the spirant stands second (as rgm, kshn, rshny, tsē, tsphy), or where each is the case (as tstr, tstry, ntstr), or where there are two spirants followed by mutes in the same group (as zkskn)—the rule is to be relentlessly applied. It can admit of little doubt that the sequence of another consonant would not affect the case; whether a preceding consonant would do so is more doubtful. Such resultant groups as nthsttr, thspphy, kkhshṭṭny, and zkkh-shṭṭn, have a tolerably frightful appearance; but whether they would stagger the heroic soul of a Hindu śākhin, is another matter.

To the inserted mute is applied the name abhinidhāna, which the commentator explains by abhinidhāyate, 'it is set down against;' giving as its synonym āropanīya, (I presume, simply) 'to be inserted;' and adding the remark, "owing to the absence of this in any other Veda, there is here insertibility" (?). He takes no notice of the doctrine of abhinidhāna as a peculiar and imperfect utterance of certain letters in certain situations, which plays so formidable a part in the phonetic systems of the Rik and Ath. Prātiśākhya (see especially the note to Ath. Pr. i.43): we, however, bearing that doctrine in mind, may conjecture with plausibility that the word here not merely signifies an insertion, but designates also a peculiar quality of the inserted letter.

10. According to Plākshi, when the following mute is surd.

That is to say, not when it is a nasal: Plākshi would ratify zkk, zkkh, shṭṭ, shṭṭh, and so on, but would make no insertion in gm, shn, and their like. This, as was remarked under the last rule, would correspond more nearly with the teachings of the Rik and Vāj. Prātiśākhya. The commentator illustrates with nishkevalyam (iv.4.2²), yah kāmāyeta (ii.1.2³ et al.), paçcāt prācim (v.3.7³: B. reads prācī, which is found in the same division; W. has prāncam, which does not occur in the Sanhitā after paçcāt), nish tapāmi (i.1.10¹), doshāvacataḥ (i.2.14⁴ et al.), yah pāpmanā (ii.3.

13²), and āspātram juhār devāmām (ii.5.9³: G. M. have only the first word). All these are examples quite needless to be given, as they are read by Plākshi precisely as prescribed by the preceding rule. Counter-examples, exhibiting his discordant view, are kūcman chakabhih (v.7.23: W. G. M. have kūcman only, and B. reads kūshmāndān, which I have not found in the Sanhitā, although kūcmanḍa occurs in the Tāitt. Āraṇyaka, at ii.7.8) and akshnayā vyāghārayati (v.2.7⁵ et al.: given only by W. B., and introduced out of place, between nish tūpāmi and doshāvastah, above).

O. follows an independent course in the interpretation and illustration of this rule. It calls the insertion an abhinidhāna (though adding at the end "there is no obligation of abhinidhāna") and, for the examples yah kāmayeta to āspātram, it substitutes sugcandru dasma viçpate havyavāt (iv.4.4⁶: the MS. omits dasma), yaç chandusām (the thing nearest to this that I have found in the text is prajāpatiç chandusām, iii.3.7¹), naç cid ati (this I have overlooked in searching out the references), syātram (doubtless meant for āspātram), and bṛhaspatisūrapate (probably bṛhaspatisutasya te, i.4.27).

The present precept was pronounced unapproved in the comment to rule 9.

11. But according to Plākshāyana, on the contrary, when the following mute is a nasal.

This can only mean to teach the precise opposite of the preceding rule; or, that there is no insertion when a surd mute follows the spirant, but only when a nasal follows. And it is first so explained by the commentator, who gives as examples akshnayā vyāghārayati (v.2.7⁵ et al.), açnāti (i.6.7³ et al.), and tīrthe snāti

(vi.1.1²); and, as counter-examples, nishkevalyam (iv.4.2²), yah kāmāyeta (ii.1.2³ et al. : B. omits), yah pāpmanā (ii.3.13² : G. M. omit), and paścāt (v.2.9⁴ et al.). Plākshāyaṇa would read the first class as rule 9 requires, but would leave the mute without increment in the second class.

Then a second and wholly different interpretation is set forth as taught by certain authorities: namely, that tu, 'but,' in the rule, instead of negating Plākshi's opinion, reverses the quality of the spirant as prescribed in rule 9, changing it from surd to sonant—that is to say, admitting the increment only after h. The examples given are ahnām ketuh (ii.4.14¹), ṣarady aparāhne (ii.1.2⁵ : only W. has ṣarady), and brahmanvādino vadanti (i.7.1⁴ et al. : W. B. omit vadanti); the counter-examples, illustrating omission of the increment after a surd spirant, are aṣmā ca me (iv.7.5¹), grishmo hemantah (v.7.2⁴), and ayasmāyam vi cṛta (iv.2.5³ : W. B. omit cṛta). This, which is in itself forced and inadmissible, would also be equivalent to limiting the insertion to the little class of cases in which a later rule (xxi.14) requires the interposition of a nāsikya.

In the exposition of this rule, O. goes its own peculiar way, and takes no notice of the second interpretation which the other manuscripts report. It furnishes no counter-examples, and its examples agree only in part with those already given: they are (corrected) akṣṇayā vyāghārayati, grishme madhyandine (ii.1.2⁵), aṣṇāti (or snāti), and ayasmāyam vi cṛta.

The rule was pronounced unapproved by the commentator under rule 9.

savituh (i.5.6⁴ et al.). As counter-examples, we have tāh (i. e. tās, ix.2) sañrohaḥ (v.3.6³; omitted by O.; dropped out in W. B.) and vāk ta ā pyāyatām (i.3.9¹: only O. has the last two words), in which no aspiration takes place.

A possible difficulty in the application of this rule is noticed and removed by O. alone. Such a case as arvāk : hi : enam : parāḥ (vi.3.3¹) might seem to fall under its action, the spirant h following a surd mute. But it is pointed out that, in virtue of v.38, h becomes a fourth mute by special prescription; and hence that rule viii.3 alone applies to the preceding surd, changing it to a sonant.

The place of introduction of this precept and the following—coming in, as they do, right in the midst of the rules respecting duplication, with which they stand in no relation—is quite surprising and objectionable. The commentator, however, passes the matter without notice.

I have not noted any case in which my manuscript of the Sanhitā attempts the aspiration of a mute before a sibilant, as here required. The manuscripts of the commentary, however, which almost never heed the rules for duplication, even in illustrating those rules themselves, often (as we have repeatedly had occasion to notice) observe this one in their citations, although they yet more often neglect it (thus, in the examples here given, G. M. O. aspirate the mutes, and W. B. leave them unchanged). Being taught in company with the duplication, as part of the varṇa-krama, it has no claim to be taken account of in the construction of an ordinary Tāittirīya text. Respecting the teachings of the other Prāticākhyas upon the subject, see the note to Āth. Pr. ii.6.

13. According to Bādabhīkāra, when the following spirant is not of the same position with it.

Rule ii.44 teaches the accordance of the several (surd) spirants, in their order, with the series of mutes, in point of position—more literally, of place of production.

T. calls the individual here referred to Bādavīkāra, and W. O. have in the rule vādabhīkāra, but in the comment bādabh-; the rest have uniformly b as initial letter, which I have therefore adopted, as being decidedly better supported than v. Weber gives the two forms vādabh- (V. Pr. p. 250) and vāṭabh- (ib., p. 78).

This rule is pronounced unapproved.

15. A consonant before a pause is not doubled; nor r, visarjanîya, jihvâmûliya, or upadhmanîya.

As example of a consonant before a pause, is given ûrk (iv.7.4¹ et al.: W. has instead so 'rkah [v.4.3³], but it is not an illustration of the rule, and is evidently here only a corrupted reading of ûrk), of which the k would otherwise be doubled by xiv.4. Of course, it is only a final after r that would fall under the rules of duplication before a pause. The text affords, I believe, no instance of a consonant occurring in this position in samhitâ, but such words as ûrk and amârt (vii.1.1² et al.) need to have their reading in the other forms of text determined by a rule like this. The commentator quotes ûrk ca (i. e. ûrkk ca) me sînrtâ ca me (iv.7.4¹: B. omits the last two words, G. M. O. the last three), as showing that the k is doubled when in sandhi with a following letter. To illustrate the exemption from duplication of the other letters specified, are given nâ "rtim â rchatî (ii.2.4⁷), manuh ksheme (v.2.1⁷), yah (i. e. yax) kâmayeta (ii.1.2³ et al.), and yah (i. e. yax) pâpmanû (ii.3.13²). The other Prāticākhyas have rules equivalent with this, into the variety of expression of which we do not need to enter.

It is to be accounted as a reprehensible omission on the part of our treatise, that it gives no direction as to the treatment of a group beginning with anusvāra. The Vāj. Prāt. (iv.107) expressly exempts anusvāra from duplication; and, in the Rik Prāt., in the fundamental rule (vi.1), anusvāra is ruled out of account in the estimation of consonant groups, it being taught that a consonant is doubled after it in the same manner as after a vowel. There is no good reason to doubt that the same is to be understood as the doctrine of the present work, and that it would have anusvāra,¹ so far as duplication is concerned, deemed and taken as merely an affection of the vowel to which it is attached. That this is not explicitly stated, stands in connection with the equivocal position of the Tāitt. Prāt. in reference to the nature of anusvāra (see p. 68): according to the view taken at the beginning of the next chapter (xv.1), rules respecting it are no more required than in the Āth. Prāt., where they are equally wanting.

The commentator notices that some would read the rule now under discussion as two, cutting off avasāne from the rest; and for the reason that otherwise, as the rule stands, it seems natural to understand that "r, h, z, and q, when standing before a pause," are not doubled; as a similar construction was made in rule 10 of the fifth chapter. But he denies the validity of the objection, since duplication of r and the rest before a pause is not in the remotest manner suggested by the rules (literally, 'is expelled to a distance'), and consequently cannot be suspected of being taught here. If, on the other hand, avasāne, 'before a pause,' were set by itself, the inquiry would be "what under the sun is it that happens before a pause?" and the expression would appear meaningless. When, however, it is combined with the names of letters that follow, we naturally infer from the association that 'a letter in pausā' is intended. Hence, the inclusion of the two precepts in one rule is alone to be approved.

This defense of the unity of the rule is evidently of the most trifling and futile character, and the objectors are in the right—not, indeed, as the separation into two rules is absolutely necessary, but as it is decidedly preferable, and more in accordance with the general usage of the treatise elsewhere.

16. Nor a spirant, when followed by a vowel.

It is only, of course, after r (xiv.4) that a spirant can be liable to duplication before a vowel, so that the combinations to which the rule applies are rc, rsh, rs, and rh. All the other treatises excepting the Vāj. Prāt. have the same rule (R. Pr. vi.2; A. Pr. iii.32; Pān. viii.4.49).

The commentator's examples are darṣapāramāśāu (ii.2.5⁴ et al.), varshābhyah (vii.4.13: I presume; my MS. of the Sanhitā has varshyābhyah twice instead of varshyābhyah and varshābhyah: O. gives instead suvarshām, iv.4.4¹), barsam nahyati (ii.5.7¹⁻²), and barhishā (i.7.4¹ et al.: G. M. have instead barhisho 'ham, also i.7.4¹). To illustrate the limitation to a spirant, he gives ebhir no arkāih (i. e. arkkāih; iv.4.4⁷: O. omits); to show that a vowel must follow, pārṣve (i. e. pārṣve; vii.3.10³), varshyābhyah svāhā (i. e. varshshy; vii.4.13: G. M. omit svāhā), barsvebhih (i. e. barssv; v.7.11), and agnir hy asya (i. e. hhy; v.1.5⁵)—but O. has a different series, namely darṣyam yajñam (iii.2.2³), varshye-bhih (the MS. has varshebhih; I have not succeeded in finding either word in the Sanhitā), and agner hy etat purīṣam (vi.2.8⁶).

The combinations in which the spirant after r is doubled, being followed by another consonant, are rcm, rcy, rcn, rsh, rshn, rshm, rshy, rsv, and rhy. To complete the sandhi, either with or without duplication, the rules for insertion of svarabhakti (xxi.15,16) have to be further applied.

17. Or, according to Plākshi and Plākshāyana, when followed by a first mute.

That is to say, these two plākshināu would leave a spirant free from duplication before an unaspirated surd mute, contrary to the first rule of the chapter. The groups which would be thus affected are çc and çcy, çp, shk and shky and shkr, sh̥t and its further combinations (sh̥ty, sh̥tr, sh̥tv), shp, sk, st and its further combinations (stn, sty, str and stry, stv), and sp. One hardly sees why combinations with a second mute (namely çch and çchy, shkh, sh̥th and sh̥thy, sth and sth̥n, sph and sphy) should not be subject to the same rule—but then, one must not expect to see the reason of anything whatever, general rule or particular exception, in this doctrine of duplications. It may be made a question whether the single case, rsht̥, falling under rule 4 is not also here aimed at; if the pair of kinsmen did not overlook it, it is doubtless included with the rest.

The examples (which are lost in W.) are succandra dasma (iv. 4.4⁶: O. omits dasma) and ashtāu kṛtvāḥ (vi.4.5¹); a counter-example, with a last mute after the spirant, is tasmād evān vidu-shā (vi.4.9²: O. omits vidu-shā); but O. has, with B., omitted to point out that this is a counter-example, and gives further, as such, ishvā ca vajreṇa (v.7.3¹).

The commentator then goes on to say that although the word ca, 'or,' in the rule brings down by implication a spirant pure and simple (without exclusion of any sound belonging to that class), yet the real application is only to ç, sh, s, and h, since otherwise the mention of ç and ç in rule 15 would be without meaning, their exception being assured by the present precept. The interpretation is doubtless true, but the reason given for it is only acceptable on the supposition that what is here put forward as the view of two individual authorities is in fact the accepted doctrine of the Prāticākhya; in any other case, there is no inconsistency or interference between rules 15 and 17, and the commentator should rather have said that, as the pair of dissidents doubtless accepted

18. According to Hārīta, a surd spirant is not doubled.

There is unusual variety and inaccuracy of reading among the different manuscripts of the commentary of this rule, and O. goes off upon a course of its own: yet the aim of all is the same, and not difficult to discover. The word ūshmā (which was present or implied in the two preceding rules, and therefore might naturally enough come down into this by continued implication) is here expressly repeated, for the purpose of breaking connection with what goes before. If aghosha, 'surd,' only were specified, and ūshmā, 'spirant,' implied, the latter would have to be implied along with the attributes attached to it above, namely "followed by a vowel," or "followed by a first mute," and to such a spirant the further qualification of "surd" would be given; while the meaning intended is that Hārīta would forbid the duplication of a surd spirant altogether, in any situation.

O. alone gives as first example dārgyaṁ yajñam (iii.2.2³); all have vāicyo manushyānām (vii.1.1⁵); to which W. B. add pushyati prajāyā paṇḍitih (ii.4.6²) and vāicrānarasya rūpam (v.2.3² et al.), which O. omits, while G. M. substitute the single passage asyā 'parūpam (iii.5.7³). As counter-example, showing the limitation to a surd spirant, W. B. give tirohniyā nā (vii.3.13: B. omits nā); but G. M. give instead mahyam imān (iii.1.9⁶), and O. sapta jihvāḥ sapta (i.5.3²).

19. Nor h, when followed by r.

The word ca in the rule is declared to continue the implication of “according to Hārīta.” This individual having in the former rule limited his denial of duplication to a surd spirant, and so left the sonant spirant h (? the MSS. say “a surd spirant”) liable to be always doubled, it is now taught that h with the distinctive mark of a following r remains single. The example given, alike in all MSS., is duduhre ahrayah (i.5.5¹); counter-examples are juhve (i. e. juhhve) hy agnis tvā “hwayati” (i.1.12: G. M. end with agnih; W. B. omit altogether, along with the introductory explanation to the next citation), to show that h would be doubled by Hārīta before any other letter than r; and çukram (i. e. çukkrām) te anyat (iv.1.11²: O. omits), to show that any other letter than h would be doubled before r.

O., though using two of the citations given by the other MSS., has a wholly independent exposition of this rule.

Thus, in vashat te vishno (ii.2.12⁴: O. has vishat te rikshame, but it is doubtless only a corrupt reading) and vid dravīṇam (i.8.13¹ et al.), Hārīta would leave the groups tt and ddr untouched, while the rules of the treatise would require ttt and ddd. The other groups in which he would teach the simpler combination are ttr, dd, ddhr, and rtt; and ts, tvr and rts would fall indirectly under the same exception, since, by v.33, t (converted to th by xiv.12) must be inserted between t and s: ts, then, would in Hārīta's hands become tths; in those of the regular adherents of this school, ttths. Hārīta is this time implied "by vicinage" merely, there being no word in the rule to which his memory can be directly fastened. Examples of l before y and v are kalyāṇī (vii.1.6⁶) and bāilvo yūpo bhavati (ii.1.8¹: G. M. omit bhavati); of a dental mute in like situation, kanye 'va tunnā (iii.1.11⁸) and ishe tvā (i.1.1 et al.). The accepted usage of the school requires lly, llv, lvy, ltv, while Hārīta would leave the groups as in the ordinary text.

Combinations of a dental mute with a following y or v are quite numerous (I have noted about twenty in the Sanhitā).

22. Nor the following.

This rule completely puzzles the native comment, which has nothing of any value to say about it. Two explanations are suggested, evidently on the barest conjecture only, and it would be hard to say which of them is the more senseless. In the first place, it is said that parah, being singular, implies the sound v (as being the one last mentioned in the preceding rule); it, namely, of the two affecting causes (y and v) specified in rule 21, does not suffer duplication: examples are ribhādārne (iii.5.8 et al.) and ā grā-vnāh (vi.3.2³: W. B. omit ā); and a counter-example, showing the limitation to v, is kalpān juhoti (v.4.8⁵). And the intent of the rule is to remove a restriction imposed in rule 3 of this chapter—that is to say, to allow the duplication of l before a mute, which is there forbidden. In the second place, parah is said to be equivalent to dvitīya, 'second,' and to signify that, when the duplication has been once performed, it is not done over again, as otherwise the process would go on ad infinitum. And if it be objected that rule 23 sufficiently forbids this repeated duplication, and that this one would therefore be an unnecessary repetition, the answer is made that that is no fault, since the matter in hand is a division of opinions—that is to say, doubtless, that here Hārīta's view only is concerned, and so there is no necessary connection between the two rules.

Fortunately, the commentator is able to add that the present precept, along with its four predecessors, is to be ruled out of account as unapproved, so that what it means is of very little consequence.

23. A letter followed by one homogeneous with itself, or one of the same mute-series, is not duplicated.

By savarna, 'of like color or sound,' we are told, is signified identity of form, not merely correspondence as regards place and organ of production. The difference is, that the latter description would apply to the spirants, in their relation to the series of mutes (ii.44,45), and it is not the usage of this school to exempt the spirants (except χ and φ, rule 15) from duplication, even before a mute with which they are akin. The Ath. Pr. (iii.30) does so exempt them. The epithet savarna, then, applies only to an identical letter and to the nasal semivowels into which (by v.26,28) n and m are converted before y, l, and r.

The cited examples of the application of the rule to homogeneous sounds are atvakkāya (vii.5.12²), attā havīṣhi (ii.6.12²), pippakā te śaravyāyāi (v.5.19: only O. has the last word), stūtyattāh

Those which illustrate absence of duplication of a mute before another of the same series are añkāu nyañkāu (i.7.7²), prāñcam upa (v.2.7³: O. omits upa), kāñdāt-kāñdāt (iv.2.9² et al.), tañ te duçcakshāñ (iii.2.10²), and ambha stha (i.5.6¹ et al.). Then the commentator quotes from some unnamed authority a verse prescribing that “when a nasal preceeds, a k or g is inserted before t or dh respectively,” and claims that, in virtue of it, there fall under the rule also such cases as pāñkto yajñāñ pāñktāñ (i.5.2¹ et al.: G. M. O. omit the last word) and tāñ brāyād yañgdhvam iti (iii.4.8²: O. omits the first two words). From this we should draw the inference that, in forms like those here quoted, the omission of the non-nasal mute (specially prescribed by the Ath. Pr., at ii.20) is the regular and proper reading of the çākṣhā, its presence, when found, being regarded as an irregular insertion, or a process forming part of the varṇakrama—which is just the opposite of the etymologically correct view. I have not collected all the passages illustrating the point, but the omission is certainly the prevailing, though not exclusive, reading in my manuscript of the Saṁhitā, as also in the Calcutta edition. That the verse quoted is from some treatise dealing specifically with the Tāittirīya text may be inferred (not too confidently) from its making no mention of th as requiring the insertion of k; it being the fact that no example of th in such a situation is to be found in the Saṁhitā.

Finally, as counter-examples, where the two mutes are of different classes, we receive (except in O.) vāñ ma āsan (v.5.9²: G. M. end with me), śaṇ māsañ (vi.5.3⁴), viduñhāñi manmahe (iv.7.15³), and dāmnā 'pāu 'mbhañ (ii.4.13: W. B. have dāmnā only): here the combinations are to be made śūm, num, num, and mmn. The illustrations are quite one-sided, both for and against the rule, being only groups containing a nasal.

This rule furnishes the most important of all the prescribed

24. Unless, indeed, it be a non-nasal followed by a nasal.

This is a precept of counter-exception, contravening in part the exceptions established by the foregoing rule. Examples are yācñā (i.5.7⁴: the only example of this combination which the text affords), yajñe-yajñe (iii.1.11²: but O. has yajñena, vi.5.3¹ et al.), ātñārah (v.6.5³: also the sole instance), sa pratnavat (ii.2.12¹ et al.: in O. only), and pāpmānum (i.4.41 et al.): a counter-example is tam mā devāh (iii.3.2²: wanting in O.).

The cases here denied exemption from duplication are those in which, according to xxi.12, yama is introduced between the two mutes. According to the Vāj. Prāt. (iv.111), yama suspends duplication.

26. A l is not doubled when followed by h, ç, or v.

The commentator's examples are malhā ā 'labhanta (ii.1.2⁴: but B. O. have -bheta, which is found in the same division, and G. M. read -bhate, which is doubtless a corruption of the same), çatavalço vi roha (i.3.5 and vi.3.3³: O. omits vi roha), and tuto bilvaḥ (ii.1.8²: O. substitutes bāilvo yūpaḥ, ii.1.8¹); his counter-examples (omitted in O.) are kalmāshī (v.1.1⁴) and kalyāñi (vii.1.6⁶).

This rule, we are told, determines the usage of the school so far as the combinations lh and lç are concerned, but not in the case of

But O. has an inserted passage, so corrupted as to be hardly intelligible, which quotes a verse (easily made such by a little emendation) from some authority unspecified, making a distinction between lv as occurring in a circumflexed syllable or otherwise—that is to say, between bīlvāḥ and bālvāḥ.

All the groups here treated of are quite rare, lç occurring, I believe, only in valçā (vii.3.19) and its compounds, and lh only in malha; lv is sometimes found also as the result of sandhi (as at i.5.9⁶; ii.5.1⁶).

The commentator adds, finally, that the next rule also is not approved.

This is a view of certain authorities merely, and unapproved. The examples are vāg devī (i.7.10²), apām ojmānam (iv.6.6⁶), ātñārah (v.6.5³), sa pratnavut (ii.2.12¹ et al.), and yam apnavānah (i.5.5¹): O. has only the first two of them.

28. Nor an original final that is followed by a consonant.

The natural meaning of this rule would appear to be simply that, in the opinion of some authorities, a final mute which is not the product of euphonic alteration is exempted from duplication before any initial consonant whatever (not before a mute only, as in the preceding rule). The commentator, however, manages to extract from it a very different value: namely, that n final is not liable to duplication before a semivowel or spirant (i. e. h); and he regards this as the accepted doctrine of the school, and as determining the reading in this śākhā. How this strange result is arrived at, we have to follow through his lengthy exposition closely enough to discover.

In the first place, vyāñjanapara, 'followed by a consonant,' is declared to mean 'followed by any other consonant than a mute,' because otherwise, as we have read 'followed by a mute' in the preceding rule, the treatise would be guilty of a needless repetition so far as sequence by a mute is concerned. To this the natural answer would be that the two rules do not come into collision, since they do not occupy the same ground: the former relates to any mute in any situation, the latter only to an unaltered mute at the end of a word; and if the one is declared to have a single pronunciation before a mute only, the other before any consonant whatever, what objection can possibly be taken? Moreover, we are stating here the views of certain authorities, of whom one set might hold rule 27, and the other rule 28: and even if they partly covered one another, there would be nothing wrong about it. Once more, sparṇapara is claimed to be implied here merely for the purpose of denying it, the commentator's conclusion being that there is duplication of n before a mute, though not before a semi-vowel; and that is certainly a very remarkable kind of anuvṛtti which should work thus by contraries. Of the last two considerations, the commentator takes no notice (although he has once appealed to the former of them in a somewhat similar case above, under rule 22): the first he states and replies to. It may be objected, he says, that there is a difference of affecting cause laid down in consequence of the difference of the affected letter; the latter is here qualified as final and as original; and the former as being any consonant whatever. Nevertheless, he claims, there would be meaninglessness of the qualification of the affecting cause, so far as mutes were concerned: the reason he gives is of course a mere quibble, and the point of it is so fine that I am not confident of seeing it rightly: it seems to be, that there is an absence of such qualification in the implied term spargapara. At any rate, the comfortable conclusion is, that only the semivowels etc. are intended by the term "consonant" as employed in the rule. The next step is, to declare that ca, 'nor,' although it strictly brings forward 'a mute,' without qualification, yet really amounts, on the principle of exclusion, to an implication of n only. Namely, thus: no other consonant remains unchanged at the end of a word before a semivowel or spirant. It may be objected that m also does so before r (by xiii.4) in such words as samrāj: but this is of no account; for, if admitted as a reproach to the interpretation now under treatment, it would convict of superfluity a part of rule xiii.4: namely, the iti, which was shown, in accordance with the received reading of the śākhā, to teach the duplication of the m. We see now why that atrociously forced and groundless construction of the meaning of rule xiii.4 was made; it was needed to bolster up in advance the forced and groundless construction to be put upon the present precept. As the m, then, constitutes no ground of exception, so neither do the nasals ṇ and ṅ in such cases as brahmanvantah (vi.4.10¹) and nyāṇ ragmibhiḥ (ii.4.10²). For why? the qualification prākṛta, 'original,' in the rule involves [as belonging to the letter to which it is applied] the quality of being alterable, since it would otherwise be meaningless; and there is no case to be found where either ṇ or ṅ is altered before a semivowel or spirant. If, then, the term prākṛta is to be allowed its proper force, the implication of any other mute than n must be excluded. Here is another most arbitrary act of construction—as if prākṛta meant necessarily 'an alterable mute' when it retains its original form, instead of simply '(a mute) that retains its original form.'

The authority of Māhisheya (see note to the introductory verses, p. 7) is further appealed to as making the same restriction of implication. His explanation is that, in the view of some teachers, a final unaltered n followed by a semivowel or spirant is not doubled. Examples are mitro janān yātayati (iii.4.11⁵: only G. M. have mitro), omanvati te (ii.6.9⁵; p. oman-vati), and etān homān (i.5.4⁴); in all which we are to understand that the n remains single. On the other hand, there is duplication in anyā (i. e. annyā) yanti (ii.5.12²) and anv (i. e. annv) aha māsāh (i.7.13¹), where the n is not final; in tān (i. e. tānn) kalpayati (v.3.1²) and imān (i. e. imānn) bhadrān (i.6.3¹), where the n is followed by a mute; and also in tān rakshadhvam (i.2.7) and vāishnavān rakshohanah (i.3.2²), where, it is asserted, the n does not maintain its original form. Since, however, there is no rule in the Prāṭiśākhya for altering a n in this last pair of cases, the commentator quotes (from the same authority, we may conjecture, which has been recently twice appealed to, under rules 23 and 26) a prescription to the effect that n when preceding a r or an r-vowel, or when following a lingual (the MSS. say, a dental) mute, is uttered in the lingual position: thus, he says, in virtue of its change of position, the n is phonetically altered. Finally, he makes an alleged citation from the Çikshā (not found in the version known to us), which teaches that a final n preceding r exhibits a peculiarity, and is liable to duplication. Such a modification of the utterance of n forms no part of the phonetic system of any of the Prāṭiśākhyas.

Thus is brought to an end the tedious subject of duplication, the physical foundation of which is of the obscurest, although the pains with which the Hindu śākhināḥ have elaborated it, and the earnestness with which they assert their discordant views respecting it, prove that it had for them a real, or what seemed like a real, value.

29. A grave following an acute becomes circumflex.

The following rule shows that the substantive here to be understood is svarah, 'vowel.' All the other Prâtigâkhyas, in their corresponding rules (R. Pr. iii.9, V. Pr. iv.134, A. Pr. iii.67), state the principle as applying to an aksharam, 'syllable.' In his explanation and illustration, however, the commentator is not careful to bear this in mind. He states the sphere of the rule to be all the three kinds of enclitic circumflex, the prâtiḥata (xx.3), pâdavr̥tta (xx.6), and tâirovyañjana (xx.7), although these in part include cases to which only the next rule attributes the circumflexed quality. And his examples are sâ idhânâḥ (iv.4.4⁵), âthâ 'bravît (iii.2.11³), vâsvy asi (i.2.5¹ et al.), prâṅgam (iv.4.2¹), and tâyâ devâtayâ (iv.2.9² et al.); of which only the first and fourth show the circumflex vowel following the acute without an intervening consonant (rule 30). Nor are all the examples unexceptionable in other respects: for though the i of idhânâḥ and the a of asi are really anudâtta, 'grave,' in the padu-text, and so show an actual conversion into circumflex, the other exhibited cases of enclitic circumflex are circumflexed in the padu-text as well, and undergo no alteration in consequence of their change to samhitâ. It is at this that the commentator aims, when he adds that, "there being grave quality in the condition of separation of letters, then, when these are combined together, circumflex quality appears in accordance with the present precept." That is to say, it is the natural unaccented quality of the syllable that is here implied in anudâtta, not its being technically grave, and marked as such. This understanding is also needed in order to make good rule 31, where we are not taught that the enclitically circumflexed final of âtha, for example, becomes grave before an acute or circumflex (as in âtha tvâm, âtha kvâ), but that the unaccented final a, which was made circumflex by rules 29 and 30 after â, is exempted from the change when so followed, and remains unaccented.

The enclitic circumflex is written in the recorded Tâittirîya text in the same manner as in the Rik and Atharvan; namely, by the perpendicular stroke above the syllable, the same that is used for the independent circumflex. The method is so familiar to all students of the Veda that it does not need to be illustrated here. Certain specialties of Tâittirîya usage will come up for notice under later rules (xix.3, xxi.10,11).

For an exposition of the place and value of the enclitic circumflex in the Hindu accentual system, see the note to Ath. Pr. iii.65. It may doubtless admit of question whether the Hindu phonetists, in noting the syllable naturally grave as being otherwise than grave when immediately preceded by an acute, would not have apprehended it better, and described it more truly, as a middle tone between acute and grave, rather than a combination (i.40) of acute and grave. Arguments drawn from the analogies of the Greek and Latin accentual systems (see F. Misteli, in Kuhn's Zeitschrift, vol. xvii., 1868; also Prof. J. Hadley, in the Proceedings of the Am. Oriental Society for Oct. 1869 [Journal, vol. ix., pp. lxii.-lxiii.]) may press upon us this latter view as the more plausible. But that any one having access to the sources of knowledge upon the subject should dispute the substantial identity in physical character of the Greek circumflex and the Samskrit independent svarita, and should set down the latter as a "middle tone," in the face of all authority and of all sound phonetic theory, savors of inexcusable carelessness or prejudice.

30. Even when consonants intervene.

For the necessity of this explicit statement, see the note on the preceding rule. The commentator, having already given under the latter several cases in which the affected and the affecting vowel were separated by one or more consonants, has nothing that is new to offer; but he quotes, nevertheless, tād agne aurnó bhuvāmi (iii. 3.8²: B. O. omit bhavāmi) and yás tvā hrđi' (i.4.46¹): in the first case, ag- and bha- are circumflexed; in the second, tvā.

नोदात्तस्वरितपरः ॥ ३१ ॥

31. Not, however, when an acute or circumflex follows.

That is to say, the syllable naturally unaccented or grave—but which, coming next after an acute, would usually take, by rule 29, the tone of transition from higher to lower pitch—retains its low or grave tone if immediately followed by an acute, or by a (nitya or independent, of course) circumflex, of which the first element is acute: the pitch of voice is governed by the following tone in preference to the preceding, and sinks at once, without perceptible movement of transfer, to the level of anudatta, as a vantage-ground from which to rise to the immediately succeeding high point.

In this rule, as well as that to which it constitutes an exception, all authorities are agreed (see note to Ath. Pr. iii.70); although we should not less naturally expect the double attraction, of a high tone on either hand, to exercise at least as much assimilating effect upon the pitch of an intermediate syllable as a preceding high tone alone exerts.

The commentator's examples are sá imám lokám (i.5.9⁴: but G. M. add ajayan, which doubtless means tá imám lokám ajayan, vii.1.5³), tásmát tá ádyā annadhā'nāt (vii.1.1⁵: only O. has the first word and the last), kīrīnā mānyamānah (i.4.46¹), and tāsyāi vy'rdham āndām ajāyata (vi.5.6¹: only G. M. have the last two words): the vowels between acute and acute, or between acute and circumflex, in these examples, are anudatta, and written, as such, with the horizontal stroke beneath.

The three rules here given only apply, in strictness, to a single unaccented syllable following an acute; where there is more than one such, the rules for pracaya (xxi.10,11) come into force.

32. Not so, according to Āgñiveṣyāyana.

The significance of this rule (which is declared unapproved, in the comment to its successor) is more clearly stated by O., in an independent exposition, than by the other four versions of the comment. It is meant to exhibit an opinion contravening the doctrine laid down by its predecessor, and allowing the circumflex accent to stand, even when the following syllable has, or begins with, the high tone. No examples are given, except by O., which has vódhavé (i.6.2¹ et al.) and tāsyā kvā suvargāh (ii.6.5⁵).

According to the majority of MSS. of the comment, the denial of these skeptical people is not limited to the enclitic svārīta, but extends to the whole accent, in all its seven forms (xx.1-8). Thus, namely; in the brāhmaṇa of the Vājasaneyins (that is to say, the Çatapatha-Brāhmaṇa) there are only two accents, the acute and the grave. But O. has once more a version of its own, stating that the authorities here referred to would not, like Āgniveṣyāyana, annul rule 31 simply, but would also deny the rules in general for the enclitic circumflex, as in sā idhānāḥ (iv.4.4⁵) and prapā (? MS. prathā) asi (ii.5.12⁴). We cannot well hesitate to prefer the latter interpretation; there has been no question here of the independent circumflex, and a denial of its existence would be altogether out of place and impertinent. Nor is the reference to the Çatapatha-Brāhmaṇa one at all likely to have been intended by the Prāticākhya. And it is not true, except so far as the mode of designating the accents is concerned, that that treatise has no circumflex accent: it writes, to be sure, only the anudātta sign, so that, if the value of this were the same as in the other usual systems of designation, all its syllables would be either grave or acute: and on this foundation, later Hindu systematists have declared them such, and painfully elaborated an exposition of them (see Weber's Ind. Studien, x. 397 ff.).

Rules 32 and 33 are, naturally enough, declared unapproved; but to us it is both interesting and important to find that there were Hindu phonetists in the ancient time who did not admit such an element of utterance as the enclitic circumflex.

1. In case of the conversion of n into r, a spirant, or y—also when the y is omitted—or in case of the omission of m, the preceding vowel becomes nasal.

That this Prâtiçākhyā takes no distinct and consistent ground upon the question whether the so-called anusvāra consists in a nasalization of the vowel or in a nasal consonantal element following the vowel, has been already pointed out (note to ii.30); as also, that the present rule is the one where the former view is most unequivocally taken. As the school to which the commentator belongs has adopted the other view, he declares (under rule 2) that the doctrine here laid down is unapproved.

The “conversion of n into r or a spirant” is, of course, the retention of a historical final s after n unchanged before t (vi.14), or changed to ç before c (v.20), or to r before a vowel (ix.20 etc.); its “conversion into y,” with the (invariably) consequent “loss of the y” (ix.20 etc., x.19), goes back to the same cause. The commentator’s illustrative examples are agnīr ap̄sushadāḥ (v.6.1²), sa trīṇr ekādaçāṇ iha (iii.2.11³: found in O. only), karnāṇç cā ‘karnāṇç ca (i.8.9³), trīṇs treān (ii.5.10¹), and mahāñ indrāḥ (i.4.20 et al.); of which the last is by part of the MSS., rather needlessly, quoted twice, once for the conversion of the n into y (for which it should be written mahāñy indrāḥ), and again for the loss of the y. For the loss of m (by xiii.2), the examples are pratyushtaṇ rakshaḥ (i.1.2¹ et al.) and sañçitam me (iv.1.10³ et al.).

The commentator explains anunāsika by sāmunāsika, as if the word were properly a noun, and needed reduction to adjective form: in this treatise, however, it is always and only an adjective, meaning ‘nasal’ (see note to ii.30).

3. And claim that, on the contrary, anusvāra is inserted after the vowel.

The anusvāra here prescribed is called by the commentator an āgama, 'increment.' Its insertion is the alternative view to the nasalization of the vowel, and, as is pointed out, is held where that nasalization is denied—of which denial, the tu, 'on the contrary,' is the sign in the rule. There is one example given: sa trīṅr ekāduṣāṅ iha (iii.2.11³: W. B. omit sa).

The approval of this rule is, of course, involved in that of its predecessor; and the usage of the recorded Tāittirīya text corresponds.

4. Anusvāra is also inserted in the case of sra etc., in a single word, before a spirant.

"Also" (ca) in the rule, we are told, brings down the implication of the above specified increment. The srādayas, 'sra etc.,' are the whole detail, given in the next chapter, of the occurrence of anusvāra in the Tāittirīya-Saṁhitā otherwise than as the result of the rules of combination, implied in rules 1–3 of this chapter. The precept, then, is introductory to the detail referred to, and also lays down some general limitations affecting it. The commentator quotes a single case, goṅsā moda ive 'ti (iii.2.9⁵: it falls under xvi.2); and then gives counter-examples, establishing the restrictions made: tāsām trīṇi ca (ii.5.8³) shows that the insertion is made only under the circumstances defined in chapter xvi.; tam mā saṅ srja varcasā (i.4.45³ et al.: only G. M. have varcasā) and prastaram ā hi sīdu (ii.6.12⁶: found in O. only) show that it is to be made only in a single word—that is to say, if I understand the meaning, that if mā sām and hī sīda were single words, they would fall respectively under rules 8 and 13 of the next chapter, and have the increment—; and māyā māyinām (iii.1.11⁷) shows that a spirant must follow (māyínām otherwise falling under xvi.8). To the specification ekapade, ‘in a single word,’ the commentator adds in his paraphrase the explanation akhaṇḍapade, ‘in an undivided word;’ and then, in his illustration, he treats this as a restriction or limitation, and establishes it by an example, trishāhasro vāi (v.6.8³; p. tri-sāhasrah); rule xvi.25 would otherwise require the increment after tri.

5. Not before an altered final.

The illustrative example is bahis te astu bāl iti (iii.3.10²; G. M. omit the last two words): we have in it a s following hi in a single undivided word; and hence, by xvi.13, should have to read bahiś, but for this restriction. The alteration is from h to s, according to ix.2. As counter-example is given mā hiñsir dvipādam (iv.2.10¹; G. M. O. omit the last word), a case falling under the rule already referred to.

अप्रयुक्ताः समानान्तराण्यनुनासिकान्येकेषाम् ॥ ६ ॥

6. According to some authorities, the simple vowels, except the pragrahas, are nasalized.

This and the remaining rules of the chapter have the aspect of an intrusion, as they interrupt the natural connection of what precedes and what follows, and merely give the view of certain authorities on points which the Prātiçākhyas in general leave untouched. They are brought in here as having to do with nasalized vowels, which are the subject of this chapter and its successor.

With the nasalization thus taught is to be compared that noticed in the Rik Prāt. (at i.16, r. 63, lxiv), which teaches that the first eight vowels (namely a, ā, i, ī, u, ū, r, ṛ) are by [some ?] teachers declared nasal when they are not pragṛhya, and stand as finals before a pause. This is different, first, in including r and ṛ (which are not samānāksharāṇi according to our treatise: compare i.2; but the difference amounts to nothing, as the vowels in question never occur avasāne, but only avagrahe); and secondly, in limiting the nasalization to finals, before a pause. But it is perfectly evident that our rule also applies to finals only, and, as we shall see, the commentator resorts to great violence to bring in the implication of "final" in rule 8, below. Again, the specification "in saṁhitā also," in rule 8, and the interpretation of padam in rule 7 as signifying padakāle, 'in pada-text,' sufficiently prove that the present precept does not apply in saṁhitā—that is, that avasāne, 'in pausa,' is implied here. And the absence of statement or anuvṛtti of these two essential implications is strong additional evidence that the rules are interpolated.

By most of the MSS., only one example is given, namely kulīyini vasumatī (iv.3.4¹), which, if our understanding, as above explained, is correct, is to be read, in pada-text, kulīyiniñ : vasumatīñ. O. adds aminanta evāñ (iii.1.11⁵), one of the cases of suspended combination falling under x.13, and (by R. Pr. ii.31,32) in the Rig-Veda requiring nasalization of the uncombined final: its citation seems to indicate that O. would not limit the operation of the rule to the pada-text. To show that the nasalization does not take place in uncombinable vowels, or pragrahas, are quoted, in pada-form, amī iti (iii.3.7¹ et al.) and tanū iti (ii.2.7⁵: omitted in O.). To illustrate the limitation to simple vowels, we find in most MSS. so evāñ 'śhāi 'tasya (ii.2.9⁷); but O. gives instead agnaye 'nikavate (i.8.4¹ et al.), viśhvav e 'hī 'dam (ii.4.12³), and vāyav iṣṭaye (ii.2.12⁸).

The commentator, as he has done repeatedly before (under i.49, ii.7, v.2), notices the apposition in the rule of apragrahāḥ and samānāksharāṇi, two words of different gender. He signifies, further, under the next rule, that both that and this are unapproved.

As examples of nasalized protracted vowels, are given tvīṣ ity abravīt (ii.4.12⁶) and astu hīṣ ity abratām (vii.1.6¹), both in saṁhitā-form, although it is again expressly pointed out that the nasalization is not made in saṁhitā: the two worthies referred to would read trīṣ: and hīṣ. It is added that ca, 'also,' in this rule effects its connection with what is prescribed in the preceding one—or, as O., in more customary phrase, expresses it, brings forward by implication the preceding rule.

Some, we are further informed, restrict the application of the precept to words which contain a single vowel protracted, and would not regard it as authorizing nasalization in na chinattīṣ iti (i.7.21⁴) or na vicityāṣ iti (vi.1.9¹: G. M. omit iti).

The rule is declared to be of no binding force.

8. An a, however, is nasalized in saṁhitā also.

The commentator's explanation is that nasality and protraction are here implied (from the preceding rule) by vicinage; and that tu, 'however,' is intended to annul the implication that only the opinion of the two authorities specified in rule 7 is reported. And though the comprehensive statement "an a" is made in the rule, nevertheless, in virtue of rule i.58, "continued implication is of that which is last (or final)," the "also" (api) really brings down only a final a as suffering a prescribed effect by the attribution of nasal quality. The sense, then, is that a protracted final a is nasalized, both in saṁhitā and elsewhere. Examples are suçlo-kāñṣ sumāṅgalāñṣ (i.8.16²), upahātāñṣ (ii.6.7³), yaço mamāñṣ (vii.4.20); these are, in fact, all the cases of protraction of simple final a which the text contains; and the edition (so far as it goes) and my MS. nasalize the ā, as required by the interpretation of the rule here given. The cases are much more numerous in which a final aḥ exhibits āṣ as the ultimate result of protraction, the h being lost before a following vowel or sonant consonant: namely, at i.5.9⁶: v.5.1³, 3² twice: vi.1.9¹ twice; 3.8¹; 4.3⁴; 6.2³; and in one place, vi.5.8⁴, the same final āṣ comes from a protracted e: the question might possibly arise whether these do not also fall under the rule, but it would have to be answered in the negative (see the counter-examples below); and the text reads accordingly. The manuscripts of the commentary give as found "in another śākhā," one example, read brahmāśn in W. B. (O. is wanting), and yadghrā in G. M.: I do not quite know what to make of this, as there seems to be no call for quoting from another text examples of what is capable of being fully illustrated from the received Veda of the school; brahmāśn is found at i.8.16¹ twice, ² twice, but would be a counter-example to this rule, its a not being final; it is, in fact, of the same character with the first of the counter-examples given. These are satyarājāśn (i.8.16²), agnāś ity āha (vi.5.8⁴: W. has dropped out agnāś), and vicityaḥ somāś na vicityāś iti (vi.1.9¹: O. has only this).

Finally, the commentator remarks that Ānkhāyana and Kāṇḍamāyana also accept this principle. He may well say this, for the natural interpretation of the rule is to make it represent simply the view of those authorities; and the action of the comment, in cutting it loose from its predecessors, and declaring it alone to express the approved doctrine of the treatise, is in a high degree forced and arbitrary. It was noticed under i.58 what an unjustifiable act of violent interpretation was there committed, by way of preparation for this one. The implication of "final" is not needed in rule 8 any more than in rules 6 and 7, and is clearly enough made in them all; whence it comes, it would be the business of those who put the passage in to tell, if they could.

The Ath. Prāt. gives (at i.105) an enumeration of the protracted vowels occurring in the text to which it relates. This our treatise omits to do, and it may be well to repair the omission in this place. A final a is protracted to āṅ at i.8.16² twice: ii.6.7³: vii.4.20: —ah to āṣh at i.4.27: v.5.1³; and to āṣ (the h being lost) at i.5.9⁶: v.5.1³, 3² twice: vi.1.9¹ twice; 3.8¹; 4.3⁴; 6.2³: —an to āśn at i.8.16¹ twice, 16² three: ii.6.5⁶: —am to āsm at vi.1.4⁵; 5.9¹: vii.1.7⁴; 5.7¹ twice: —i to īṣ at i.7.2¹, 4: ii.4.12⁶: vi.5.9¹: vii.1.6¹, 7⁴: —ih to īṣh or īṣr at i.5.9⁶: vi.3.10¹: —in to īśn at vii.4.20 twice: —uh to ūṣr at vi.3.8¹: —e to ēṣi at i.4.27: vi.1.4⁵; and

9. According to the former ones, all is of one pitch.

The comment is completely at a loss as to how this rule is to be understood, and gives three more or less discordant interpretations of it, the first of which we are probably to regard as the preferred one, if there be a preference. "All" means 'every kind of articulate sound; "of one pitch" is equivalent to ekagruti, yama denoting the tone of an acute syllable; "the former ones" are 'the sacrificers; the meaning is, then, that in the sacrificial usage of the sacrificers everything is uttered in acute monotone. O. has an exposition of its own, which is in great part too corrupt to be read without considerable emendation, and which conducts to the same conclusion: it quotes, apropos of pūrve, a pada of a tristubh verse from some sacred text, "the former ones spoke those words to the former ones."

The second interpretation differs from the first only in declaring pūrve, 'the former ones,' to designate certain gākhiṇaḥ, or 'holders of a Vedic text.'

The third is of quite another character; it makes yama to be equivalent to svara in the sense of 'vowel,' and explains 'every monosyllable is nasalized'—the intent being to annul the restriction to simple vowels only (as made in rule 6). Who the pūrve are, is not told us this time.

The commentator consoles himself at the end by declaring the rule not approved. We may fairly extend the same condemnation to his treatment of it, and conjecture that, if he could only have told us what it meant, we might have found in it something to approve. We are tempted to seek in it some statement as to the accent of the protracted syllable, or pada; and, if it were allowed to amend pūrveshām to ekeshām, we might translate, 'some hold that the whole word in which protraction occurs is to be uttered in the same tone'—only then, to be sure, we should look for a statement of the usage actually followed in the text.

CHAPTER XVI.

CONTENTS: 1–31, detail of the cases of occurrence, in the Sanhitā, of ñ in the interior of a word, before a spirant.

अथ सकारपराः ॥ १ ॥

1. Now for cases in which s follows.

A simple heading, of force through a considerable part of the chapter (i. e. through rule 13). The essential item of the precept laid down was given above, in xv.4, which directed that in all the cases to be specified in this chapter is to be assumed the presence of anusvāra following a vowel and followed by a spirant. Words in which that spirant is s form by far the most numerous class, and until rule 14 they alone are treated.

The Rik Pr. is the only one of the other treatises which offers anything at all analogous with this enumeration; it (at xiii.7–10) gives rules for the occurrence of anusvāra after long vowels only.

2. Sra, ṣo, ha, pā, and ṣa, at the beginning of a pada, take anusvāra before a s that is followed by a vowel.

The commentator cites examples, as follows. For sra, visrañśa-yed amehenā 'dhvaryuḥ (vi.2.9⁴, 10⁷: G. M. O. have only the first word); we have other cases at ii.5.7²: v.1.6¹: vii.3.10³, all from the same root, sras. For ṣo, ṣoñśa moda ive 'ti (iii.2.9⁵: G. M. omit the last word, O. the last two); I have noted no other case: as counter-example, to show that only o after ṣ takes the increment, is given āṣāsānā sūmanasam (i.1.10¹: O. alone has the latter word). For ha, hañsaḥ śucishad (i.8.15²: iv.2.1⁵); various other cases of hañsa are found in the text, and hañsi: that hā is not treated in the same way is shown by prajā mā mā hāsīt (v.6.8¹: O. omits). For pā, pāñsura irāvati (i.2.13²); other cases are pāñsūn and pāñsavyāya, at ii.6.10² and iv.5.9¹ respectively: that pa would not have been correct is shown by āhatam gabhe pasah (vii.4.19³: O. omits āhatam); pāsi, which would seem to fall under the rule, is excepted by rule 17, below. For ga, yad āsinaḥ gañsati tasmāt (iii.2.9⁷: W. B. G. M. omit tasmāt, thus allowing the citation to be found also at iii.2.9⁶); cases of this combination, all of them coming from the root gañs, are not infrequent in the Sanhitā. As general counter-examples, we have, to establish the necessity of the restriction "at the beginning of a pada," agnir ukthena vāhasā (i.5.11¹), somam pipāset (ii.1.10¹), and dahā "ga-sah" (i.2.14⁶: O. omits); while tasmāt sa visrasyah (vi.2.9⁴, 10⁷: only O. has the first two words), hastayoh (iv.1.5³ et al.: G. M. O. omit), and kaviṣastāh (ii.6.12⁶: all the MSS. have -gastah, which I have not found in the text, but probably by my own fault) do the same service for the specification "when a vowel follows."

The commentator goes on to say that some authorities accept hi as a part of this rule: which is not to be approved, since "at the beginning of a word" is here implied, and so ahiñsāyāi (v.2.8⁷) would be left without the increment. And if it be pleaded that hiñsīh parame (iv.2.10¹⁻² et al.) should be an example here, the reply is made, that the anuvāra is assured to it by rule 13, below, where there is no restriction to the beginning of a word; and that to repeat here the specification of hi would be useless. The only criticism to be offered upon this is that the objection has too little reason to be really worthy of notice.

2. sra: ṣo: ha: pā: ṣa: *ity ete grahaṇaviṣeshāḥ*¹ *padādayaḥ sakāraparāś tasmint sakāre svarapare suty anuvārāgamam*² *bha-jante*³. *yathā*⁴: vi-----: ṣoñsā-----: okāreṇa kim: āṣā-----: hañsaḥ-----: ḥrasva iti kim: prajā-----: pāñsura-----: *dir-ghena*⁵ kim: āh-----: yad-----: padādaya iti kim: agnir-----: somam-----: 'dahā-----: svrapara iti kim: tasmāt-----: 'has-----: kav-----.

3. Even when the vowel is altered.

That is to say, even when the vowel that is by the last rule required to follow the s has undergone euphonic alteration, so as to become a consonant. A single example is cited, apahañsy agne (iv.7.13¹; p. apa-hañsi); if the text contains any others, they have escaped my notice.

रापूर्वश्च ॥ ४ ॥

4. As also, when they are preceded by rā.

This rule is made for the purpose of establishing a single additional case under the general rule given above (xvi.2), namely, the word nārāṣaṇṣibhyaḥ (vii.5.11²); the case being one, as the comment points out, where the ṣa is not at the beginning of a pada. The ca, 'also,' brings down only ṣa; and we are assured that this is the reason why ṣa was mentioned last in rule 2, even at the cost of a violation of the natural order of the vowels. Of this point we need not make much, since the rule contains other and unexplained violations of alphabetic order.

5. Also in ṣaṇṣtā, except when it is accented on the final syllable.

Here is another single case, falling under rule 2 by the suspension of one of the restrictions laid down in that rule—namely, that the s be followed by a vowel. The passage is utā ṣaṇṣtā sūviprah (iv.6.8²: O. omits suviprah). The restriction as to accent is intended to exclude ācvasyā viçastā' (iv.6.9³: O. adds dvā yam-).

6. Also in açañsan.

Yet another case belonging with those disposed of by rule 2, but requiring special treatment because the ça in it does not stand "at the beginning of a pada." The passage is abhi vy açañsan (vi.6.11⁵).

O., in an added paragraph, brings forward the objection that, in virtue of rule i.52 (which makes the citation of any word include also the same word with a prefixed), açañsan has its ñ already assured by rule 2; but refutes it by pointing out that the principle appealed to has to do only with a pada or word, not with a mere fragment of one, like ça (compare rule 10, below). It adds that "another reading is çañsān."

न शसनं विशसनेन ॥ ७ ॥

7. But not in çasanam and viçasanena.

These are exceptions, the only ones the Sanhitā affords, under rule 2. The passages are çasanam vājy arvā (iv.6.7⁵: O. ends with vājī) and çuno viçasanena (v.7.23).

T. and O. have the simple pada çasanena, instead of viçasanena (p. vi-çasanena) in the rule, and O. reads the same in its comment. This is doubtless an emendation, and makes a reading more strictly in accordance with the approved usage of the treatise. The comment has (especially in the fourth chapter) explained away many a like inaccuracy by the allegation of a phrase "in another çākhā:" and we might expect to find added here vī 'ti kim: āçañsanene 'ti çākhāntare.

मा पदादिरनुदात्तः ॥ ८ ॥

8. Mā takes anusvāra when beginning a pada and unaccented.

All the implications of rule 2 are here cut off (as is distinctly enough intimated by the express repetition of one of them, padādi), and hence it is to be understood that the increment takes place before a s whether this be or be not followed by a vowel. The examples are āhar māñśēna (v.7.20) and māñśpācanyāh (iv.6.9¹). The restriction to the beginning of a pada is established by quoting āhar māñśpācanyāh (iv.6.7⁴); that as to the accent, by mā sam only O. has syāt.

So far as I have discovered, this rule applies only to forms and combinations of māñśa, which are not infrequent in the Sanhitā. The four following rules give it certain extensions and limitations.

9. As also when preceded by pu or mī, under all circumstances.

The closing specification of the rule amounts to a removal of the restriction as to accent, imposed in rule 8—that as to initial position being virtually removed by the prescribed prefixion of pu or mī. The examples quoted are ut pumāñśaṃ haranti (vi.5.10³; O. omits haranti, and B. runs the two citations together, having dropped out a part of each) and mīmāñśante kārye (vi.2.6⁴). We have pumāñśam again at iv.6.6⁵, and other forms of mīmāñś at vi.2.6⁴ and vii.5.7¹: I have noted no other words as falling under the rule.

10. And when followed by sakāya.

The ca, 'and,' we are told, here brings down mā; and G. M. add that the intent of the rule is to establish an exception under rule 8—that is to say, to bring under that rule a word which would otherwise be excluded in virtue of the requisition “when beginning a pada.” The case is similar to that about which O. raises a question under rule 6. The passage is amāṅśakāya svāhā (vii.5.12²).

नावग्रहपूर्वः ॥ ११ ॥

11. But not when preceded by a former member of a compound.

Or, ‘by a pause of division (between the two members of a compound),’ taking avagraha in its more original sense. W. B. O. define the rule as establishing exceptions under rule 8; G. M., which have taken in this notification (less correctly) as part of the preceding comment, say simply that mā is to be understood as implied here by vicinage. The examples given are pūrṇāmāse vāi (ii.5.5⁴: O. omits vāi) and ardhamāse devāḥ (ii.5.6⁶ twice). The words would satisfy all the conditions of rule 8, the separated element -māse or -māse being itself (by i.48) a pada. Since māṅśa nowhere appears as the latter member of a compound, this rule exempts from the increment of anusvāra all the cases in which forms of mās or māsa are found in such a situation; others are the subject of the next following precept.

12. Nor in māsi, māsu, māsah, or māsām.

These are words which, without special exception, would fall under rule 8. The examples for the last three are daśāsu masā ttiśthan (vii.5.2²), śān māśo dākshinena (vi.5.3⁴: only O. has the last word), and māsām prātiśthītyāi (vii.5.1⁶): we have māsah also at vii.5.7¹, and māsām at v.7.18. The first, māsi, raises a difficulty. Some, the commentator says, cite in illustration of it prathamē māsi prsthāni (vii.5.3¹: O. omits the last word); but this is wrong; for the exemption of māsi in that passage is assured by rule 17, below: we are to assume, then, the occurrence in another text of some word of more than two syllables beginning with māsi. This interpretation is, of course, forced and false: māsi is included with the rest here because it is an example of the same class with them; and the makers of the treatise, when they put it in, either overlooked or neglected the fact that it falls technically under rule 14, and so also under rule 17, establishing exceptions to 14. We have also masi-māsi, more than once, at vii.5.1⁶.

exposition given under rule 2 (see note on that rule) of the reason why hi was not there included: hi here is meant not as initial only, but wherever found in a word. Since, however, it is only in this one word that hi occurs otherwise than as initial, it would seem better to have disposed of the single case as of those which form the subject of rules 6 and 10, and to put hi into 2, where it would look much more at home than here at the head of a troop of perfect participles and comparatives. And why pu was not put into rule 2 without any ceremony, I cannot see at all; unless I have overlooked some case or cases of its occurrence, pu is invariably initial.

The commentator raises the question why rule xv.4 does not require us to insert an anusvāra before the ç of dāçvā, viviçivā, and çugruvā, since these too are srādayah; and he makes answer that it is because the restriction conveyed in xvi.1 is still in force. But in that case, he goes on to say, is there not a nasal increment before the s of hrasiyā, vasiyā, tasthivā, and sasrvā? The answer to this objection is twofold. First, the competency of the citation is pleaded—that is to say, the words being read in the rule itself without nasal, that is to be understood as their authoritative form (compare under rule 19, where this plea leads to a further discussion). Secondly, the words in question being found associated with ātāṁsīt, kuṇīyā, jyāyā, and so on, all of which show the anusvāra to follow a long vowel, we are to infer that in the others also it does not follow a short vowel. The first of these answers is not such as is wont to be pleaded in this treatise, and the second is evidently very weak: I should almost prefer to assume that the difficulty was not remarked by the authors of the treatise, and that the commentators who have discovered it have been forced to make the best excuse they could for it.

A more serious objection to the rule, it seems to me, is that it mixes together cases of two different classes—those in which (chaṁsine etc.) the nasal appears in the word itself as cited, and those in which it is to be added before a following s. Of this, however, the comment takes no notice.

14. The vowels ā, i, and ū have anusvāra, when they are followed by si or shi final.

This rule, of course, applies to the nominative, accusative, and vocative plural of neuters in as, is, and us. The illustrative examples are vayāñsi pakvagandhena (v.7.23), tamāñsi gūhatām ajushtā (i.8.22⁵: only O. has ajushtā), daṣa havīñshi (vii.5.14²), jyotīñshi kurute (v.4.1⁴: O. omits), agna āyūñshi (i.3.14⁷ et al.), and avabhrthayajāñshi juhōti (vi.6.3¹: G. M. omit juhōti). To show that the si or shi must be final, are quoted tasmād vāsishtho brahmā (iii.5.2¹: only G. M. have brahmā), and manīshino manasā (iv.6.2⁵: O. omits manasā). To show that the preceding vowel must be long, we have yathā 'nasi yukta ādhiyate (v.4.10²: only G. M. have the last word), jyotis tvā jyotishi (i.1.10³), and āyushi durone (i.2.14³); and, finally, to show that no other vowel than i after the s or sh calls out the increment, prajāsc eva prajātāsu (vi.4.1³), oshadhīshu (iii.5.5² et al.), and tanūshu buddham (i.8.22⁵).

The last six counter-examples are omitted in O., which adds at the end the obvious remark that, as si and shi are here indicated as occasions of the preceding anusvāra, that value no longer belongs to s merely—that is to say, the force of the heading given in rule 1 is henceforth at an end.

15. Even when the i is altered

That the i of the ending si or shi is here aimed at is in the nature of the case obvious enough, but not at all distinctly intimated by the terms of the rule. The commentator quotes in illustration chandāñsy upa dudhāti (v.3.8^{1,2}), havīñshy ā sūdayet (i.6.10³), and tapūñshy agne juhvā (i.2.14¹: G. M. omit juhvā).

16. According to Sāmkṛtya, the vowel, except ā, is short.

That is to say, the two vowels i and u, to which alone reference has been made above, become short in the cases here referred to: for example, in haviṅshi bhavanti (v.5.1⁷ et al.: O. omits bhavanti) and samiṣṭayajūṅshi juhoti (vi.6.2¹: G. M. O. omit juhoti), where Sāmkṛtya would read haviṅshi and yajuṅshi, while in vayāṅsi (v. 7.23 et al.: O. omits) he would admit the long vowel.

A curious case of dissent upon a point in grammar which we have not been accustomed to regard as open to any difference of opinion. The rule is, naturally enough, pronounced unapproved.

G. M. add ca to the rule, after sāmkṛtyasya.

17. Not, under any circumstances, in a dissyllabic word.

This is a rule prescribing exceptions under rule 14; the addition nityam, 'under any circumstances,' confirms its application to words ending in si or shi after ā, i, or u which would otherwise fall under any other rule prescribing the increment.

Examples under rule 14 alone are first quoted, namely stuto yāsi vaçāṅ anu (i.8.5¹: G. M. O. end with yāsi) and yāsi dātah (iii.5. 5³: G. M. have dropped out yāsi). Then, as a case also under rule 2, we have vidhatah pāsi nu tmanā (i.3.14¹); and, as one under rule 8, prathame māsi prsthāni (vii.5.3¹: G. M. omit the last word), which has been already made the subject of discussion under rule 12, above. The force of the nityam does not go so far as to prohibit an anusvāra in every dissyllabic word before si, what-

The passages in which they occur are quoted by the commentary, as follows: tena rjīshi sarvāni (iii.2.2¹: only O. has sarvāni), achā jigāsi (iv.2.4²), ā team ajāsi gurbhadham (vii.4.19¹), haviṣhā yajāsy agne brhat (iii.5.11² et al.: O. omits the last two words), yābhīr dadāsi dāgushe (iii.3.11³: G. To the objection that the citation in the rule of dāñsa simply might have saved the rehearsal of whole words [in a part of the cases given], the commentator replies by quoting kureto me mo 'pa dūsat (i.6.3³ et al.) as an example of cases which need to be excluded. The addition of paraḥ, 'in the latter place,' is because vrshadañgaḥ contains two places at which, by xv.4, the anusōdra would otherwise require to be inserted.

This last point, however, does not pass (except in O.) without farther question and discussion. The objection is raised that the mere citation of vrshadañca without anusōdra before the former sibilant is enough to settle its reading, according to the same principle that was appealed to under rule 13, for hrasiyā, vasiyā, and so on. This is undeniable; and the only real answer to be made is that there was no harm in adding para here, to make the matter sure, while it could not have been employed in rule 13 without occasioning a great deal of additional trouble. The commentator, however, prefers to have recourse to a plea of exceptionally puerile character. In xv.4 (the rule here in force), he says, the spirants in general are implied, but in xvi.1 (in force at rule 13) a special spirant, s; and it is an acknowledged principle that, as between a generality and a specification, the specification is the more powerful. That being the case, the putting down of that which is powerful, not of that which is weak, is honorific; hence, the competency of the citation was to be insisted on in the former rule, but not here, in a weak position. Moreover, a superior man puts down, for honor's sake, a mighty opponent, but never a weak one. Therefore, the use of the word para here is right and proper!

To the objection that it would have been enough to give mañs, yañs, and vañs (the MSS. leave it doubtful whether these are the precise forms suggested) in the rule, instead of citing whole words, the commentator replies by giving the counter-examples uttamasyâ 'va dyuti (vi.3.10⁴), yasya bhûyadñso yajñakratarah (iii.1.7³), and adya vasu vasuti (ii.5.3⁷).

24. The āi, according to Ukhyā, is excessive.

That is to say, according to the commentator, the āi of the word raṇhyāi, here brought forward by the ca, 'and,' which is read in the preceding rule. Nitānta, 'excessive,' is explained as signifying 'uttered with more violent effort.' The whole business is a very queer one—Ukhyā's opinion itself, its introduction here at a place where it is entirely impertinent, and the bit of interpretation whereby it is worked into the connection.

The syllable su is here, the commentator tells us, the ending of the locative case, just as oh (at i.23) is used as representing the nominative case. This remark is called for, because (see the example below) the actual form in which the syllable appears in the cases aimed at is shu. We have a right to be surprised at finding it given as su in the rule; and perhaps, also, to conjecture that saṃkhyāsu was originally simply the locative plural of saṃkhyā, and that the other value was interpreted into it when the cases calling for exception were noticed.

The quoted examples are viñcatyāi svāhū (vii.2.13 et al.: O. omits), yad viñcatir dve tena virājāu (v.3.3³: G. M. omit the last two words, O. the last three), catvāriṅgate svāhā (vii.2.17: G. M. O. omit svāhā; B. has dropped out -te svāhā, the next example, and the first word of the next but one), triṅgate svāhā (vii.2.17: O. omits svāhā), and triṅgat trayaḥ ca (i.4.11¹); there are other cases, which I have not taken the trouble to collect. The inclusion of tri in the rule, the commentator says, is for the sake of greater plainness, since ri, of course, involves tri also; it is to be compared with the inclusion of the v of vāghā in rule vii.13. Begging the commentator's pardon, however, the two cases are not at all analogous; and the citation of tri and ri together must be esteemed an oversight, and an offense against the law of economy of expression, obligatory in the sūtra-style. The need of restriction to numerals is illustrated by vicejanāya (ii.5.12³), sa rishah pātu naktam (i.2.14⁷ et al.: G. M. O. omit naktam), and trishṭubhāi 'vā 'smāi (ii.5.10¹ et al.). Finally, the specification "not before su" is established by trishv ā rocane divah (iv.2.4⁴ et al.: O. omits divah); if there is another case of this kind, I have failed to note it.

There is yet another word, trishāhasrah (v.6.8³; p. tri-sāhasrah), which would properly fall under this rule, but is exempted by a pregnant interpretation of the word ekapade in xv.4 (see the note to that rule).

The passages, as quoted, are sindhoḥ çiñcumāro himavataḥ (v. 5.11: only O. has the last word); kiṁ tata uc çhiñshati 'ti yad dhirañyeshatakāḥ (v.5.5²: only O. has the last two words, and it omits the first two); ubhayataḥsañçvāyi kuryād avadāyā 'bhi (ii. 6.8⁴: only O. has the last two words, and it leaves off ubhayataḥ); sañsrāvabhāgā stha (i.1.13²); sañsr̥ṣṭajit somapāḥ (iv.6.4¹: W. B. put this after the next following example; see farther on); garīram eva sañskṛtyā 'bhyārohati (v.6.6³⁻⁴: O. omits the first two words; and all but O. omit the last one, thus making a citation which is also found again in v.6.6⁴); tan naḥ sañskṛtam (i.4.43²); brahmasañçito hy eṣa ghṛtāharanaḥ (ii.5.9²: only O. has the last word); garanye brahmasañçitā (iv.6.4⁴); kiñçila vanya yā ta ishuh (v.5.9¹: all but G. The commentary prefaces the last two passages with the remark that the second citation of kiñçila is that of a part of a word, including a variety of cases. But this, in the first place, would imply that the reading of the rule at the end was kiñçilakiñçila, which is the case only in T.; and, in the second place, even were that the reading, the explanation would be a bad one, and the repeated kiñçila should be defined as a theme ending in a, and so including the declensional forms of that theme, by i.22: in fact, it was expressly cited under that rule, as an example of its application. If kiñçilā is the true reading (as I presume to be the case), then we must suppose that the makers of the rule intended both words as padāikadeca's, the one involving the first two examples quoted, the other the third, and the case being quite parallel with that of sañçita and sañçitā, just preceding: but the comment has discovered a difficulty, namely, that kiñçila is actually a padu in the text (v.5.9¹), and therefore cannot be quoted without ceremony as a padāikadeca (see under rule 29, where this is more distinctly brought out); and hence its efforts to amend the reading and interpretation—efforts in which it is too intent upon the end to be gained to be mindful of consistency in the means employed. In short, here as in many other places, the Prāticākhyā is less minutely accurate in its modes of statement than the commentator would fain have it, and he undertakes to make it what it should be by forced interpretation.

Cases of various character are here intermingled. The first two and the last are indivisible words, of which the anuvāra forms an essential part, as of those cited in rules 19 and 20, or 29 and 30. The others come from combinations with the preposition saṃ, and are of two classes: saṃskṛtya and saṃskṛta the pada-text does not attempt to analyze, although (see v.6,7) it divides saṃskurute and saṃskurevatu, ejecting the intrusive sibilant: those remaining are compounds with saṃ which enter into further composition, so that their compound character does not appear in the pada-text. And one or two cases of this last class seem to have been overlooked by the makers of the treatise: they are svādushaṇsadaḥ (iv.6.6³; p. svādu-saṇsadaḥ) and striṣaṇsādam (ii.5.1⁵; p. stri-saṇsādam). The former of them, indeed, is noticed in G. M., which introduces saṇsadaḥ into the rule, after saṃskṛta, and quote the compound in the comment—seeming to betray their consciousness that the word is not a part of the ordinary reading of the rule by saying “when saṇsadaḥ is read, the instance is svādushaṇsadaḥ.”

There are further varieties of reading in the rule: G. M. have ṣiṇshati; W. B. put saṇsrṣhta between saṃskṛtya and saṃskṛta, and give its example a corresponding place among the examples; T. B. G. M. read saṃskṛtaṇ, which is perhaps to be preferred; other differences are mere copyists' errors, and not worth reporting.

So far as I have discovered, saṃskṛtam (i.2.9) and saṇṣita (iv.6.4⁴ a second time) are the only words included in this rule which occur further in the Sanhitā.

The commentator raises the question whether we must not suppose that an anuvāra is also to be inserted before the spirant śh in saṇsrṣhta; but, without this time appealing to the “competency of the citation” to settle the reading, replies that, the word being associated here with others all of which have anuvāra only after the first vowel, we must assume the same to be the case with it also; all but O. adding that “there is no reason for inconsistency” in this respect.

compound añhomuc—one of the forms of which, as we shall see farther on, has to be made separate account of. For añhoh, añhog cid yā (i.4.22 and ii.1.11⁴): there is no other case. For añhomuk, añhomugbhyām dvikapālah (vii.5.22: O. omits drikapālah, and W. For atyañhāh, ṛtapāḥ cā 'tyañhāh (i.8.13²⁻³): the word is found again at iv.6.5⁵; it is more than a simple pada (p. ati-añhāh), and the ati is included in the citation, we are told, to prevent confusion of añhāh with ahāh in such phrases as śhaḍahā bhavanti (vii.5.1⁴; śhaḍ-ahāh). For añhasah, te no muñcatam añhasah (iv.7.15⁶: all except B. read muñcantv, which does not occur before añhasah): of this case of añhas I have noted about twenty instances. For añhasā, the only example is the one quoted, añhasā vā esha grhītaḥ (ii.4.2³: O. ends with vāi). The commentator next raises the question why whole padas should have been cited, when añha (as part of a word) would have been sufficient to assure the reading, and replies by quoting sa rasam aha rasantāya (vii.2.10¹: O. begins with aha), as an example of cases that required to be excluded. For añḥum, pari paṇyāmo 'ñḥum ā (vii.1.6²: O. omits ā): the form is found again in the same division. For añgubhiḥ, śubhbhir aṅgubhiḥ pavayati (vi.4.5⁷: O. omits pavayati; W. B. put this example off until after that for añḥu, which would be, to be sure, a more suitable place for it, if the same order were followed in the rule; but there all authorities agree: see further on). For añgubhurā, trayā 'ñgubhurā somam (vi.4.8²: G. M. O. omit somam): the word is found again at vi.4.8³. For añḥu, tenā 'ñḥumat (iii.2.2¹): and it is pointed out that, by rule i.53 (the comment blunderingly quotes i.52 instead), anañḥu kurrantaḥ (iii.2.2¹) is involved with añḥu (O. has lost, of this, all but the example anañḥu ku). M. omit bhagāya). For upāñṇu, upāñṇusarano yad upāñṇusaramam (vi.4.4¹: O. omits the first two words). The word upāñṇu, when not further compounded, is separated in pada-text into upa-añṇu, and so most of its forms come under the various citations of the cases of añṇu already illustrated (thus, it furnishes additional instances, not counted above, to añṇu, añṇuḥ, añṇum, and añṇoh, twenty in all); but in its compounds it makes, of course, a single pada of itself (thus, upāñṇu-saranah), and so has to be cited in the rule as such (we have other combinations, namely, with pātra, yāja, and antaryāma); and, moreover, we have one case, upāñṇāu, showing a form of añṇu which does not appear independently, and so furnishing the final citation, for which the example is tam upāñṇāu sam asthāpayan (vi.4.6¹): there is another in the same division.

The restriction ādih, 'after the first vowel,' is intended to guard against any one's imagining that the s of añṇusaḥ and so on is to be preceded by anusvāra.

What has thus been given represents the whole comment as found in O.; the other MSS. make two or three troublesome additions, to which it is necessary to return. The last of them regards the citation of añṇu and its inflectional forms (namely, those that contain añṇu as a part, or añṇubhiḥ, añṇuḥ, añṇum, añṇunā); and, if I understand it aright, it asserts that, if añṇu alone were cited, the other forms would not be included, because añṇu itself occurs as a pada (and would therefore have to be taken as such, and not as a part of a word, padāikadeṣa); and if it be proposed to cite it with each value, as was done with kiñṇila (in rule 26: see note to that rule), there remains the difficulty that, as a phonetic complex only, it would involve such cases as paṇum paṇupate te adyu (iii. 1.4¹: W. omits paṇum)—where, namely, we have the same elements in combination, only without the anusvāra. With regard to añṇu, a somewhat similar statement appears to be made: namely, that if añṇu simply were quoted, it would be understood as a pada (being such in añṇu-bhuvā), and hence añṇam would not be included. The comment, however, puts this forward as a reason for including the bhuvā of añgabhuva, which, according to the interpretation here offered, it would not be; and perhaps my comprehension of the argument is insufficient. I do not see any reason why, if the pada-text divides añga-bhuvā, the bhuvā should be given in the rule. Equally unexplainable to me is the special citation of añgubhiḥ, which, being divided in pada into añgu-bhiḥ, falls under añgu: we have also in the Sanhitā añgubhyām (i.4.2 and vi.4.5³), which is a case analogous with the other, and ought to be treated like it. Possibly we may infer from the unsuitable position of añgubhiḥ in the rule, and from the place of its example as given in W. B., next after that containing añgu-mat (as if it were, like the latter, a case of añgu), that it has been interpolated, by an awkward and blundering hand; but the conjecture is a more daring one than I venture seriously to make.

The first excursus of the comment is in connection with the second citation, añhuh. Since the sanhitā-form of this word, we are told, appears by the rule itself to be añho, the rule does not apply to ahah, which shows a different result of combination in ahar devānām (i.5.9²: G. M. read aharahar, which is not found in the Sanhitā before devānām), but only to a word the visarjanīya of which does not become r. This seems plausible enough; but what shall we say of the ahah which appears in sanhitā as aho in ahobhyām, ahobhiḥ, and ahorātre (p. ahah-rātre)? Either the makers of the treatise overlooked these words, or they did not attribute to the form añho in the rule the significance which is here claimed for it.

The remaining passage is more obscure to me than any of the others. In G. M., it is both preceded and followed by the examples for añhoḥ and añhomuk; in W. B., these examples precede it, excepting the last word of the second, which comes after it. I imagine that its true place is between the two, and that its intent is to turn against the rule the argument just pleaded respecting añhah, pointing out that, as añhoḥ becomes añhor in the rule, it ought not to exhibit anusvāra except when occurring in that phonetic form: the objection being then evaded by the plea that the form is given merely as it happens to occur, and not with any intent of prescription. But I have too little confidence in the correctness of this conjecture to be led to attempt amending the text into giving it consistent expression.

30. Also in añse, añśāya, añśābhyām, and añśāu, when accented on the first syllable.

The term avagraha is declared by the commentator to be equivalent here to ādi or padādi, 'beginning of the word.' This is, of course, wholly and entirely inadmissible, except as we are driven by the irresistible force of circumstances to give it that meaning or none. There has evidently been some blunder committed, but we can hardly venture to attempt its rectification. Not one of the words here cited occurs, or could occur, as avagraha, 'former member of a compound.' The restriction is made with reference to añśāu alone, in order to distinguish it from asāv. The examples are dukshīṇe 'ñsa upa dadhāti (v.3.1⁵: O omits dadhāti; W. has lost the whole), cityaṇśāya (vii.3.17: W. has lost city), añśabhyāñ srāhā (vii.3.16²), and uttare 'ñsār eva prati dadhāti (v.3.1⁵: O. reads tishthati for dadhāti, but doubtless by a copyist's error only); the counter-example is asāv abravīc citra-vihitā (ii.5.2⁵: O. omits the last word); añśābhyām alone is found more than once in the text (namely, again at v.7.13).

31. But not in asāv ā.

There is a single passage where the pronoun asāv, in the vocative case, stands at the beginning of a clause, and is, accordingly, accented on the first syllable; hence the necessity of the present rule, establishing an exception under its predecessor. The passage is brāyād āsāv é 'hī 'ty evām evā (ii.4.9³: O. alone has evā; G. M. omit also evām, and B. blunderingly reads instead of it atra).

The Prāticākhya's rehearsal of the cases of interior anuvāra is,

Whether its rules are so drawn as to involve no cases that require to be excluded, is a much more difficult question, and one which my examination of the text has not been close enough to enable me to determine; but I have noted no instances of inaccuracy, unless the possible confusion of aṅḥ and aḥ, pointed out under rule 29, is to be so considered.

CHAPTER XVII.

CONTENTS: 1-4, opinions of various authorities, as to the degree of nasality in different nasal letters; 5, as to increase of quantity in connection with anusvāra; 6, as to increased effort required by certain accents; 7-8, as to other more general matters of utterance.

तीव्रतरमानुनासिक्यमनुस्वारोत्तमेधिति शैत्यायनः ॥ १ ॥

1. Çāityāyana says that the nasal quality is stronger in anusvāra and the nasal mutes.

We have here a chapter entirely composed of the cited opinions of certain specified authorities, and none of them of any definite value or importance in themselves, though interesting as affording us a glimpse of subjects to which the attention of the old Hindu phonetists was drawn, and to their hair-splitting and discordant speculations respecting them.

The commentator's exposition adds nothing to our comprehension of the rule. It quotes the rule at the end of the second chapter (ii.52) as to the cause of nasal quality, and tries (without good reason) to connect with it the present one. Examples of the stronger nasal utterance are given, as follows: agnīṁr apsushadaḥ

(v.6.1²), yam kāmam kāmāyate (vii.1.1²: G. M. O. substitute yam kāmāyeta, i.6.10⁴ et al.), rañcate purīvañcate (iv.5.3¹), and maninā rūpāni 'ndrena (vii.3.14); but O. introduces after the first tāñs te dadhāni (iv.1.10³) and martyāñ āvireṣa (v.7.9¹), and substitutes for the last two prāñ prā 'dravat (v.7.10¹). Counter-examples, of the weaker utterance, are ruknam upa dadhāti (v.2.7²; but W. substitutes, by an evident blunder, kūrmam upadadhāti, v.2.8⁵), tigmam āyudham (iv.7.15⁴), and suḥlokāñs suman-galāñs (i.8.16²); O. giving instead of the last sa imam lokam (i.5.9⁴), and spoiling the whole illustration by adding, "in these likewise it is stronger." The first two counter-examples are evidently given for the yama which, by xxi.12, is to be inserted between the mute and nasal in each: the last is a case falling under xv.8, which prescribes nasalization of a protracted final a. The other nasal sounds are the nāsikya (xxi.14), and the nasal semivowels into which m and n are to be converted (v.26,28) before l, y, and r: these last are instanced by the phrase quoted in O. alone.

The manuscript O. follows an independent course in the exposition of this rule, as of the rest composing the chapter.

2. Kāuhalīputra says that it is the same everywhere.

The comment interprets samam, 'same,' as signifying here tīr-rataram, which it had explained above as an absolute rather than a relative comparative—"very excessive," rather than 'more excessive.' That does not seem likely to be the real meaning. As examples, are cited, rather needlessly, sañrārāñāḥ (iv.6.1¹ et al.), sañhyattāḥ (i.5.1¹ et al.), nyāññ agniḥ cetavyaḥ (v.5.3²: only O. has cetavyaḥ), and upahātāñs ho (ii.6.7²). O. gives an entirely different, though equivalent, exposition, and only the last two of these examples, with two others, namely sarvāñ agniñr apsusha-duh (v.6.1²) and imāñ lokāñ (ii.1.3¹).

The name of the authority quoted is given by G. M. as Kāuhalīyaputra, and by O. as Kohalīputra, in both the text and commentary.

The term anu, 'faint,' is explained by sūkshmatamam (or, in G. M. O., sūkshmataram), 'exceedingly gentle.' In other nasals than anusvāra, we are told, Bhāradvāja accepts Čaittyāyana's rule, that the nasal quality is extra-strong in the nasal mutes, and simply strong in the yānus etc. Most of the MSS. quote only tanurā jaya toaṇ satvā (iv.6.6¹: B. has dropped out all but the beginning, nanu, and O. has lost tanurā ja from the beginning); but O. adds counter-examples, brahmanvanto devā āsan (vi.4.10¹), rukman upa dadhāti (v.2.7²), and tat samyatāṇ samyatram (v.2.10⁶).

4. Old Kāuṇḍinya says that when n is converted into r, or into a spirant, or into y (with loss of the y), or when m is lost, it is stronger in each case successively.

The alterations of an original nasal mute are here rehearsed in the same order, and in the same terms, as in a previous rule (xv 1). The comment gives an example for each case: namely triṇr ekāda-ṣāṇ iha (iii.2.11³: G. M. have lost iha, along with all that follows, to the last example; O. substitutes triṇr uta dyān, ii.1.11⁵), guk-lāṅṣ ca kṛshnāṅṣ ca (ii.3.1³: O. substitutes ṛtāṅṣ tanvate, iv.3.11³), mahāṇ indrah (i.4.20 et al.: O. substitutes srarāṇ indro asme, i.7.13⁵), and saṅgūtam (iv.1.10³ et al.: O. substitutes vihuv-yaṇ ṣasyam, vii.5.5²). व्यञ्जनकालश्च स्वरस्यात्राधिकः ॥ ५ ॥

5. And to the vowel is added, in this case, the time of a consonant.

The "and" (ca) in the rule is declared to continue the implication of Old Kāuṇḍinya's opinion: according to this authority, here, in the prescription of anuvāra, the time of a consonant, half a morā (i.37), is to be added to the vowel that is accompanied by anuvāra; an example is yuñjāthāñ rāsabham yuram (iv.1.2¹ et al.). And "in this case" (atra, literally 'here') is added in the rule because the prescription of increased quantity is not of force in the cases detailed in the sixteenth chapter, in nasal mutes, nor where n or m is converted into l (v.25,26,28).

O. states the same thing in other language, giving two additional examples, ṣatrāñr anapavyayantañ (iv.6.6³) and añhomuce (i.6.12³ et al.)—of which the latter, being one of those established in the sixteenth chapter (xvi.29), ought to be a counter-example—and remarking further that in the opinion of other teachers the anuvāra merely was added to the vowel. Anuvāra, namely, was declared by i.34 to have the quantity of a short vowel; and we should be grateful if the commentator had pointed out in what relation this rule really stands to that; if, indeed, there is any connection between them, and if this does not belong properly to a doctrine that regards the anuvāra as an affection of the vowel merely; causing the latter's prolongation, to be sure, but not adding an element with independent quantity to it. O. appends the further restriction that the vowel undergoing prolongation is to be a simple one (not a diphthong). And it mentions another interpretation, as put forward by some authorities: that atra signifies wherever anuvāra is prescribed: and that where there is anuvāra, there the quantity of the vowel is to be short in every case.

The Rik (xiii.13) and Vājasaneyi (iv.147-8) Prātiśākhya also concern themselves with the respective length of a vowel and of anusvāra as constituents of a syllable, but their rules stand in no definable relation to the one here given.

6. Pāushkarasādi says the utterance of svāra and vikrama is attended with firmer effort.

Most of the manuscripts supply in the comment prayoga, 'use, application,' as the subject involved in this rule; O. supplies simply carṇa, 'alphabetic sound.' Svāra, we are told, means svarita, 'circumflex;'¹ O. signifying the same thing by pointing out that the svāras are enumerated in the twentieth chapter (xx.1-8). Vikrama is a particular kind of anudatta, 'grave;'² or, O. says, is explained in the nineteenth chapter (xix.1,2). As examples are given yō 'sya srō 'gnīs tām āpi (v.7.9¹: G. M. O. omit the last two words) and āsye harīḥ priyām (iii.3.11¹), for the latter of which O. substitutes ṣikyām abhy ūpa dadhāti (v.2.4³): we have here two kinds of svāra or svarita, namely abhinihata (xx.4) and nitya (xx.2), and one or more cases of vikrama (the grave syllable standing directly between two that are either acute or circumflex) in each example. A counter-example is gām vārā tāu tāt pāry avadātām (i.7.2²: only O. has the last two words), which contains (except in O.'s addition) neither svāra nor vikrama.

प्रयत्नविशेषात्सर्ववर्णानामिति शैत्यायनः ॥ ७ ॥

7. Čaityāyana says, of all the letters, according to their difference of effort.

The comment (except in O.) supplies the same subject as in the preceding rule, namely prayoga; and also continues the predicate of that rule, dr̥ḍhaprayatnataraḥ. The latter we can hardly approve, since to assert a specially firm effort of all alphabetic sounds without exception is little better than nonsense. Čaityāyana may rather be credited with meaning that each constituent of the alphabet has its own proper (svocita) degree of articulative effort—which is more true than edifying.

6. svāre vikrame ca prayogaḥ pāushkarasāder mate¹ dr̥ḍhaprayatnataro bhavati. svārah svarita ity arthah: vikramo nāmā 'nudāttaviṣeṣah. yathā²: yo----- āsye----- svāravikramayor iti kin: gām----- dr̥ḍhaḥ³ prayatno 'asyā⁴ 'sōu⁴ dr̥ḍhaprayatnaḥ: atīṣayeno dr̥ḍhaprayatno dr̥ḍhaprayatnataraḥ.

As example, is cited the first phrase of the Sanhitā, ishe tvo 'rje tvā (i.1.1: only O. has the last two words).

The manuscripts of the commentary leave us quite in a quandary as to the value of these seven rules, W. B. calling them approved, but G. M. O. unapproved.

8. Âtreya says, one must utter the sounds not over-distinctly and not indistinctly; taking, as it were, a vessel filled with drink, steady, according to the sense.

The commentator gives only a simple paraphrase of this verse, and casts no real light upon its meaning, even as regards the naïve and not very instructive comparison in the second line.

ओकारं तु प्रणव एके ऽर्धतृतीयमात्रं ब्रुवते ॥१॥

1. As pranava, some utter o with two and a half moras.

In the text of this rule, T. reads oñkāram, and B. omkāram; in the comment, at the beginning, W. B. have omkāram. Doubtless the unnasalized form is the true reading; that oñ or om should be uttered with more than the quantity of a long syllable would not be worth the trouble of specifying, in view of rules i.34 and xvii.5, which would require either three or two and a half moras for the combination. Whether we are to infer that this holy exclamation was not yet uttered with a nasal ending at the time when the Prātiśākhya was made, is a more doubtful question; the whole matter lies, at any rate, outside the proper province of a Prātiśākhya. By way of examples, the comment appears to intend to quote the first and last words of the Sanhitā and of the Brahmana: namely om ishe tvā (i.1.1), śamudro bandhuh om (vii.5.25²? see below: B. omits the om), om brahma śamdhattam (Tāitt. Brāh. i.1.1), and ye-bhyaḥ cāi 'nat prāhuḥ om (B. omits the om: the Calcutta edition of the Tāittirīya-Brahmana being incomplete, I can only presume that these are the concluding words of that treatise). The manuscripts G. M. O. put these extracts in a different order, giving the two conclusions first, and then the two beginnings; G. M. add om at the end of each, while O. gives no om at all. G. M. further append two more citations, bhadrām kurnebhiḥ : om, and cāi 'va tapati : om, of which the former is the beginning, and the latter, I presume, the end, of the Tāittirīya-Āraṇyaka. With regard to the phrase śamudro bandhuh, it is to be observed that the Sanhitā as found in my manuscript (or rather, manuscripts, for mine contains the last leaf of another and entirely independent one, which has the same reading), and in those to which Prof. Weber has access, ends with śamudrah simply; but another word like this is evidently wanting to complete the sense (the concluding sentence is śamudro vā aśvasya yonih śamudrah), and is not less needed to make up the tale of words as enumerated in the ending, which counts "twelve" after avahat, while without bandhuh there are only eleven. This is a very strange fact, and calls for a wider examination of Tāittirīya manuscripts, to see if any of them have saved the lost final word.

Then is quoted a verse "from the Kālanirnaya," to the effect that "the quantity of two and a half moras belongs to the praṇava and to a vowel forming the beginning or end (?) of a passage that one reads in the Veda, also at the end of a chapter or section." The Kālanirnaya quoted here and below must, of course, be a very different work from that of Mādhava bearing the same title (Weber's Catalogue of the Berlin Sanskrit MSS., No. 1166).

In explanation of the word tu in the rule, another half-verse, from which I extract no suitable meaning, is quoted from the Kālanirnaya, and the authority of Pāṇini is further appealed to to prove that among the diphthongs there is no short quantity: hence for simple o long quantity is determined: here, "however" (tu), when the diphthong stands in praṇava, that quantity is negatived; and (quoting, apparently, another half-verse) for the praṇava, as occurring in the Veda, is prescribed long quantity along with [the quantity of?] a m. That is to say, the tu intimates a denial of the ordinary quantity of the diphthong o. And the remark is finally added that a difference of quantity is to be recognized in the different praṇavas.

The comment simply paraphrases the rule, adding nothing in its explanation—not even telling us in what relation it stands to rule 7, and whether Çāityāyana would let us give the word, in any given case of its use, whatever accent we chose, or would have us governed by reasons in our choice between the three accents.

3. According to Kāuṇḍinya, it is a sustained pracaya.

I have ventured to translate the word dhṛta in dhṛtapracaya by 'sustained,' but without feeling sure that it might not have been better to follow the lead of the commentator, who treats dhṛtapracaya as equivalent to simple pracaya. He brings up, it is true, the objection that in xix.2 the use of the term pracaya itself is attributed to this same Kāuṇḍinya, and that hence it should have been used here; but replies "not so; by this pair of words, even, an appellation is given: thus, namely: on the principle that even where there is no difference of meaning there may be a difference of application, the teacher exhibits a nicety of application: other examples of the principle are the names [of the second Pāṇḍava] Bhīmasena and Bhīma, [of one of Īiva's wives] Bhāmā [G. M. say Satyā] and Satyabhāmā, pidhāna and apidhāna, dīpa and pradīpa." The pracaya is defined as the fourth accent; and O. adds that it is to be explained in the twenty-first chapter (namely, at xxi.10,11): it is there said to be of the same tone as udātta, 'acute;' so that, unless dhṛta is to be regarded as signifying a modification, one does not see in what respect Kāuṇḍinya's opinion differs from that of Vālmiki, given in rule 6 of this chapter.

4. That application of the voice is with middle tone.

The meaning of this precept is very obscure, and the commentator's exposition does not give the impression that he comprehended it. According to him, the sa, 'that,' points us back to the utterance as prescribed by Kāuṇḍinya in the preceding rule: in whatever pitch of voice the application is made, the pranava is to be used with medial effort, or with one that takes into account the

5. According to Plākshi and Plākshāyaṇa, it is circumflexed.

This rule is, along with its three predecessors, pronounced by the commentator unapproved.

उदात्तो वाल्मीकिः ॥ ६ ॥

6. According to Vālmiki, it is acute.

This is the only rule in the chapter, except the first, which the commentator allows to stand as approved. In his school, then, the vowel part of the sacred exclamation is to be two and a half moras long, and of acute tone. This agrees with the teaching of the Vāj. (ii.51) and Rik (xv.3) Prāticākhyas, save that these give (what is really equivalent to the same thing) three moras to the whole word om; and the Rik Pr. mentions other opinions both as to its quantity and its accent.

7. All allow that it may also be according to the application.

The commentator first quotes an absurd opinion of Māhisheya's, to the effect that yathāprayogaḥ, 'according to the application,' here means udātta, 'acute;' but then goes on to set forth, as given by Vararuci, what appears to be the real meaning of the rule: namely, that with whatever tone the passage to be read [i. e. its beginning] is used, that tone is to be given also to the introductory exclamation. Thus, before ishé tvā (i.1.1 et al.), which begins with lowing circumflex.' He adds examples of a vikrama syllable in each of the four defined positions: namely yò 'sya svò 'gnís tám ápi (v.7.9¹: G. M. O. omit the last two words), vòdharé (i.6.2¹ et al.), dhānvanā gā'h (iv.6.6¹), and tāsya kvà svārgò lokāh (ii.6.5²: O. omits the last word, G. M. the last two). In the third example, the circumflex by which the vikrama syllable is preceded is the enclitic; this shows us (what we should have inferred without it) that, as regards the application of the present precept, no distinction is made between the independent and the enclitic circumflex. As an example of the use of the term, and showing the necessity of its definition here, is quoted rule xvii.6, where we are told that Pāushkarasādi asserts the utterance of svāra ('circumflex') and vikrama with a firmer effort. The word occurs elsewhere only at xxiii.20 and xxiv.5, where we have no assurance that it signifies the same thing as here. It is found, among the other Prāticākhyas, in that to the Rīg-Veda only, and has there no such meaning.

The rule is declared unapproved—rather hard treatment for one which professes to lay down a principle accepted by all authorities.

The vikrama is marked by the usual sign of low tone, the horizontal stroke beneath. The following rule, as we shall see, extends its definition so as to include nearly all the syllables so marked.

The construction of sa in the rule, as agreeing in gender with vikramah, though referring to nīcam (aksharam), was alluded to above, under v.2.

2. As also, according to Kāuṇḍīnya, when a pracaya precedes.

The pracaya (see xxi.10,11) is the series of unaccented syllables following a circumflex (enclitic or independent) in connected discourse, and uttered, save the one next preceding another following circumflex or an acute, in the tone of acute. This last one of the series, which retains its grave tone, is here declared to be, on Kāundinya's authority, likewise entitled to the appellation vikrama. This makes the term apply to all syllables in the saṃhitā that are marked by the horizontal stroke below, excepting those which, after a pause, precede the first accented syllable. The commentator cites two examples: pāry avadātām yā yujñé divyáte (i.7.2²: lost in W.; only O. has the last two words) and upárishtāllakshma yājyā (ii.6.2³⁻⁴ et al.), in the first of which the pracaya is followed by an acute, in the second by a circumflex.

It is to be observed that the vikrama appears, so far as this treatise is concerned, to be a mere name; no peculiarity of tone is claimed to belong to it: the other treatises offer nothing analogous.

As nothing is said of the non-approval of the rule, we may regard it as accepted in the school represented by the commentator.

द्वियम एके द्वियमपरे ता अणुमात्राः ॥३॥

3. According to some, in a circumflex syllable that is followed by a circumflex, quarter-moras are so.

I have rendered this rule according to my own persuasion of its true meaning, and not at all in conformity with the interpretation of the commentator, who says "yama [W. alone says dviyama] is a synonym of svarita; where there are two such yamas, without intervention of anything, that is a dviyama; what is followed by such a dviyama, that is dviyamapara: in the former, and also in the latter, where there is a third yama [so in G. M., which is the best reading: the others perhaps mean triyama], whatever circumflexed materials there are, all those are depressed at the end to the extent of a quarter-mora: so some think. An example of a dviyama is tē 'nyō 'nyāsmāi (ii.2.11⁵: but B. G. M. have instead tē 'nyō 'nyām, vi.1.5¹); of a dviyamapara, sō 'pō 'bhy āmriyāta (vi.1.1⁷; 4.2³). Whence do we derive the implication 'at the end?' from the precept 'and likewise, at the end of a word are kumpas, quarter-moras depressed at the end.' And the implication of depression comes by vicinage from rule 1, above, where a syllable of low tone between two that are circumflexed is spoken of. This seems to me entirely inadmissible. In yama as a synonym of svārīta, and meaning 'circumflex,' I cannot in the least believe; and the designation of a case of three successive circumflexes as dvīyamapara would be excessively awkward, even without the omission of the ca, 'and,' which would be needed to connect it, in that signification, with dvīyana. On the other hand, dvīyama, 'of double pitch,' is an entirely natural and acceptable synonym for svārīta, 'circumflex,' the essential characteristic of which is that it combines the high and the low tone within the limits of the same syllable; and "a circumflex followed by a circumflex" includes every possible case. The limitation "at the end" is properly enough left to be understood from the nature of the case; but that the predicate "depressed," the most important part of the precept, should remain to be inferred by vicinage only, and from the subject, not the predicate, of the two preceding rules, is not to be tolerated. And I have no doubt that the tūh in the rule is the predicate, and represents vikrama, its gender and number being adapted to those of anumātrāh by the grammatical figure anyonyānvaya, to which the commentator (see under ii.7, v.2) has several times appealed in other like cases. There remains, as the only difficulty, the plural number of both words: we should certainly expect rather sā 'numātrā; but even if we have to let this pass unexplained, it is vastly more easy to get along with than the difficulties which beset the other interpretation. One hardly dares presume to suggest that the present reading is the result of an alteration, made after the meaning given in the comment was ascribed to the rule.

The commentator goes on to quote a verse from the Çikshā, to the effect that the four kinds of independent circumflex (see xx.1, 2,4,5) suffer kampa when they precede either an acute or a circumflex. This verse is (save that it gives the Tāittirīya instead of the Rik names to the accents) the same with that which is interpolated in the Rik Pr., at the end of the third chapter (iii.19). He adds further, in another half-verse, doubtless from the same authority, that "of the remainder, there may either be the quality of acute or of circumflex, respectively;" and explains this "respectively" as implying that there are two kinds of kampa: in the Sanhitâ, that before a circumflex; in other parts of the Veda, that before an acute; and concludes the exposition with pointing out (if I understand him) that this is a definition applying to those cases of kampa which are otherwise established; but that it is not a precept requiring kampa, since this would otherwise have to appear in such passages as yô 'pâ'm pûshpañ vêda (only G. M. have vedu: the passage is not to be found in the Sanhitâ, and possibly is intended to be quoted from one of those "other parts of the Veda," referred to above). Finally, he remarks that the rule is unapproved.

The term kampa is not found anywhere in the text of our Prâtiçākhyā, or of that of the Rig-Veda, although the commentary to the latter (under iii.3.4), like our own, employs it to signify the peculiar modification undergone by the circumflex, when immediately followed by a high tone. The Atharva-Prâtiçākhyā (iii.65) gives to the same modification the kindred name of vikampita. It is signified, in the Rik and Atharvan texts (as is fully explained and illustrated in the note to Ath. Pr. iii.65), by appending to the vowel of the circumflex syllable a figure, either 1 or 3, and applying to the figure the signs of both circumflex and grave accentuation. The theory of this mode of designation is obscure, and no account of it is given in any Prâtiçākhyā, nor, so far as I am aware, in any other Hindu authority that has yet come to light. We should imagine the figure to be a mere point d'appui for an added sign of grave tone, but that there appears in a part of the Vedic texts an accompanying prolongation of the vikampita vowel (if the vowel be short), of which the figure, therefore, appears to be the sign: of this prolongation the Prâtiçākhyās give no hint.

This accent wears a quite peculiar aspect in the Tâittirīya text, as compared with those to which reference has been made. In the first place, being limited to the case of a circumflex before a circumflex, it is relatively of rare occurrence, there being fewer examples of it in the whole Tâittirīya-Sanhitâ than in the first book alone of the Atharvan (it occurs in the former, if I have overlooked nothing, only at ii.1.6⁵; 2.11⁵: v.4.3³: vi.1.17, 5¹, 11^{2.5}; 2.21²; 3.2⁵, 4²; 4.2³, 9², 10¹; 6.8¹: and in the ending to v.2.1). Secondly, it is always intimated by an appended figure 1, with simply the mark of anuddatta tone, or of vikrama, written beneath, while the circumflex vowel retains the mark of circumflex accent*—and this is clearly the method most easily defensible on theoretic grounds: and the MSS of the comment all add the figure 1, although, as everywhere else, they omit the accent signs. In the two cases that occur in the part of the Calcutta edition thus far printed, it seems to be by mere unintelligent blundering that the above method is departed from, a 3 being added in the one (ii.1.6⁵), without any sign of vikrama beneath it, and no designation being attempted in the other (ii.2.11⁵).

* That is to say, this is uniformly the case in my manuscript, which, for example, writes the commentator's quoted instances as follows:

सो॑ पा॒ म॒म्रिय॑त

the figure represents the quantity that is added to the syllable to make room for the vikrama tone at the end, and it gets, therefore, the vikrama sign. Thirdly, in the only two passages (vi.3.4²; 6.8¹) in which the vowel of the circumflexed syllable is short, it is made long.

What the commentator means by declaring the rule of no force, it is not easy to say. It can hardly be that his school acknowledged no kampu at all; and we should have expected him rather to interpret into his text the usage which he and his fellow-gākhināḥ accepted as proper—as he has done in so many other cases. There appears to be no discordance between the teachings of the Prāticākhya in this chapter and the practice in the known Tāittirīya text (but see the note on the next rule); the former, to be sure, do not fully explain the latter; but this is the case also with the other Vedas.

The denial of kampa in a circumflex syllable before an acute constitutes the most important and conspicuous peculiarity in the Tāittirīya system of accentuation as compared with that of the Rik and Atharvan, and also puts the former at a disadvantage in respect to clearness. Its effect is to deprive us of any constant means of distinguishing whether the syllable following a circumflex is an acute, or a grave with pracaya tone (xxi.10); and whether that distinction shall be shown at all depends upon mere accident. For example, sò 'smā't and sò 'smāt would be accented before a pause precisely alike; and so with any number of acutes or graves following a circumflex before a pause: e. g. sò 'smād abhavat and *sò 'smā'd yó cā'i tát. And even if, instead of a pause, other syllables follow, there must be at least two grave syllables in succession to bring out the true condition of things: we see that the syllable after the circumflex is acute in hy èshā prthi-vyā'h, but not in hy ètād devā'h, and the saṁhitā does not tell us whether in sò 'smād etarhi the asmāt is accented or toneless.† And so often does this ambiguity arise, that in the first chapter of the third book there are not less than twenty cases of pracayas, all whose syllables except the last admit of being understood as true acutes.‡ Other possible cases of ambiguity, of less frequency and importance, I pass without notice.

This same peculiarity belongs also to the existing Tāittirīya-Brāhmaṇa and Āraṇyaka, so that the commentator's allusion to "other parts of the Veda" as differing from the Sanhitā in respect to kampu is of doubtful meaning.

4. In that very material.

The commentator's interpretation of this rule is just as violent and unsatisfactory as is that which he gave of its predecessor, and with which he forces it into strange connection. He says, "in a dviyama passage there is depression to the extent of a quarter-mora only in that—namely, the former—circumflex material; but, in a passage where a dviyama follows, there is depression to the extent of a quarter-mora of the two former materials; but they do not all share in the quarter-mora effect: that is what the eva means. And Kāuhaleya says thus: 'of two, the former is anumātrika; of three, the two former are anumātrika; beyond that, the natural condition holds.'"

I think we can have no hesitation whatever as to rejecting this: if the treatise had been intending to say what is here claimed, it would have said it in a very different manner. What is really meant, may be much more doubtful; but I imagine that we are directed to find our quarter-mora of vikrama in the very substance of the circumflex syllable itself; that is to say, not in any protraction of it; and so, that that treatment of the case which is signified by the insertion of a figure after the circumflex vowel is rejected. This, if established, would make the doctrine of the authorities (eke, rule 3) here reported in fact discordant with the practice followed in the recorded text.

5. Not in the former teaching.

A rule of very obscure import, and respecting which the commentator has only his guesses to give us. He ventures two: first, that pūrvāśāstra signifies the rule respecting vikrama, and that in it this affection of the quarter-mora finds no place; second, that pūrvāśāstra means the first rule of the chapter (which amounts, so far, to the same thing with the other), and that the name of vikrama, there given, does not apply here in the rule for kampa, since, by xvii.6, vikrama is uttered with a firmer effort of the organs, while that is not the case with kampa. There is nothing in either of these proposals to commend it to our acceptance. If we were ourselves to guess, we should perhaps say that the reference was to rule 4 only, which teaches kampa without any protraction, and that this was confessed to be a doctrine not before authoritatively taught. But we should not presume to put the conjecture forward with any confidence.

1. When i, ī, and u are converted into y or v, the accent is kshāipra, if they were acute.

The conversion of i, ī, and u into y or v is by rule x.15; ū does not fall under such a rule on account of its being always pragraha (iv.5). Rule x.16 prescribes the conditions under which a circumflex accent is the result of such a conversion; and the addition of udāttayoh to the present rule is wholly unnecessary—a case to exercise the ingenuity of the commentator in defending the treatise from the charge of pāmaruktya: but either it escapes his notice, or he declines to touch it, as beyond his powers. Of course, if it be necessary to explain here that the altered vowel is acute, it needs to be added that the following vowel is grave.

The examples are vy èvā'i 'nena (v.3.11³) and krāhī' sv āsmā'n (iv.7.15⁷); counter-examples, where the altered vowel was not acute, are vāsvy asi (i.2.5¹ et al.) and ānv enam mātā', which is not, I believe, to be found in the Sanhitā; the nearest thing to it is ānv enam viprāh (iv.6.8³); ānu tvā mātā' occurs several times (i.3.10¹ et al.).

All the Prātiçākhyas agree in calling this particular kind of circumflex by the name kshāipra (see note to Ath. Pr. iii.58).

2. But where a syllable containing a y or v is circumflexed in a fixed word, being preceded by a grave syllable, or not preceded by anything, that is to be known as nitya.

This definition of the original circumflex accent, which belongs to the word in which it occurs, and does not merely arise as a consequence of the combination of words into phrases (although ultimately of the same nature with the kshāipra, just described), is a long and awkward one, but fairly attains its purpose: only we do not see why the reading is not anudāttupārram apārram vā, qualifying aksharam formally, as it does logically. A syllable that has the circumflex in pada-text (to which sthite pade is explained as equivalent), otherwise than enclitically after an acute, is an original (nitya, 'constant, invariable') circumflex. The other Prātiçākhyas (see note to Ath. Pr. iii.57) call it jātya, 'natural.'

The commentator defines aksharam, 'syllable,' in the rule as meaning svarah, 'vowel;' and, in fact, the use of aksharam here is somewhat at variance with the general custom of the treatise, which elsewhere talks of the vowel, not the syllable, as having tone (compare i.43, xiv.29). He inserts sarvatra, 'everywhere,' in his paraphrase, and then explains it, as if it were a part of the rule, to signify that the accent holds in saṁhitā, pada, and ajāta text. His examples are vāyuryām (i.8.7¹ et al.), kanyē 'va tunnā' (iii.1.11⁸: O. omits tunnā), tāto bilvāh (ii.1.8²), nyāñcam cinuyāt (v.5.3²: W. Counter-examples are given in O. only: namely, of a circumflex not found in padā-text, vy èr'd'i 'nena (v.3.11³: the MS. has veyāi), drvannah sarpāh (iv.1.9²; p. drū-annah); of one which has an acute before it, mārtiyāñ āvivēga (v.7.9¹) and sārvāñ agnī'n (v.6.1²). We have also one of the common attempts to give a profound significance to the word tu, 'but,' in the rule; and, as usual, it is abortive, involving difficulties which the commentator only pretends to get rid of. He says the tu signifies that, so far as the nitya circumflex etc. (i. e. and the other varieties of the independent circumflex) are concerned, the exception laid down in rule xiv.31—namely, that the circumflex character is not retained before a following acute or circumflex—has no force. But it is objected, with entire reason, that rule xiv.31 has nothing to do with the nitya at all, but only with the enclitic accent prescribed in rule xiv.29. His reply is, that in the condition of complete separation of sounds, there is, after all, a grave element preceded by an acute, as required in rule xiv.29, the combination of the two, by i.40, giving the circumflex character. Whether this implies his recognition of the fact that the semivowel in every nitya syllable really represents an acute vowel, pronounced as such in an earlier stage of the language—kvā being equivalent to kūa, and kanyā to kanā—admits of question. He expounds anudāttapurve as a descriptive instead of a possessive compound, and apārve as a substantive of the same character, as if the construction were 'there being a preceding grave, or there being no preceding accent;' it is doubtless better to supply in idea tasmīn akshare, and to render 'when that syllable is' etc. The remaining bit of exposition is much corrupted in its readings, and the drift of it is not clear to me. O. brings it in very differently from the rest, and makes it involve an additional example, yājyā'i 'vā'i 'nam (ii.3.5³; p. yājyā' : d' : evā : enam).

3. If, moreover, there is an acute standing in another word, then, if there be a circumflex resulting from a rule of combination, it is prātihata.

The phraseology of this rule is very peculiar indeed, and its peculiarity hard to account for. The Rik and Atharva Prātiçākhyas distinguish only two kinds of enclitic circumflex: the pādu-vṛtta, in which a hiatus intervenes between the acute and its successor, and the tāiroryañjana, in which the two are separated by consonants. According to the explanation, now, of our commentator, the present treatise sets off from the latter, as a separate class, a circumflexed syllable at the beginning of a word, following an acute at the end of the preceding word. He gives us four examples (of which, however, W. B. omit the first two, and O. the last two): mā te asyā'm (i.6.12⁵), yās tvā hrādī kīrīnā (i.4.46¹: only O. has kīrīnā), ishē tvā (i.1.1 et al.), and tām te dūçcākshāḥ (iii.2.10²): the second word in each has the prātihata circumflex. As counter-examples, we have yān uyāñcam (v.5.3²: W. gives instead yān nāvam [ii.3.10¹ et al.], but it does not illustrate the point arrived at, and so is doubtless a corruption of the other), to show that the following circumflex must be a result of a rule of combination, and tāyā devātayā (iv.2.9² et al.: O. substitutes tasmād varupam, which is corrupt; I have overlooked it in searching out the references, and do not know how, if it in fact represents a real citation, it ought to be amended), to show that the acute must stand in another word.

In working out this meaning for the rule, the commentator declares api, 'moreover,' to have the office merely of bringing down from the preceding rule the quality of going before (pūrvatra); atha, 'then,' according to him, either cuts off the continued implication of nitya (that is to say, means nothing at all), or else gives the value of a heading to "the being preceded by an acute standing in another word"—which is wholly to be rejected; in the first place because unnecessary (tasmāt in the next rule having just that purpose), and in the second place because the word could at any rate make a heading only of what followed it in the rule, not of what went before.

3. *apigabduḥ 'pūrvatramātrākarshakāḥ': athagabdo nityasam-jñāvyaṇchedakāḥ: nānāpadasthodāttapūrvatrādhikārako³ vā: nānāpadastham aksharam udāttapūrvam¹ cet parato nīcam sāmhitena vidhinā svaryate cet sa prātihato 'tra' veditavyaḥ. (5) W. B. om.; G. M. om. yathā. (6) O. om. (7) O. tasmādivarupam.

If this be indeed the original intent of the rule, it would seem that, to the apprehension of the Hindu phonetists, there was difference enough between the enclitic circumflex which te in tām te assumes in samhitā, having been grave in pada-text, and that which the shāh of duṣcākshāh has in samhitā as well as in pada, to furnish ground for a difference of classification and nomenclature.* But there are various obstacles in the way of our accepting the interpretation as satisfactory. In the first place, why ought not the same distinction to apply where the acute and circumflex are separated by a hiatus, as well as by consonants? or why, when a circumflex after an acute in the same word is called tāirovyañjana, alike whether a hiatus or consonants intervene, should a circumflex after an acute in another word have a different name according as it is preceded by a consonant or not? In the second place, why should the rule be thrust in here, wholly out of connection with the others respecting the enclitic circumflex, and with such a frightful sacrifice of that economy of expression which the sātrakāra proverbially rates so highly? for, following rule 7, a simple nānāpadasthāt tu prātihatah would have done the whole business, and much more unequivocally. Not one of the other treatises mixes together thus the enclitic and independent *svarita*s, when they come to be defined and named. Nor, again, does any other authority found a separate species of accent upon the basis here laid down. I have been inclined, therefore, to conjecture that the rule ought to be rendered 'when there is besides (api) a [preceding] acute in another word, then, provided a circumflex arises as the result of a rule of combination, it is prātihata:' understanding an independent svarita (except a nitya) to be intended, whenever that svarita was preceded by an acute, and so held a position which would make it an enclitic svarita as well; and the reason for thus calling attention to it being that, as written, it is not distinguished from a mere enclitic accent.† But there are too many difficulties connected with this interpretation also to allow of its being accepted as at all satisfactory.

The Vājasaneyi-Prāticākhyā (i.118) gives a special name, tāirovirāma, to the enclitic circumflex which falls in the pada-text upon the first syllable of the second member of a compound, under

* And this difference, it should be noted, applies in the same manner where division is made between the two parts of a compound word; for the extant Tāittirīya pada-text, in marked contrast with those of the other Vedas, regards the avagraha pause as suspending, like the udatta, all accentual influence, and writes śukrá-cāt, for example, in the same fashion as it writes śukráṁ : astí—that is to say.

शुक्रञ्वती । instead of शुक्रञ्वती, as the rest would read.

† For example, ghṛtā'ir vy udyate (iii.1.114) and ānaṣānā'h svishṭim (iii.1.92) are written precisely as if they were ghṛtā'ir vy udyate and ānaṣānā'h svishṭim; namely,

घृतेव्यद्यते and आनाशानाः स्विष्टिमः this is an ambiguity which is common to all the Vedic texts.

the influence of an acute on the final of the first member, and which is therefore 'separated by an intervening pause' from the tone which calls it forth. Thus, the va of gukrá-vatī (as written the second time in the first marginal note on p. 369) has a tāirovirāma svarita, being marked by the ordinary svārīta-sign. Now the vatī, as well as the gukra, in this word, is to the apprehension of the present treatise (i.48) a pada; and hence its syllable va appears to fulfil all the conditions laid down in rule 2, just above, as determining a jātya: it is circumflexed in the pada-text; it is apārva, or preceded by no other accent in the same pada; and it is savakāra, or contains a v. Here, now, as it appears to me, we have the best explanation of the value, and at the same time of the position, and also, at least in part, of the phraseology, of the rule under discussion. This accent needs definition, though enclitic, immediately after the nityu, lest it be confounded with the latter: "even if all the conditions of the previous rule are fulfilled, if there is likewise an acute [preceding the syllable] in another word, and the accent is one which is produced by a rule of combination, this accent is not nitya, but prātihata."

The most conspicuous difficulty in the way of accepting this interpretation is the fact, already referred to, that in the extant pada-text of the Tāittiriya-Saṁhitā there is no such circumflex as is here assumed; the va of gukrá-vatī, and all other syllables in like position, being grave, and marked as such. But the difficulty is more apparent than real, since we have no right to assume that this pada-text is precisely the same with that held by the school from which the Prātiśākhya, or this particular rule, emanated: they may have accented their īngyas, or separable words, after the same fashion which prevails in the pada-texts of the other Vedas. Of more account is the awkwardness of the whole expression, and especially the use of nānāpadustham instead of avagrahasam, which would be the proper term to use in this treatise (compare i.49) in the sense here indicated. But, if not completely acceptable, the interpretation has more for it and less against it, in my opinion, than either of those given above.

Professor Roth, in his early digest of the teachings of the Prātiśākhya respecting accent (introduction to the Nirukta, p. lvii. etc.), identified the prātihata accent with the tāirovirāma, but only in consequence of a misunderstanding of the character of the latter, which he supposed (ibid., p. lxx.) to designate an enclitic circumflex separated by consonants from its occasioning acute in a preceding word, thus giving it the same meaning which is attributed by our commentator to the prātihata in the present rule. And Weber (under Vāj. Pr. i.118), while defining the tāirovirāma correctly, repeats the same identification; I do not know whether as taking it incautiously from Roth, or as having arrived by conjecture at an independent interpretation of our present rule. He does not allude to any difficulties as connected with the latter, nor state his identification to rest upon a different basis from that of Roth.

4. After such a one, in case of the loss of an a, it is abhinihata.

The word tasmāt the comment explains as bringing down nānā-padaṣṭham udāttam from the preceding rule: 'after an acute occurring in another word.' But the specification (like that of udāttayoh in rule 1) is wholly unnecessary: rule xii.9 prescribes the circumflex and defines its conditions: here we need only to have given us the name by which it is to be called.

O. has an independent exposition, but of equivalent meaning.

The examples are sō 'bravit (ii.1.2¹ et al.) and tē 'bruvan (ii.5.1³ et al.); and a counter-example, where, as the eliding diphthong is not acute, no circumflex results, is bhrā'jo 'si devā'nām (ii.4.3²).

All the other treatises (see note to Ath. Pr. iii.55) give to this circumflex the name abhinihita, of which our own term has the aspect of being an artificial variation.

उभावे प्रक्षिष्टः ॥ ५ ॥

5. Where an ū results, it is praçliṣṭa.

Rule x.17 prescribes the circumflex to which the name of praçliṣṭa is here assigned; and the examples given are to be found there also, being all the instances save one which the Sanhitā affords. They read in this place sūnnīyam iva (vi.2.4¹), sūdgātā (vii.1.8¹), māsū 'tīshthan (vii.5.2²: G. M. omit mā), and dikshā 'padādhati (v.5.5⁴: G. M. O. omit).

The same name (or, in the Ath. Pr., praçliṣṭu) is given by the other treatises to the circumflex which results from the fusion of two short i's, the first acute and the other circumflex (see note to Ath. Pr. iii.56).

पदविवृत्यां पादवृत्तः ॥ ६ ॥

6. Where there is a hiatus between two words, it is pādavṛtta.

Here there is abrupt change, without notice, from the independent to the enclitic circumflex. The examples given are tā' asmāt srṣṭā'h (ii.1.2¹: B. omits srṣṭā'h), sā idhānā'h (iv.4.4⁵), and yā

4. *'tasmān nānāpudaṣṭhodāttāt parabhūtānudadāttākārasya*² lope sati yaḥ svaritaḥ so 'bhinihato reditavyaḥ. yathā: so----: te ----. tasmād iti kim: bhrājo----

5. ūbhāve yatra svaryate sa praçliṣṭo reditavyaḥ. sūn----: sūd----: māsū----: 'dikshū---- upasādaḥ (vi.2.4¹); while, as counter-example, to show that the hiatus must be between two padas, not two parts of the same pada, we have prāṅgam ukthām (iv.4.2¹: this implies, of course, that the padu-text does not treat the word as a separable one).

The Rik Pr. (iii.9,10) calls this accent vāivṛtta, and there is nothing in its definition or in that of the Vāj. Prāt. (i.119) which should limit the accent to the case of a hiatus between two padas, or deprive the u of such a word as prāṅga of its right to rank as a pādaivṛtta. See the note to the next rule.

7. Where an acute precedes, it is tāirovyañjana.

The form of this rule, again, is almost unaccountably peculiar. The term tāirovyañjana means 'with consonant-intervention,' and all the other treatises (see note to Ath. Pr. iii.62) define the accent in accordance with this, as being one in which the circumflex is separated by intervening consonants from the occasioning acute. Here, to be sure, such a definition would hardly answer; as there is a single word in the Saṃhita, prāṅgam, in which a vowel is regarded as having tāirovyañjana, although there is no consonant between it and the acute. But why specify udāttapārva, 'preceded by an acute,' in this rule, when it was just as necessary in rule 6? The commentator says that, as the implication has been made all along, its repetition here is for the purpose of signifying that the acute is now to be understood to be in the same word with the circumflex. That may satisfy him, but is not calculated to content us. If nānāpadastham udāttam was implied in rule 6 from above, then padavivṛtṭyām should have been simply vivṛtṭyām. Things would be made much better by putting rule 6 after rule 7: then we should be able to give udāttapārva in rule 7 a meaning, as recalling to mind the actual cause of these two accents; and rule 6 would stand as an exception to the other and more general statement, pointing out a class of cases in which, though depending on a preceding acute, another name was applied to the accent.

The commentator's examples are yuñjānty asya (vii.4.20), vāsavy

It is very odd—but, I presume, merely accidental—that in every one of these cases (except prāūgam) the vowel which finally shows the circumflex is not of the same word with the acute, but belongs to another word which has been combined with its predecessor, and, after the combination, gets the circumflex by the general rules xiv.29,30 (for the commentator has expressly denied under rule x.12 that the initial grave u of asya, for example, receives the circumflex in virtue of its combination with the enclitic circumflex ti of yuvānti). I do not see why, in the first two cases, at any rate, the circumflex is not prātihata, according to the commentator's explanation of the meaning of that term; and should even incline to conjecture that these are the examples selected and current for the present rule before the erroneous interpretation of rule 3 was established.

No one of the other Prāṭicākhyas limits tāirovyañjana to an enclitic circumflex following its acute in the same word (see note to Ath. Pr. iii.62); it is quite an oversight, therefore, that the St. Petersburg lexicon gives the term only this restricted meaning (perpetuating Roth's original error, referred to above, in the note to rule 3).

8. These are the names of the circumflex accents.

The commentator simply gives examples for each accent, in part new, in part the same with those furnished under the rules defining each: namely, for the kshāipra (omitted in G. M.), abhy āsthāt (iv.2.8¹) and ādhvaryó 'veh (vi.4.3⁴: this is a blunder, there being no kshāipra in the phrase; B. O. read instead adhvaryáh [vi.2.9⁴ et al.], which does not mend the matter); for the nitya, vāyavyām (i.8.7¹ et al.) and kvā 'sya (v.7.4²: G. The commentator makes very short work of the remaining rules of the chapter, and we can afford to do the same, as they teach us nothing of value.

10. As also in the abhinihata.

The commentator says that ca in this rule is used in the sense of secondary adjunction (anvācaye), and so signifies that the effort of utterance in the abhinihata is dr̥ḍha, 'firm,' merely—a less degree than the dr̥ḍhatarā, 'firmer,' or 'quite firm,' of the preceding rule. The same may be also inferred, he adds, from the fact that the abhinihata is made the subject of a separate rule, instead of being included in rule 9, with the other two.

Alpatura, 'feebler,' is doubtless meant to signify a still less degree of force of utterance than mṛdutura, 'gentler.'

To the commentator, his Çikshā appears to be a higher authority than the Prāṭicākhya, at least in this part; and he adds that, although the qualifications 'feeble, gentle, firm' are here attributed to the accents in question, yet, in accordance with what the Çikshā says, "like a candle, like a rush-leaf" (? unintelligible without the context), it is to be understood that there is softheadedness (?) in them all alike. And O. adds an example, yūvā kavīh (i.3.14¹).

व्यञ्जनः स्वराङ्गम् ॥ १ ॥

1. The consonant is adjunct of a vowel.

This brief principle calls forth a long discussion. Reference is first made (except in G. M.) to rule xxiv.5, as, by its requirement of a comprehension of aṅga, 'adjunct' (literally 'limb, member'), creating a necessity for the present precept (and for those that are to follow). Objection is then at once taken to the principle: if, in such cases as kāpa and yūpa (and G. M. add yet other words as illustrations), it is the consonant that indicates the difference of meaning, ought not the vowel, rather, to be considered as adjunct of the consonant? The answer given is, that a consonant is incapable of standing alone, and so is dependent, while a vowel is independent; and that, as between a dependent and an independent, the enlightened regard the independent as superior; and it belongs to the inferior to be adjunct to the superior. Moreover, there is found also another proof of the superiority of the vowel, in the verse "as a mighty monarch takes possession of the realm of a weak one, so the mighty vowel takes possession of the weak consonant." The beginning of another verse is added: "the vowels are to be known as belonging to brahman." But between this part of a verse and the whole verse that precedes, G. M. insert another, which is asserted to come from "the exposition of the Çikshâ," and which gives a highly imaginative derivation for svara, 'vowel,' and vyañjana, 'consonant': "Patanjali styled that a vowel which shines by itself [sva-ra from sva-yam râ-jate]: the consonant is so called as being imperfect [vyañjana from vyañga, literally 'limbless'] without [? the expression needs mending, to bring out a desirable sense] the other following it." Then all start together upon a new argument for the superiority of the vowel with yet another verse, which is actually found in the known pāṇinīya Çikshâ (verse 23; see Weber's Indische Studien, iv.353): "acute, grave, and circumflex, the three accents, and short, long, and protracted, these, in regard to quantity, are the necessary characteristics of the vowels;" which shows that acute tone and so on are attributes of vowels only, and of consonants in virtue of their being adjuncts of vowels.

Next we pass to the consideration of another reason why the principle stated in the rule needed to be laid down. The consonant (by i.37) has half a mora of quantity; and a vowel has [for example] a mora: their combination, then, would seem to have a mora and a half, and so would be liable to be understood as of long quantity: this untoward conclusion is avoided by the present rule, which implies that in fluent utterance the quantity of the vowel belongs in all cases to the combination of consonant and vowel, and not to the vowel alone. The specification "in fluent utterance" (literally, 'in running action') is made in order to save the significance of rule i.37.

Finally, the superiority of the vowel is once more inferred from the fact that, when it is combined with a consonant, it alone is perceptible; just as, when milk and water are mingled, the milk alone is perceived, and not the water.

2. And it belongs to the following vowel.

The commentator explains parasvaram as a descriptive compound (karmadhāraya), governed by bhajate understood; such an ellipsis, however, is so violent as to be hardly admissible, and the word is perhaps better taken as a possessive (bahuvrīhi), somewhat anomalously used. The occasion of the rule, we are told, is the doubt which is liable to arise as to when the consonant—which, owing to its having the vowel as a superior, is unable to stand by itself—is an adjunct of the preceding, and when of the following vowel. A single phrase is quoted as example, namely imān eva lokān upadhāya (v.5.5³: O. omits the last word).

This is the leading and introductory principle in all the Prātiśākhya (see note to Ath. Pr. i.55); it is greatly restricted in its application by the following rules.

3. A consonant in pausā belongs to the preceding vowel.

The commentator explains avasitam as meaning 'standing at the end of a padā,' and gives as examples ūrk (i.2.2² et al.: W. has instead rk [iv.7.9¹ et al.], and O. has cāk [i.3.9¹ et al.]), vashat

This principle, of course, is without exception in its application. It is either stated or implied in the rules of the other treatises (see note to Ath. Pr. i.57).

4. Also the first consonant of a group.

That is to say, as the commentator points out, of a group consisting of either two consonants or more than two. The "also" (ca) expressed in the next rule is declared to be implied here also, and to prescribe adjunction to the preceding vowel. The examples given are yajñān vyādicat (vi.6.11¹) and apsv antaḥ (i.4.45² et al.: but G. M. substitute apsv agne [iv.2.11³], and W. has the corrupt reading acvataḥ). If, now, we had only to take the groups of consonants as they stand in the ordinary text, and divide them, the application of this and of the remaining rules for syllabication would be simple enough; but we are required to apply also the rules for duplication etc. as found in chapter xiv., and to make the insertions required by the rules of the fifth (v.32,33) and the present chapter (12-16), which puts quite a different face upon the matter. In fact, in the examples furnished, nt is the only group which is divided n-t without farther ceremony; gr becomes and is divided g-gr; ny, in like manner, n-ny; psv is expanded into p-phsv; and jñ into j-jñ (writing the yama, as I have done elsewhere, with a straight line above the letter), where, by the action of the next rule, two consonants go to the preceding vowel. The class of groups consisting of two consonants only, and such consonants as (by xiv.23) are not liable to duplication, is the only one of which the division is settled by the present rule alone: it contains (in the Tāittirīya-Saṁhitā) thirty-nine groups, such as nt, tth, pp, yy, ny, ṣṣ.

The other treatises hold this same principle, and teach it in an equivalent manner (see Ath. Pr. i.56 and note)—save that the Rik Pr. (i.5, xviii.18) allows the letter to be adjoined to either the preceding or the following syllable.

The manuscripts of the commentary are more than usually defective in this neighborhood: B. has lost the present rule, with something of what precedes and follows it; O. omits the next rule, with passages before and after; W. has done the same, to a somewhat less extent; but rule 5 and the lacking part of its comment were apparently restored on the margin of W.'s original, and its copyist has put them in in the wrong place, next before rule 6.

5. And one that is not combined with the following vowel.

The comment supplies the word svarena, 'vowel,' as that with which pareṇa here agrees, and the whole interpretation is constructed accordingly. The meaning is, then, that (with the exceptions to be further specified in the following rules) only the final member of a group of consonants is to be adjoined to the following vowel, the rest belonging to that which precedes. By way of illustration is given merely tat savituh (i.5.6⁴ et al.): a most insufficient and ill-chosen example; since, in the final form of the group ts, only one consonant goes with the preceding syllable: thus, t-ths. But the commentator is obliged to spend his strength, and vainly, in endeavoring to refute an obvious objection to the rule itself, which he thus states: "well, but then the foregoing rule is meaningless, since by this one also the quality of adjunction to the preceding vowel is assured to the consonant that begins a group." And he replies, "you must not think that: for, in such cases as maryagrīh (iv.1.2⁵ et al.) and arvā 'si (i.7.8¹ et al.), in which the y and v are doubled after r by rule xiv.4, the former y or v is by the present rule made an adjunct of the preceding vowel, but the r, by rule 7 below, would become an adjunct of the following vowel: and that is impossible, since no such pronunciation ever takes place. So, as one or the other must needs be annulled, the question arises which is to be annulled; and here rule 4 comes in to settle the question."

This is not a very acceptable exposition, although it in a manner involves the true relations. Rule 4 is not meant as a safeguard against the misapplication of following precepts, but as a fundamental principle, with reference to which the present rule stands in a subordinate position; and the two must be understood as if they read "the first member of a group belongs to the preceding vowel; and, along with it, such other members as are not immediately combined with the following vowel." The former principle obtains everywhere, without exception; to the latter, rules 7-9 establish very important and extensive classes of exceptions. If the mode of statement adopted in the treatise is open to some objection, we cannot help it; the slight inaccuracy is perhaps a consequence of the general prevalence of the doctrine of rule 4, to which its successor is added as an extension peculiar to this school.

No one of the other Prātiśākhya's recognizes any such principle as this: those of the Rik (i.5, xviii.18) and Atharvan (i.58) add to the initial consonant of a group only the first of a following pair which is the result of duplication, that of the White Yajus including further (i.104,105) the other one of the pair, provided a mute follows. Its sway is, as already remarked, much more limited than would be thought at first sight, because rule 7 establishes a different usage for the immense class of groups of which a semi-vowel stands as final member, and rule 9 for the much smaller but yet important class in which a spirant stands last, or followed by a semivowel. Its general effect is to attach to the following vowel only such consonants or groups as could begin a word, leaving the rest to belong to the foregoing syllable. There seems to be need of illustrating, more fully than the commentator has deigned to do, the sphere of its application.

This is, in consonant-groups originally of two members, to

1. Groups in which a mute is doubled (or its corresponding non-aspirate prefixed to it, as will be understood hereafter without special remark) after a surd spirant (χ or ϕ , xiv.9,15), l (xiv.2,3), or r (xiv.4,15), the first member of the group remaining unchanged: thus, $\chi k-k$, $l k-k$, $r k-k$. These are twenty-seven in number; and to them may be added $ry-y$, $rl-l$, $rv-v$, which, by the final specification of rule 7, follow the same mode of division. In regard to these, the usage as fixed by our treatise is the same with that sanctioned by the rest, as already mentioned.

2. Groups in which a mute, or v , is doubled before a mute of another series: thus, $kk-c$, $vv-n$. Of these there are fifty-one in the Sanhitā.

3. The same, but with the addition (by xxi.12) of $yama$ before the final member: thus, $gg-gm$. Twenty-three groups.

4. Groups in which the initial spirant (sibilant) is doubled, and also the following mute (by xiv.9), only the last of all going to the following syllable: thus, $cc-c$. Thirteen groups.

5. The same, but with $yama$: thus, $ccp-pm$ (gm). Six groups.

6. Groups in which h is doubled before a nasal, with $nāsikya$ (by xxi.14: but see the note to that rule, for a different interpretation): thus, $hh-n$. Three groups only.

Against these one hundred and twenty-six groups, growing out of original simple pairs, there are eighty like k-ky (from ky) and k-khsh (from ksh), in which, by rules 7 and 9, only the initial consonant of the finally resulting group goes with the preceding vowel.

When, now, the pairs here rehearsed come to be extended to triplets by the addition of a third member, if that member be a semivowel, or a spirant (sibilant) following a mute, the point of division remains just where it was before. And so also, of course, in the like extension of the groups mentioned under rule 4, above, as undergoing no change in the varnakrama. Thus, ggr (g-gr) is divided like gg (g-g); çcy (ççc-cy) like çc (ççc-c); ñksh (ñ-khsh) like ñk (ñ-k); and rks (rk-khs) like rk (rk-k). And the very great majority (one hundred and fifty-four) of the groups of three consonants occurring in the Sanhitā have a semivowel as their final member; with final sibilant there are only seven.

If, on the other hand, double groups are extended to triplets by appending a mute, either non-nasal or nasal (which happens in thirty-one cases), the point of division is, by the operation of the present rule, shifted toward the end of the group. Thus, we have

1. ñ-k, but ñk-t, two groups; and ñ-ch, but ñj-jñ, two groups;
2. rk-k, but rkk-c, five groups; and rj-j, but rjj-jm, five groups;
3. dd-gh, but ddgh-ghn, two groups;
4. sst-t, but sstt-tñ, two groups;

which are extensions of the groups of two members already treated of, and advance the division only one point. But further, groups ending in a sibilant, and falling under rule 9, below, and those which by rule 15 have svarabhakti, exhibit, when a mute is added, a still greater transference forward of the point of division, and we have

5. k-khs (ks), but kkhst-t (kst), four groups; and k-khsh (ksh), but kkhshp-pm (kshm), five groups; and, finally,
6. r'-sh (rsh), but rshst-t (rshṭ); and r'-ç, but rççp-pm (rçm), three groups.

In the yet further extension to groups of four members, the same principles prevail. There are found nineteen such groups in which the additional letter, being a semivowel, has no effect upon the division; and only three in which the division is altered by an added mute. These last are: ñkhsht-tñ (ñkshñ), from ñkshsh; hkhshst-tñ (hkhshñ), from h-khsh (hkhsh); and ntshst-t (ntst), from n-ths (nts).

Finally, the only two groups of five consonants occurring in the

6. Also anusvāra and svarabhakti.

By G. M., this rule is divided into two, anusvārah and svarabhaktiṣ ca (while, on the other hand, T. reads anusvārasvarabhaktiṣ ca); and such a division is noted, if not accepted, in the comment, by all the manuscripts, which say "of this rule (svarabhaktiṣ ca) is made a setting-apart, although the prescription is identical (with that made in the other rule, anusvārah)." And the object of thus separating what is confessed properly to belong together is stated to be "to bring about the adjunction of svarabhakti, in some cases, to the following vowel," on the authority of a verse which is quoted, to the effect that "the knowing man should connect with its predecessor (?) the bhakti that follows a short vowel; and in ṛtasya dhārshadam the bhakti is said to do as it pleases;" but G. M. substitute for the latter half of the verse "to it should be assigned one mora, also before a pause and in cases of hiatus." The whole matter is exceedingly obscure, or quite unintelligible, without aid from the context of the quoted verse. The words cited as examples are not found in the Sanhitâ; but they occur in the Rig-Veda (at i.143.7), and also in the Taittirīya-Brāhmaṇa (i.2.1¹²), where the svarabhakti has assumed the form of a full vowel, and the word reads dhārushadam. It looks as if the commentators had set out to divide into two rules what they nevertheless have to acknowledge to be really only one, for the purpose of interpreting into the latter half of it, when set by itself, a license to the element in question to be treated either way; but, as they have not fully carried out their intention, I have preferred to retain the unity of the rule. It is quoted, we may further remark, under rule i.34, in all the manuscripts of the comment, apparently without any thought of a division.

Anusvāra appears here once more with the distinct value of a consonantal element following the vowel—and yet not as a full consonant, else it would fall under rule 4 above, and would require no separate treatment. The treatise is not so explicit as were to be desired in defining what is to be done with it in syllabication; but I presume we may infer that it does not count as saṁyogādi at all, but only as if an affection of the preceding vowel; and hence, that all the groups which it introduces are to be divided as if it were not there; that ñce, for example, is to be made into ñccē-c, ñsm into ñssp-pm, and ñstr into ñsst-tr. The example given by the commentator is añḡunā te (i.2.6); but it is an ill-chosen one, and quite worthless, as, in any view of the nature and treatment of anusvāra, no question could arise as to the division añ-ḡunā.

For svaraḥbakti, see the concluding rules of this chapter (xxi. 15,16). The example given is gārhapatyah (i.6.7¹ et al.), which we are to read and divide gār-ha-put-tyah.

7. But not a consonant that is followed by a semivowel, if dissimilar with it.

The negative here signifies a direct reversal of the implication, as it denotes a denial of adjunction to the preceding vowel, and hence necessarily involves adjunction to the one that follows, since the consonant cannot stand by itself. "Dissimilar" is simply explained by vilakṣaṇa, 'of diverse characteristics, different'; it excludes from the operation of the rule the doubled semivowel itself, and would also exclude the nasal semivowel into which n and m are converted before l, and m before y and v (v.26,28), if these occurred where the rule could apply, which is not the case.

The examples quoted by the commentator are adhyavasāya diḡah (vi.1.5¹; i. e. ad-dhya-), madhumigrena (v.2.8⁶ et al.; i. e. miḡ-ḡre-), aḡlonayā (vi.1.6⁷; i. e. aḡ-ḡlo-), and iṣhe tvā (i.1.1 et al.; i. e. i-ṣhet-tvā): they are not to be commended as at all fully illustrating the wide range of application of the rule. This has been sufficiently set forth above, under rule 5. It helps to determine the division of one-third of the groups of two consonants, of four-fifths of those of three, of six-sevenths of those of four, and of all those of five—or of four-sevenths of the whole number of consonant groups. By way of further examples, we may cite the two groups of five; they are vi-yu-yâtthst-tryas-sya (ii.6.5⁴⁻⁵) and ab-bru-vanthst-tri-kā-mā (vi.1.6⁵).

But if the commentator's direct illustration of the rule is scanty, his counter-illustration is yet less satisfactory. To establish the necessity of the specification asavarnam, 'dissimilar,' he cites only paricāyām cinvita (v.4.11³). Such cases as this, however, are rather covered by the fundamental rule saṁyogādi (xxi.4), and the application of the present one is to the groups in which a semi-vowel is doubled after r, and which we are to read ry-y, rl-l, rv-v; while, on the other hand, in the half-dozen groups in which two different semi-vowels follow a mute, both of them, along with the preceding mute, go to the succeeding vowel: thus, riṣh-shvañ-ñvyāre-chat (ii.3.2⁶), a-vi-trya-va-tu (i.8.22¹), and gr-hād-dorī-hīn (ii.3.1³).

8. Nor the nose-sounds.

The "nose-sounds" are here again (as under ii.49) defined as the yamas (xxi.12,13) only; but there is no reason why we should not regard the nāsikya (xxi.14) as likewise included (see the note on rule 14). The examples given are also of yamas only: rukmaṁ upa dadhāti (v.2.7¹ et al.: O. has rukmaṁ only) and rājñe sākarah (v.5.11: O. substitutes svarājñe, v.6.21). The groups, in their full form, are read and divided kk-km and jj-jñ. An example of the nāsikya would be vahh-ñi-ta-mam (i.1.4¹).

The Vāj. Pr. (i.103) reckons the yama to the preceding vowel; neither of the other treatises says anything about it.

9. Nor a mute that is followed by a spirant—provided the following spirant is likewise in the same case.

The first ca (translated 'nor' here), the commentator says, effects the connection of the rule with its predecessor; the second (rendered 'likewise') implies adjunction to the following vowel. This is not very lucid, for the two things are really equivalent to one another. And in the further exposition, the paraḥ appears (the readings are not consistent or clear) to be taken as signifying parasvarāṅgam; but this cannot well be correct. The phraseology of the rule, indeed, is very peculiar, and I do not see how it is to be accounted for unless we may conjecture that the proviso ūṣhmā cet paraḥ ca is a later addition, made after it had been noticed that the more general statement sparṇaḥ co "śhmāparaḥ included too much. The meaning is clear: that a spirant which itself belongs to the following syllable, as being either directly combined with the vowel of the latter (xxi.5) or followed only by a semivowel before that vowel (xxi.7), carries with it a preceding mute; but if, on the other hand, it be cut off from the succeeding vowel by a mute, so as itself to belong to the antecedent syllable, a mute before it goes, of course, to the same syllable. The examples given in the comment are this time well selected, and illustrate the three cases involved: they are shat sam padyanṭe (v.4.3⁴ et al.) and vashat svāhā (vii.3.12); in both of them a t is inserted, by rule v.33, between the t and s, and the final reading and division is tt-ths and tt-thsv. As counter-example we have akshnayā vyāghārayati (v.2.7⁵ et al.); where, after all rules are satisfied, we have kkhsht-īn.

As compared with those to which rule 7 applies, the consonant groups falling under this rule are few, only forty-six in all; in thirty of which the spirant carries the mute before it to the following vowel, while in the remaining sixteen both go together to the one that precedes. The detail is as follows.

Of double groups, composed of a single mute and spirant, there are seven: for example, k-khsh (ksh).

Of groups containing three consonants, the largest class is that formed by the addition of a semivowel to the preceding: for example, k-khshy (kshy): it contains ten groups. Then there are two like ñ-khsh (ñksh), three like tt-khsh (tksh), and the isolated rk-khs (rks).

Of groups of four consonants there are seven on this side, all but one (ritt-ths=rits) like those of three, but with an added semivowel, which does not (xxi.7) change the division.

On the other side, where the spirant goes back to the vowel of the antecedent syllable, there are, of course, no groups of two consonants. Of groups of three we have nine, four with following non-nasal mute (as kkhst-t=kst), and five with following nasal (as kkhsht-īn=kshn). Of groups of four, there are two (as tthst-tr=tstr) formed from the foregoing with added semivowel, and three from triplets ending in a sibilant increased by a mute, either non-nasal (namely nthst-t=ntst) or nasal (as ñkhsht-īn=ñkshn). The two groups of five consonants, which also belong here, have been given above, under rule 7.

This finishes the subject of the division of consonant-groups in syllabication, the special elaborateness and intricacy of whose treat-

10. Of grave syllables following a circumflex in saṁhitā there is pracaya, having the tone of acute.

The theory of the pracaya accent has been so fully set forth in the note to Ath. Pr. iii.65 that I do not need to spend many words upon it here. Its effect is, as there pointed out, to give to all the syllables which are left in the written text without any accent-mark the same high tone, whether they be udatta, 'acute,' or anudatta, 'grave.' Thus, in the example given by the commentator, agne dūdhra gahya kiñçila vanyā yā te (v.5.9¹; G. M. omit yā te), which is written in pada-text

the grave syllables dūdhra gahya kiñçila van- being without written designation of accent, like the two acute syllables ag- and yā, and being by this rule uttered upon the same pitch with them. It makes no difference whether the circumflex which precedes the pracaya is enclitic (as in the illustration given) or independent; and I have pointed out above (under xix.3) that, owing to the absence of kampa in the Tāittiriya-Saṁhitā where a circumflex precedes an acute, there are very numerous cases in the text where the saṁhitā alone does not show us whether the unmarked syllables following a circumflex are udatta or pracaya—whether, for example, are to be read hy ètād devā'h or hy ètud devā'h, sò 'smā'd età'rhi or sò 'smād età'rhi, sò 'kā'máyātā prajā'h or sò 'kāmayātā prajā'h.

क्षैतद्देवाः, सो ऽस्मादेतर्हि, and सो ऽकामयत प्रजाः,

In the note referred to, I ventured the conjecture that the mode of writing the accent might not have been without influence on the theory as to its character—that is to say, that the Vedic phonetists may have come by an afterthought to declare the pracaya syllables of acute tone, and to pronounce them so, because they agreed with the acute in being without a sign of accent, while originally no such correspondence in character was perceived or intended to be signified. The conjecture will doubtless have appeared to many somewhat wild, but I think that in studying the development of the Hindu theory respecting accent it at any rate deserves to be taken fully into account and carefully considered. I am far from regarding it at present as anything more than a conjecture; yet one or two matters have come to light since it was put forth which at least add to its plausibility. Haug, namely, in a valuable and interesting communication from India to the Journal of the German Oriental Society (vol. xvii., 1863, p. 799 ff.), shows that the modern Hindu reciters of the Veda give tonic distinction only to the syllables that have the accent-signs, the svārīta and anudātta, so that the udātta appears to be no accent at all, and is entirely confounded with the toneless pracaya—thus, under the influence of the mode of written designation, turning topsy-turvy, as it were, the whole system of spoken accent. And again, the peculiar system of writing the accent practised in the Śatapatha-Brāhmana (which uses only one sign, the horizontal stroke beneath the syllable, applied in all the other known systems to mark the anudātta tone), has been turned in later times into a peculiar system of accenting, and treatises have been written to explain and teach it as such (see Kielhorn and Weber, in Weber's Indische Studien, x. 397 ff.*).

The commentator points out that two grave syllables, or even one, following the circumflex, receive the character of pracaya (of course, with the restriction made in the next rule), and not more than two only, as is literally signified by the plural anudātānām in the rule. To show that the conversion into pracaya is limited to grave syllables, he quotes agnāye prāvate (ii.4.1² et al.); to show that the conversion is made only in samhitā, he gives part of the other passage in pada-form, namely agne : dūhrit : gahya : kiñcila : ranya (Ō. adds yā). We might naturally infer from this that the pracaya accent does not occur at all in pada-text; but the inference is not a necessary one (since the rule only says that syllables which are anudātta in their pada-form become pracaya in samhitā, without implying that there may not be pracayas in pada-text which remain such in samhitā), and would doubtless be erroneous; for at least the extant pada-text of the Tāittirīya-Samhitā agrees in this respect with those of the other Vedas, and writes garraṇase, antīrikṣham, and samāgachanta, for example,

* It ought to be added, that Haug and Kielhorn do not look at the matter in the same light in which I have placed it, but incline to believe in the reality and antiquity of what I have called the modern and artificially substituted systems; this is no place to discuss the subject: but I feel confident that the view I have taken will prove the only one tenable.

गिर्वणसे । अंतरिक्षं । and सुमगङ्तेति संअगङ्ते । not गिर्वणसे । अंतरिक्षं । ---संअगङ्ते.

The peculiarity of this pada-text in treating the avagraha as a full avasāna in regard to the designation of accent (as shown in the third of the examples), has been already spoken of above (under rule xx.3).

The terms of the rule would justify us in understanding pracaya to have its etymological meaning of 'accumulation, continued series,' and translating 'a series of grave syllables following a circumflex in samhitā is of acute tone;' and perhaps this was actually the intent of the rule-makers; but I have preferred, as the safer course, to follow the authority of the commentator in translating. To him, indeed, the term is so distinctly a technical one, implying utterance with acute tone, that he thinks it necessary to explain that udāttagrutiḥ is added by way of definition of the peculiar character of the pracaya, and therefore is not open to the reproach of punarukti, or superfluous repetition.

11. But not when an acute or circumflex follows.

That is to say, when such a series or pracaya of grave syllables is followed by an acute or a circumflex syllable, the one next preceding the latter is not made to be of acute tone, but retains its proper grave character, and is marked with the anudātta sign. The commentator offers as examples táyā devīḥ sūtām (iv.1.2¹: W. B. omit sutam, without which the passage is found elsewhere; G. M. substitute táyā devātayā, iv.2.9² et al.) and tād āhuḥ kvā jāgati (vii.1.4³: G. M. omit jagati). These illustrations are wanting in variety, inasmuch as they show between the two independent accents only two original grave syllables, whereof one becomes an enclitic circumflex and the other remains grave; we may take the first example under the preceding rule as showing how an actual pracaya ends with a grave before the following original accent.

The subject to be supplied with the predicate in this rule is svarah, of course. There is an objectionable ambiguity in the form of the rule, inasmuch as there might most naturally seem to be anuvṛtti of pracayaḥ, and so a denial of that accent anywhere excepting before a pause.

We have seen at xix.2 that the name vikrama is given to the 12. After a non-nasal mute, when it is followed by a nasal, are inserted, in their order, nose-sounds.

Which nose-sounds, as we are told in the next rule, some call yamas; and by this familiar name, which the other Prāticākhyas apply to them directly, we shall here, as we have done elsewhere, know them. The treatise teaches us nothing more about them, except (ii.49-51) that their place of production is either the nose or the mouth and nose, and that the producing organ is as in the series of mutes; and farther (xxi.8), that in syllabication they are to be reckoned with the following vowel.

The theory of these curious and equivocal constituents of the ancient Hindu alphabet I have discussed pretty fully in the note to Ath. Pr. i.99, and I have no new light to throw upon the subject here. They are transition-sounds, assumed to intervene between non-nasal and following nasal, as a kind of nasal counterpart to the non-nasal, and therefore called its yama or 'twin.'

The meaning of ānupūrvyāt, 'in their order,' is ambiguous, as it might be understood to refer to the order either of the twenty non-nasal mutes or of the five nasals; or, of the four kinds of non-nasal mutes in each series—in which last sense the comment understands it, declaring that the first yama follows a first mute, the second a second, and so on; and he has before (under i.1) reckoned the yamas as four in the catalogue of alphabetic sounds. I have pointed out under ii.51 how difficult it is to reconcile this view with that of a variation of their organ of production as in the five series of mutes.

The commentator's examples are tam prathathā (i.4.9), vimath-nānāh (iii.5.4³), vidmā te agne (iv.2.2¹: O. omits agne), and dār-rūṇi dadhmāsi (iv.1.10¹)—one, namely, for each of the four classes of mutes. As rule xiv.24 expressly enjoins duplication of the non-nasal mute in these combinations, we are to read and divide prathathā, vidd-āma, and so on. The counter-examples (of which all but the last are lost in W.) are as follows: to show that the insertion is made only after a mute, kalmāshī bhavati (v.1.1⁴: O. substitutes brahmarādinah, i.7.1⁴ et al.); that this mute must be a

These examples are one-sided, in that they only exhibit the simplest form of group in which the yama is taken as increment. Of such simplest groups there are twenty-three met with in the Sanhitā: namely, after first mutes, kn, kn, km, en, em, tn, tm, pn, pn, pm; after second mutes, chm, thn; after third mutes, gm, gm, jñ, jm, dn, dm; after fourth mutes, ghn, dhn, dhm, bhn. Then, of groups of three consonants involving such combinations: jñy (jñ-jñy), tny; ōchm, ōjñ (ōj-jñ); dyhn (dygh-gñ), nghn; rjm (rj-jm), rtn, rtn, rdhn, rdhm; stm (sst-ñm), sthn. And of groups of four consonants, rjny (rj-jny).

According to the phonetic systems of the other Prātiśākhya, this would finish the tale of yamas. But, by the peculiar rule (xiv.9) which here requires a surd mute to be everywhere inserted between a sibilant and a following nasal, is brought forth a new and numerous brood of these curious twins. Thus, in double groups, çn (çç-ñn), çm, shn, shm, sn, sm. Of groups of three containing these: çny, shnc; kshn (kkhshp-ñm), kshn, tsn, tsm, psn; rçm (rççp-ñm), rshn, rshnc; ssm. Of groups of four, ñkshn, ñkshn, ççny. In all, of both classes, fifty-seven groups.

14. After h, when followed by n, ṇ, or m, is inserted nāsikya.

I have translated this rule according to its obvious and incontrovertible meaning, which, if it needed any external support, would find it in the almost precisely accordant rule of the Ath. Pr. (i.100: the teachings of the other treatises upon the subject are much less distinct: see the note on the Atharvan rule). But the commentator gives it an entirely different interpretation. The ablative hakārān, he says, is here used in the sense of an accusative (his addition, "in the absence of lyap [the suffix ya]," I do not understand); and the sense is, that a nose-sound is imposed upon the h itself, or that the latter becomes nasal. It is not difficult to see on what this theory of the quality of a h preceding a nasal is founded—namely, a recognition of the fact that such a h is really an expiration of breath through the nose: it being not less true of h before a semivowel or nasal than before a vowel, that it is (borrowing the phraseology of an earlier rule, ii.47) udāyavarnādisasthāna, ‘produced in the position of the succeeding letter.’ The commentator’s exposition might have come from the “some authorities” to whom the doctrine of that rule is attributed.

The examples given are ahnām ketuh (ii.4.14¹), aparāhne (ii.1.2⁵), and brahmacādinah (i.7.1⁴ et al.). Giving to the rule its real meaning, and applying the principle laid down at xxi.8 for the syllabic division, we should read ahh-nām: and so with the rest. As was suggested under Ath. Pr. i.100, it is probably this separation of the h from the nasal in syllabication that has led to the division of the two in point of utterance, and then to the thrusting in between them of a transition-sound.

G. M. have adapted the reading of the rule to the new interpretation, and give hukāran nanūmaparan nāsikyam (the writing of n instead of ū before n is frequent with these MSS.).

15. In the combination of r and a spirant, there is a svara-bhakti of r.

The doctrine of our Prātiśākhya respecting the svara-bhakti is less detailed, and less distinctly expressed, than that of the other treatises (for which, see the note to Ath. Prāt. i.101-2); from the statement here made, we should not even understand that this “vowel-fragment” is to be an insertion between the r and the spirant, although that is doubtless intended to be signified. The commentator enters into a long exposition of the subject; by no means, however, limiting himself to explaining and illustrating his text. The two South-Indian manuscripts (G. M.) are in some parts of this exposition fuller than the rest, and will be followed in the abstract of it here given: the version of W. B. O., indeed, has rather the aspect of being an abbreviation of the other, and one not everywhere skilfully made.

At the outset, G. M. alone specify that the svarabhakti is combined with the spirant (and yet, by xxi.6, it is to be separated from the spirant in syllabication, going with the r to the preceding vowel). The term svarabhakti means 'a fragment, piece, or part of a vowel;' and a rephasvarabhakti, 'r-vowel-fragment,' means a bit of the vowel that is akin, or has the same mode of utterance with, the r. Now the r̥ is of like quality with r, in being produced with the tip of the tongue and in having the sound of r: and it is a part of r̥ that is intended. The rule merely prescribes the insertion; the nature of the latter is clearly set forth by Vararuci (one of the three principal sources of the present comment: see note to the introductory verses, pp. 6,7). The vowels are defined at i.5, and since among them only r̥ agrees in place and organ with r, the "fragment" is of r̥. The r̥ is by i.31 declared to be short, or of one mora; and Vararuci defines the short r̥ as composed of a quarter-mora of vowel at the beginning, a half-mora of r̥ in the middle, and a quarter-mora of vowel (W. B. O. say, of vowel-fragment) at the end. Then a verse is quoted describing the word anu as signifying a quarter-mora. This half-mora of r̥, now, found in the middle of r̥, being divided, its two parts, each combined with the quarter-mora of vowel, severally receive the name of svarabhakti. Hence there are two svarabhakti's. And in answer to the question where this svarabhakti of half a mora occurs, the makers of the Çikshâ have declared that the one ending with the vowel element occurs before ç, sh, and s, and the one ending with the consonant element before h; the former, moreover, being open, and the latter close. And it is added that in yo vâi çradhâm (i.6.81) there is no svarabhakti, on account of absence of the order prescribed in the rule.

So much by way of (would-be) explanation of the rule. But the commentator goes on to say that the Çikshā teaches other svarabhakti's, to the number of five: namely, the karenu, between r and h, as in barhih (i.1.2¹ et al.); the karvinī, between l and h, as in malhāh (ii.1.2⁴); the harinī, between r and ç or s, as in durçapūṛṇamāsāu (ii.2.5⁴ et al.) and barsam (ii.5.7¹); the hāritā (or haritā), between l and ç, as in sahasravalçāh (vi.3.3³); and the hānsapādā (or hānsapādā), between r and sh, as in varshāhvām (ii.4.10³)—and he who wants to go to heaven (on the score, no doubt, of patience, faith, and punctiliousness) must utter the five kinds of bhakti, as thus laid down. It appears, then, that the commentator's Çikshā, like the Vāj. Pr. (iv.16), regards l, not less than r, as followed by svarabhakti before a spirant.

16. But not in case of krama, when a first mute follows the spirant.

The commentator defines krama as the equivalent of dvitva, 'duplication,' and refers as authority to rule xxiv.5, where the word occurs again without, according to him, admitting any other meaning; whence, he infers, it must signify the same thing here also. We should rather turn the argument the other way, and say that, as krama can have no other meaning here, it may be conjectured to signify the same thing at xxiv.5. He further coolly inserts an “or” in the rule, and declares it to mean ‘either when the spirant is doubled or when it is followed by a first mute.’ This must evidently be condemned: for, in the first place, the text contains no “or;” and, in the second place, if that were the meaning, the specification would be superfluous, since the spirant is always doubled before a first mute, and so krame would include all the cases—except, indeed, according to the doctrine of Plākshi and Plākshâyana, who (xiv.17) deny the duplication of the spirant in such a situation; and we are perhaps to connect his interpretation of the present rule with his apparent acceptance of the doctrine referred to, and suppose that he would read rsh-t, and rcp-ṣm etc. (namely, for rcm, rshp, and rshm), while the reading actually approved by the treatise is rshsh-t, rcsp-ṣm etc. There are five groups—namely rcy, rcv, rshy, rcv, and rhy—in which the difference of interpretation would make a difference as regards the presence or absence of svarabhakti; if the “or” is implied, they will be read and divided rc-cy etc.; if not, they will be r^cc-cy etc.

The commentator's examples are dārçyan̄ yājñam (iii.2.2³: only O. has yājñam; G. M. read dārçyan̄ hi, which, if it be an actual passage, I have overlooked in searching out the references), varshyābhyah (vii.4.13: W. B. O. read varshābhyah), barsvebhiḥ (v.7.11), and eturhy ārādhuḥ (v.1.5⁵: found in O. only), illustrating four of the five cases in which his interpretation would exclude the svarabhakti; and further, for cases in which a first mute follows, adurçma jyotiḥ (iii.2.5⁴: omitted in O.), kārshṇī upānahāu (v.4.4⁴ et al.), and varshṭā parjanyaḥ (vii.5.20: found in G. शब्दः प्रकृतिः सर्ववर्णानाम् ॥ १ ॥

1. Tone is the material of all articulate sounds.

The putting-together, as well as the material, of this and the following chapter is rather peculiar, and makes the impression of a supplement to the Prātiçākhyā proper. This present rule and its successor are akin with the first two of the next chapter, and all these with the rules of the second chapter. As under ii.1, the commentator explains çabda by dhvani; for prakṛti he gives as synonym mūlakāraṇam, 'radical cause;' and varṇa he declares to designate the whole eongeries of vowels and consonants.

2. In the difference of form of the former consists the difference of the latter.

That is to say, in the difference resulting from the variety of positions giving audible quality: compare ii.3.

तत्र शब्दद्रव्याण्युदाहरिष्यामः ॥ ३ ॥

3. Here we will instance the offices of terms.

A complete and violent change of subject is introduced by this rule, continuing to rule 9; which last, again, attaches itself closely enough to the beginning of the chapter to have been its natural continuation. The intervening batch of rules looks like an interpolation, thrust in at this point apropos of çabda in rule 1; the word being taken here, however, in an entirely different sense. The commentator tries to smooth over the transition by pronouncing çabda a synonym of çāstra, 'text-book, body of doctrine;' which latter is formed by the putting to use of combinations of the alphabetic sounds just above spoken of. He distinctly ascribes to dravya the sense of 'office, aim,' as the connection also requires,

4. Varṇa and kāra are indicatory.

These two terms have already formed the subject of rules i.16-20. Rules vi.1,7 are cited as examples of their use.

5. Ca and api are implicative.

Rules vi.3 and iv.4 are cited as containing examples of the use of these signs of continued implication from something that has gone before.

6. Tu, atha, and eva are exceptional, introductory, and restrictive, respectively.

The use of these connectives is instanced by quoting rules i.19, v.1, and xiv.3 (G. M. substitute vii.1 for the second).

These rules are too trivial and superficial to make it worth while to enter, in connection with them, into any discussion of the use of the particles in the text of the Prātiṣākhya. The index, and the notes on each rule, will give the means of investigating the matter. We have often had occasion to animadvert upon the commentator's

The example this time is xiii.15 (G. M. substituting xiv.14); and in it appear again some of the differences of reading which were noted in the rule itself where it occurred.

9. Tension, hardness, smallness of aperture, are producers of high tone.

Reference is made to rule i.38, in which the acute accent is defined as consisting in high tone; and the present precept is declared to be given for the sake of that, and in order to prohibit that slack or indifferent utterance which prevails in common life. Āyāma, 'tension,' is explained as meaning rather 'extension (literally 'longness') of the members;' dāruṇya, as 'severity of the vowel;' and anuta khasya, as 'closure of the orifice of the throat:' this is what one who would utter a sound in high tone must do.

There is evidently much more guess-work than true observation in this rule and the one next following: if they had been given as definitions of sonant and surd utterance, instead of high and low

अन्ववसर्गी मर्दवमृता खस्येति नीचैःकराणि ॥१०॥

10. Relaxation, softness, wideness of aperture, are producers of low tone.

The exposition of this rule runs quite parallel with that of the preceding (only O., however, referring to the definition of anudatta, 'grave,' as of low tone, at i.39). To anvavasarga is given vinatātā, 'drooping condition,' as synonym; to mārdava, snigdhatā, 'smoothness;' and to urūtā, sthūlatā, 'bigness.' There is nothing at all to commend in such a description of the way in which low tone is produced.

मन्द्रमध्यमताराणि स्थानानि भवन्ति ॥११॥

11. Soft, middle, and loud are the three qualities.

Their use, we are told, will be explained farther on—namely, in rules 4–10 of the next chapter. I have ventured to render sthāna, literally 'place' or 'position,' by 'quality,' as better expressing the nature of the distinctions implied. The name apparently comes from such theories as that laid down in rule xxiii.10 as to the "place" of production of the different qualities of tone.

In answer, we are told, to the suggested inquiry, "of what are

For the application of these tones or keys, also, we are referred to a later passage (xxiii.11 etc.). As synonym of yama is given svara, 'tone.'

The commentator chooses to connect these rules with those that follow in the next chapter, and to overlook the obvious fact that in the two chapters we have separate and independent statements upon the same subject, which cannot have come from the same hand, and of which the second renders the first wholly superfluous.

The commentator also quotes a couple of verses from his Çikshā, laying down four subdivisions of the pause of hiatus, and assigning them different quantities: that between a short and long vowel is vatsānusṛti, and is one mora long; that between a long and following short is vatsānusārinī, of the same length; between two short vowels, pākavati, three quarters of a mora; between two long vowels, pīṇikā, a quarter-mora only (Uvāṭa's comment on the Rik Prāt. [ii.1] states the intervals quite differently). In W. there are two verses which are not found in the rest; as they stand, their meaning is in great part obscure to me, and I prefer to leave them unamended and untranslated.

The commentator instances the different kinds of "heavy" syllable, as follows: one ending with a consonant, māte 'va putram (iv.2.3² et al.: G. M. omit); one long by its vowel, te te 'dhipatayaḥ (iv.4.11³: G. M. omit the last word); one followed by a consonant-group, aḥmā ca me (iv.7.5¹: W. has ānmāyina, which appears to be merely a corrupt reading; I have found nothing at all like it in the Sanhitā); one that is nasal, viñcatyāi (vii.2.13 et al.).

The distinction of the syllable as "heavy" or "light" has value only in a metrical point of view, and does not make its appearance elsewhere in our treatise (except as it is referred to in rule xxiv.5—which rule we might have expected the commentator to quote here, as the occasion of this one). The quality of "long" or "short" belongs to the vowel alone, and (see xxi.1 and its comment) the consonants accompanying the latter are regarded as absorbed into it, and forming part of its natural quantity. This separation of "heavy" and "long," or of weight and quantity, is practically convenient, perhaps, but theoretically indefensible; and we have reason to be surprised that phonetic observers so acute as the Hindus had not worked the theory of syllabic quantity into a more consistent shape. The other treatises agree with this: see Ath. Pr. i.51–54, and notes.

The use of the word anunāsika in describing a syllable containing anusvāra is (as already noted, under ii.30) one more sign of a theory which regards the anusvāra as a quality and not an element. The Ath. Prāt., which holds this theory, uses the same term in its definition (i.53). It deserves to be noted, however, that to read anusvāram instead of anunāsikam in the verse would help the metre, making the four pādas similar.

This rule is enough by itself to determine the weight of any syllable whatever: but, as the commentator points out, the one following is added to resolve any doubts which might after all arise as to what syllables were light.

15. A syllable that does not end with a consonant, that has a short vowel, and that is not followed by a conjunction of consonants, and one that is not combined with anusvāra—know that to be light.

This is a mere negative to the preceding rule, and a wholly superfluous addition to it—and an addition made, we may conjecture, by a different and later hand: the use of the term anusvāra distinctly suggests this.

The commentator quotes, by way of example of light syllables, simply madudayanā asan (vi.1.5¹: B. O. omit the last word).

It was hardly worth while to give a rule introductory to so very brief a treatment of the subject as is here to follow.

जायते वर्णविशेष्यं परिमाणञ्च पञ्चमाद् इति ॥२॥

2. The differentiation of articulate sounds arises from emission, closure, position, disposition of producing organ, and, fifthly, from quantity.

That is to say, according as any sound is different from another in respect to one or more of these five constituent or determining elements, so its nature or quality is different. The anuprādāna is the emitted material, whether tone, breath, or the intermediate h-sound (ii.8-10); by saṁsarga (a term not elsewhere used) is doubtless intended the degree of approximation of the articulating organs, as contact (spargana, ii.33), approach (upasañhāra, ii.31), and the like (ii.14,16,45 etc.); sthāna, 'place, position,' and karana, 'producing organ,' are the familiar names given respectively to the more passive and the more active of the two parts of the mouth by whose contact or approach the sound receives its articulate character (vinnyaya, which the commentator explains by vinnyāsa [B. reads this in the rule itself], seems to be added more to make up the verse than for the sake of its meaning); parimāna, 'measure' (used only here), is synonymous with kāla, 'time, quantity' (see i.31-37). The commentator takes a as an example, and says of it that its "emitted material" is tone; its "closure," in the throat; its "position," the two jaws; and its "disposition of producing organ," the two lips. Excepting in the first item, this is blundering work: a is, of all the alphabetic sounds, the one least easy to try by the tests laid down in this rule; and the commentator would have done well to choose some more manageable illustration.

3. Sound combined with articulation is the origin of voice.

The commentator defines prkta by miçra, 'mixed,' and utpatti

सप्त वाच स्थानानि भवन्ति ॥ ४ ॥

4. Of voice, there are seven qualities.

Here is a different and expanded version of the doctrine of three qualities, as laid down above, in rule xxii.11. The following rules give the details. The commentator gives of sthāna the lucid definition "those whereby the voice is put to use, and that wherein it stands—that is sthāna."

उपाशुधाननिमदोपब्दिमन्मन्द्रमध्यमताराणि ॥ ५ ॥

5. Namely, inaudible, murmur, whisper, mumbling, soft, middle, and loud.

The rules that follow define the senses in which we are to understand the terms here given. They indicate plainly enough a continual progression, from inaudible and merely mental utterance up to loud and distinct speaking; but it is not easy to find words which shall represent them closely.

कर्णवदशब्दममनःप्रयोगमुपाशु ॥ ६ ॥

6. "Inaudible" is without sound, without application of mind, but with articulating action.

The commentator explains karaṇavat by prayatnavat, 'with effort,' and states its object to be to deny absolute silence to the upāṅgu. "Without sound" signifies the exceeding littleness of sound in this mode of utterance. "Without application of mind" excludes any intentional use of udātta etc. This last is not very satisfactory; and, indeed, we should as soon expect the contrary term, manahprayoga, 'with application of mind,' to be read, as indicating an utterance in which the mind does its full part, though not the voice also (G. M., in fact, read it in the rule).

7. "Murmur" is inaudibleness of syllables and consonants.

The commentator explains akshara, 'syllables,' as meaning here 'vowels,' but there seems no need of refusing the word its ordinary signification. Inaudibleness, we are further told, being a characteristic of upāṅgu also, it is here again specified in order to teach that there is no actual sound heard. Of what follows, a great part has dropped out in B. G. M., and is much corrupted in the other two manuscripts, so as to be very obscure. The separate mention of syllables and consonants is for the sake of clearness (?), and indicates exceeding inaudibleness: and there is added a comparison with tame and wild cattle, of which I fail to make any sense. Others say that the inaudibleness is of s, h, and so'on. All of which is very trivial and unedifying.

I have rendered nimada by 'whisper' rather at a venture: whether the word accurately represents it or not is at any rate of very small consequence.

. मशब्दमुपब्दिमत् ॥ १ ॥

9. "Mumbling" is the same, with sound.

Ṣabda would seem to be used here in the sense of nāda, 'tone,' if the definition is to be made anything of; the term upabdimat is found in the Tāittirīya-Saṁhitā (at iii.1.9¹), used in antithesis to upāṅgu.

उरसि मन्द्रं कण्ठे मध्यमं शिरसि तारम् ॥ १० ॥

10. "Soft" is in the chest, "middle" in the throat, "loud" in the head.

The South-Indian manuscripts (G. M.) divide this rule into three, and break up the comment into three corresponding parts, without other change. I presume that the treatment of the whole as one rule is more original; the subject joins on, as it were, to rule xxii. 11, and gives the received doctrine as to the mode of production of the three qualities of voice there laid down. And the distinction of the four other qualities by which "soft" shades off into utter inaudibility is a later addition to the doctrine—one of those pieces of useless over-refinement which are thoroughly characteristic of the Hindu mode of working.

The commentator points out that the first four of the seven sthānas described in this chapter are used "in sacrifices etc.;" and the last three, at the morning, noon, and evening savanas, or somalibrations, respectively. And he quotes "from the Ṣikshā" a pair of verses which are found in the Rik-version of the pāṇinīya Ṣikshā (verses 36,37; see Weber's Indische Studien, iv.363-4), to the effect that "in early morning, one must always read with chest-tone, resembling the growl of the tiger; at noon, with throat-tone,

The Rik Pr. (xiii.17) teaches the same three sthānas, but calls the third uttama instead of tāra. The Vāj. Pr. (i.10,30) lays down their number and their place of production (assigning to the third the bhrūmadhya, 'middle of the brows,' instead of śiras, 'head'), but gives them no specific names. We cannot well avoid regarding them as involving a difference of pitch, as well as of force or loudness of utterance; the first is low, the third high and shrill, the other intermediate between them, or at the ordinary natural pitch of the voice. They answer to the lower, middle, and upper "registers" of a voice; and our modern musical theory recognizes an analogous distinction of chest-tone and head-tone. Each register, as the following rules go on to explain, is divided into seven tones or pitches.

मन्द्रादिषु त्रिषु स्थानेषु सप्तसप्त यमाः ॥११॥

11. In the three qualities beginning with "soft," there are seven tones each.

As synonym of yama, the commentator gives svara, doubtless here to be understood as 'musical note, tone of the gamut;' he adds 'acute, and so on,' which might be said blunderingly, as if the word he had just given meant 'accent' instead of 'musical tone,' or also intelligently, as implying the identity of accent with musical pitch—an identity which is the ground of their common appellation.

The same statement, as to the seven yamas or 'tones' in each sthāna, 'register' or 'scale,' and the same identification with the svaras, are made in the Rik Prāt. (xiii.17). We are to assume, without much question, that the scales pass into one another by a constant ascending series, like the bass and soprano scales in our own system of musical notation.

कृष्टप्रथमद्वितीयतृतीयचतुर्थमन्द्रातिस्वार्याः ॥ १२ ॥

12. Namely kṛshṭa, first, second, third, fourth, mandra, and atisvārya.

These are not the ordinary names of the seven notes of the Hindu scale, or svaras (for which, see Jones "on the Musical Modes of the Hindus," As. Res., vol. iii.; Weber's Indische Studien, viii.259 ff.); but they are, apparently, alternative appellations for the same thing; they are given by Uvaṭa, in his comment on Rik Prāt. xiii.17, as used sāmusu, 'in the sāmans,' or 'in the Sāma-Veda' (Müller's Rik Pr., p. cclxxii.). Uvaṭa calls the first krushta, instead of kṛshṭa, and the same is the reading of G. M. in our rules and their commentary, as also of T. in rule 14 only (Müller, l. c., p. cclxxiii., marginal note, states krushta or kushṭa to be the reading of O. also, but the maker of my collation does not note the fact, except once, under rule 14, in putting in on the margin a passage inserted out of place).

13. Of these, the perception is born of brightness.

I have simply translated the problematical word diptijā literally, without claiming to understand what it signifies. The comment throws no light upon it, nor do I get any from any other quarter. The former says merely that the perception of each preceding one is "born from the brightness" of its successor; namely, the perception of mandra from that of atisvārya; that of the fourth, from mandra; and so on through the series. Perhaps the expression is nothing more than one violently figurative, signifying that each tone receives light from, or is set in its true light by, the rest, or the ones or one nearest it: only, in that case, we should look for some word combined with dīpti to indicate the source of the light.

Müller (under Rik Prāt. xiii.17, r. deccli.) surmises that the present rule may mean the same thing with the rule of the Rik Prāt. anantaraḥ cā 'tra yamo 'viśeshah, which he translates 'in these three places (sthāna) a yama without another yama is undistinguishable.' It is very doubtful, however, whether he is justified in rendering anantara by 'not having another,' and whether his rule is not rather intended to signify that the three scales pass directly into one another, the first note of the second being equivalent to an eighth of the first, and so on.

14. "Second," "first," and kr̥ṣṭa are the three tones of the Āhvārakas.

This rule makes a śloka with the one that follows: which is, of course, a marked indication that both are interpolated here. The same thing may be inferred from the fact that rule 15 teaches nothing which is not found also in 16.

The comment adds nothing whatever to our understanding of the rule.

The Āhvārakas are mentioned in the Caranavyūha (paragraph 12: see Weber's Indische Studien, iii.257) as holders of one śākhā of the Yajur-Veda.

मन्द्रादयो द्वितीयास्ताश्चत्वारस्तैत्तिरीयकाः ॥ १५ ॥

15. The four beginning with mandra and ending with "second" are those of the Tāittirīyas.

This second half-verse, as already pointed out, is superfluous in view of the next rule, which treats the same subject, and much more explicitly.

16. According to the Tāittirīyas, the mandra proceeds from the "second," and the "third" and "fourth" come next after: this they style the tone-quaternion.

The order of the four tones is not made entirely clear by this rule, nor by the commentator's explanation of it. The latter says that "the mandra of the Tāittirīyas is born or produced from the 'second;'" and, if the expression be used in a manner akin with those under rule 13, this would imply that the mandra came first, and the "second" after—which would, of course, accord best with the value of the two names: mandra would thus be the lowest of the four yamas, as it is the lowest of the three sthānas. But the commentator then goes on to say that the series of yamas thus "beginning with 'second'" is styled tone-quaternion: and this would imply that the order is second, mandra, third, fourth. Yet further, he adds that "second" is udātta, mandra is anudātta, and "third" and "fourth" are svarita and pracaya. This makes the impression of a purely formal and unintelligent identification, or a forcing through of a parallelism between the four tones and the four accepted accents (which, however, are in respect to tone only three, since the pracaya is "of udātta tone," xxi.10), without the slightest regard to the already defined tonic quality of the accents. The comment, in truth, through this whole subject, seems to be written with a very insufficient comprehension of the meaning of the text: see especially the rules that follow.

Our attention is called to the fact that the preceding rule laid down the number of the Tāittirīya yamas, the present one undertaking nothing more than to describe their order; and that the intention of the last words of the rule is therefore simply to give a name to the series. I have pointed out above, however, that rules 14 and 15 seem to have been put in by themselves, without any regard to 16.

17. In it, progression is by intervals of two tones.

I have rendered this rule according to what seems to me most likely to be its real meaning—although, at the same time, I do not feel by any means confident that I understand it correctly. If the Tāittirīyas acknowledge only four notes in the scale or octave, it seems natural that they should fix these at wider intervals from one another; and the phraseology of the rule is well enough calculated to express this. The verification or rejection of my version may be left till we shall better comprehend the Hindu musical system, and its modification or adaptation as here presented. I am, at any rate, persuaded that my guess is more likely to be right than either of the two which the commentator ventures. Of these, the first is nothing less than absurd: it makes tasmin refer to anudattu, although such an antecedent can only have tumbled in out of the clouds, there having been nothing whatever to suggest it in the preceding rules; and renders ‘in this anudatta there is a being-within of two yamas; that is to say, in anudattu inheres the quality of svarita and also that of pracaya!’ And, as examples of this wonderful anudattu, are quoted sū nah parshat (not found in the Tāittirīya-Saṁhitā, but occurs Rig-Veda i.99.1; x.187.1-5; and Atharva-Veda vii.63.1), and pāry avatātām (i.7.22).

The commentator’s second guess is so far better than his first that he gives the obviously correct interpretation of tasmin, as referring to caturyamam in the preceding rule; but he makes out the meaning to be that, in this series of svaras, two are contained in the interior, or are included between the other two. And he cites a verse: "anudātta is to be known as in the heart; udātta is uttered in the head; svarita is at the root of the ears (or of the throat, as G. M. have it); pracaya is declared to be in the whole member (or to belong to the whole mouth, W. says);" the meaning of which he states to be that svarita and pracaya are found between udātta and anudātta—forgetting that under the previous rule he had assigned them a different position. Further, he says that the interior position of svarita and pracaya is shown in Kāu-haleya's system of motions of the hand, as appears from the verse "the chief of the digits (i. e. the thumb) points out udātta when its apex is applied to the root of the forefinger; when to the last but one (i. e. the ring-finger) and to the middle finger, it points out the svarita and the dhṛta; when to the little finger, the anudātta." This verse occurs in the Rik-version of the pāṇinīya Çikshâ (as verse 43: see Weber's Indische Studien, iv. 365): the commentator does not regard it as a Çikshâ verse, but adds yet another which he claims to take from his Çikshâ, although it is not found in either version of the known treatise of that name (but compare verse 44, l. c., p. 366): "the little finger, the ring-finger, the middle finger, and the forefinger—these, along with the tip of the thumb, severally point out the grave, circumflex, dhṛta, and acute accents." The pracaya is here twice called dhṛta, and it again, apparently, receives the same name in the last rule of the chapter (unfortunately, I overlooked these passages when commenting on the term dhṛtapracaya in rule xviii.3): "sustained" or "continued" is a sufficiently natural substitute for pracaya, as appellation of the accent in question.

I do not understand precisely what and how much credit the commentator intends to claim for these two explanations in calling them (in his final remark) mukhya: if he means that they are the best among a number which had been suggested and might have been reported, it is so much the worse for the rest.

18. That progression we will set forth.

The commentator declares tām here to bring forward solely the word vṛttim from the preceding rule (not that word with its qualifications), and the vṛtti aimed at to be the fourfold progression of the caturyama taught in rules 16 and 19. This is, of course, forced and unacceptable. I imagine that, on the contrary, in the oral tradition of the Prāṭicākhya, an uttered illustration of the four tones, separated by double intervals and so covering the whole octave, was given—which illustration, of course, could not be set down in the written text.

19. That is what is called the quaternion of tones.

This is naturally enough explainable as a winding-up remark, after the exemplification of the four Tāittirīya tones notified in the preceding rule has been duly given. To the commentator, it is a mere repetition of what had been already stated above, in rules 15 and 16; and he excuses it as being intended, under the guise of a summing-up, to confirm the view laid down, and repel other opinions inconsistent with it. For, he adds, some people hold the doctrine that there are three svaras only, as appears from the half-verse “acute, grave, and circumflex are the three accents.” This verse (from the pāṇinīya Çikshā) was quoted in full above, under rule xxi.1; and W. adds the second half of it here also.

The futility of this exposition, as well as of much that precedes it, will, I think, be obvious to any one. Instead of tracing and pointing out the relation which actually exists between the accents and the yamas, and letting us see what musical intervals are re-

20. It must be uttered with krama and vikrama, not hurried, not delayed, with grave, acute, and circumflex accent, with pracaya, and even.

The commentator supplies vṛttim as the subject of all these attributes, accounting for it as derived from rule 17, above. This is hardly admissible; but what is to be understood instead is doubtful, depending upon the connection in which this verse may have stood in the text from which it was taken. The same connection would perhaps explain what krama and vikrama are to be regarded as meaning: the commentator defines krama by dvitva, 'duplication' (taught in chapter xiv.), and vikrama as the accent of that name prescribed at xix.1,2; but it seems very unlikely that two things so dissimilar would be thus combined, or that a detail of accent would not be put in the second line, with the rest of its kind (compare rule xxiv.6, where krama and vikrama are found again in conjunction). Dhṛta is defined as synonymous with pracaya: compare the note to rule 17, above. Samām means, we are told, 'free from the faults of deficiency and excess in the matter of udātta and the other accents.'

There are slight variations of reading in the rule, T. giving adhrutām in pāda b; B. svāra for svāra in c; W. G. M. having vade for vaded, and W. drutavatiṅ and T. dratur- after it; but they are mere errors of scribes, as the comment plainly shows.

2. Word-text, syllable-text, letter-text, and member-text, namely.

Here is a very curious and problematical enumeration and designation of saṁhitās. The commentator divides up among them the teachings of the Prātiśākhya. To the "word-text" he assigns chapters v.-ix., xi., xii., and xiii. 1-4—that is to say, the great body of rules for the combination of pada-text into saṁhitā. To the "syllable-text" he assigns chapter x., which has to do chiefly with such euphonic combinations of vowels as make one syllable out of two. With the "letter-text" are concerned chapters xiii. (i. e. except rules 1-4), xiv., and xvi., mainly occupied with the subjects of duplication and of the occurrence in the Sanhitā of ṇ and ñ, otherwise than as these are results of the rules of euphonic combination. And the "member-text" is said to be taught in chapter

xxi. (rules 1-9), which prescribes of what vowel each consonant shall be regarded as "member" or adjunct, or lays down the rules of syllabication. And it is added that whatever is prescribed or forbidden elsewhere than in [the rules belonging to each of] these is of force in all the different texts, unless there be some special restriction, as by the use of the word ārsha (ix.21; x.13) or the like.

It is unnecessary to point out that the Prāticākhya contemplates no such division of its rules and restriction of their application as is here made, and that, unless the distinction of texts laid down in the rule means something different from what the commentator explains it to be, it is trivial and worthless.

3. Conjunction of independent words by euphonic combination is called word-text.

The commentator first explains saindhāna as modifying saṁyoga in quality of a locative, and then declares the use of the two equivalent terms to be for the purpose of signifying the exceeding closeness of the combination (if, as I presume to be the case, the reading of B. is here the correct one). And he quotes the rule of Pāṇini (i.4.109) as what "the grammarians" say upon the subject, giving the definition of saṁhita or combined text. As example of word-text, he gives agne dudhra guhyu kiñçila vanya yā ta ishuh (v.5.9¹: only G. M. have ishuh).

This interpretation makes padasaṁhita signify what we are wont to call saṁhita simply, in distinction from padapāṭha, or pada-saṁhita as usually employed, 'pada-text.'

4. And in like manner with the syllable-text and the rest, in accordance with their several names.

The commentator explains yathāsvam as signifying 'it goes on without exceeding that which is its own,' and pronounces it a 'distinction of office or use;' thus, namely, the peculiar form of all the other specified texts is to be determined; the combination of independent syllables is syllable-text—and so on. And he quotes three passages from the text, by way of illustration: athā 'bravīt (iii.2.11³), adhishavanam asi (i.1.5²), and akshnayā vyāghārayati (v.2.7⁵ et al.). Of these, the first is an example of the combination of two separate syllables (vowels) into one syllable, by a rule (2) of the tenth chapter; the second, of the occurrence of ṇ after sh, by rule xiii.6,7; the third offers (like almost any other pair of words in the Sanhitā) cases of the division of consonant-groups, akshsht-īna-yāv-vyā- etc. Or, by a different treatment of the successive distinctions, it is said that the combination of two vowels alone is "syllable-text;" that of a vowel and consonant in one word is "letter-text;" that of consonants alone in one word (consonants being "members" or adjuncts of vowels, xxi.1) is "member-text;" anything else than these is "word-text."

It appears from all this that saṁhitā is here used nearly in the sense of saṁdhi, 'euphonic combination,' and that these four rules have no significance whatever, being a mere bit of outside classification, in which some one has amused himself by indulging.

The commentator explains vedabhāṣhām as meaning either 'voice having the form of Veda,' i. e. the uttered material of the Veda, or (according to another sense of bhāṣhā) 'explanation of the Veda.' The particle tu in the last half-verse (which I have omitted in translating, as being a mere expletive or pādapūrana), he states to mean that the reader referred to must by all means understand all this, but not any one besides. And he adds at the end that viññeya indicates the peremptoriness of the rule, there being risk of harm in the absence of the required knowledge, as is shown by the verse "a mantra deficient in respect to accent or to letters" etc. This is the familiar verse, found in the pāṇiniya Çikshā (verse 52: see Weber's Indische Studien, iv.367-8), and quoted times innumerable in Hindu works, where the present subject is under consideration: O. alone adds the second pāda, "being falsely applied, does not express the intended sense;" the rest is, "it, an uttered thunderbolt, harms the sacrificer, like the word indraçatru [when used by Tvashtar] with false accent."

The rest of the comment is occupied with illustration of the points referred to in the rule, along with now and then a few words of explanation. For "heavy" quality (see xxii.14) is cited vashat svāhā (vii.3.12); for "light" (see xxii.15), akuruta (v.5.8¹ et al.: W. B. give instead akurvata [i.7.3³ et al.], which is less acceptable, as containing also a heavy syllable). Sāmya, 'evenness, sameness,' is defined as implying that, of two elements compared, there is—in respect to place and organ of articulation, quantity, etc.—sameness (so G. M., but B. O. read 'bigness' instead, and W. has 'steadiness'): what is really meant, is obscure; we may compare the use of the adjective sama in xxiii.20. The examples for short, long, and protracted, respectively, are gamayati (i.7.3⁴ et al.), vāyāv evā 'sya (vi.3.7⁴), and astu hīs iti (vii.1.6¹: G. M. omit iti). Elision is instanced by im 'andriśu (iv.1.8²: see above, v.12); increment, by trapuṣ ca me (iv.7.5¹: see above, v.4); euphonic conversion, by sam indra no manasā (i.4.44¹: only O. has manāsa: a case under vii.2). To illustrate prakṛti, 'original condition,' are given three phrases, agne dudhra gahya kiñcila vanya yā te (v.5.9¹: W. B. end with kiñcila, and G. M. with vanya; and G. M. O. omit agne), prapā usi (ii.5.12⁴), and na mi- thunī abhavan (v.3.6²: G. M. omit na). Of these, the second is a case under x.13; the third, under x.18: both exhibiting a vowel which irregularly remains prakṛtyā, or exempt from alteration. But the particular bearing of the first example on the point of prakṛti is more obscure: the phrase is one in which the saṃhitā-reading is (except in respect to accent) the same with the pada; and this, probably, is the reason why it is taken. Compare the comment and note to v.2, where this part of the rule now in hand is quoted. For vikrama is given the word vādāhavé (i.6.2¹ et al.), of which the second syllable has the accent called vikrama, by xix. 1. Krama is again (as under xxiii.20) defined as 'duplication,' and a phrase is quoted containing a case that calls for duplicated utterance, yad vāi hotā (iii.2.9¹: i. e. yad dvāi, by xiv.1): O. adds another of like character, yad venoh (v.1.1⁴). We are permitted to doubt, however, here as at xxiii.20, whether these terms were intended by the maker of the rule in the sense which the commentator assigns to them. The three accents are instanced, in their order as mentioned, by gām vā'vā tāt tāt (i.7. 2²), and avadatām . . . I: is made to rule ii.5 as defining "breath," and as example of breath-sounds, or surd consonants, is cited pūshā te (i.1.2²: B. has instead pūte, and W. pūrte, which occurs at iv.7.13⁵). Rule ii.4, again, is referred to as defining "tone" or sonant utterance, and the example is bhāgadhe bhāgadāhā (ii.5.6⁶). Finally, aṅgam, which I have rendered 'adjunction,' is interpreted as alluding to the subject of syllabication (xix.1 etc.), and a phrase is quoted, tam matsyaḥ prā'bravīt (ii.6. 6¹), which we are to divide tam-mat-thsya-prāb-bravīt.

The verses composing this rule are found in a passage prefixed to the proper text of the Rik Prāt. (see Müller's edition, p. viii.).

This verse also is prefixed to the Rik Prât. (Müller, p. viii.).

The commentator gives a merely mechanical explanation of the two terms composing the first half-verse, without telling us what he understands them really to mean. Doubtless the pada-krama is that which is commonly known as the "krama-text," and for the construction of which the other Prâtigākhyas (Rik Pr. x, xi; Vāj. Pr. iv.179-194; Ath. Pr. iv.101-126) give full directions; and the varṇa-krama is the text with duplicated consonants, according to the rules of our fourteenth chapter. The compound svaramātrāvibhāga we are taught to treat as a dependent one; we might also be tempted to regard it as copulative, and to understand vibhāga in the sense of 'separation' (as in pada-text etc.), as in the only other place where it occurs in the treatise (iii.1). "Going to the assembly of teachers" is interpreted to signify not merely the sitting with them on earth, but the enjoyment with them of the abode of felicity, the brahmaloka—it being explained (except in G. M.) that "the teachers" are Vyāsa and his like. Then, apropos of this promise of heaven to those versed in the class of subjects of which the Prâtigākhyas treat, the commentator proceeds to quote from various purāṇas and kindred works the praises and promises there given to those who teach the Veda.

Thus, from the Garuda-purāṇa: "Of all kinds of knowledge, that of the Veda is called highest; hence, he who communicates that wins heaven and final beatitude. As chief of all sciences has been produced the brahma-science; hence, he who is devoted to giving it will receive the whole recompense of giving." From the Devī-purāṇa: "To those twice born, the Veda is the chief means of obtaining good things; hence, by application to the reading of the Veda one attains the highest brahma. To that let him who is wise especially devote himself; that let him deliver over to pupils; by application to that and communication of it what is there that one does not attain?" From Yājñavalkya: "Above all sacrifices, and ascetic practices, and pure works, the Veda is the highest means of felicity to the twice-born ones. The Brahman who, not reading the Vedas, expends his labor in other directions—he quickly falls, while living, into the condition of a Çūdra, and his posterity with him" (the latter of these two verses, which is not given by W. B., is found in Manu, at ii.168). From the Mahābhārata: "Whoever shall repeat to pupils the religious, sacred Sarasvatī, he shall gain a reward equal to that from the giving of land and kine." From the Vishnudharmottara-purāṇa: "By imparting the Veda, a man attains all the fruits of sacrifices; by imparting an upaveda, he shares in the bliss of the Gandharvas." From the Brahma-purāṇa: "That reward cannot be told in a thousand æons, which, oh sage! one obtains by even a very little teaching of the Veda." And from the Bhavishyat-purāṇa: "The sonless obtains sons; the poor becomes rich; but he who is ever devoted to the study of the Veda is dissolved in the highest brahma."

Next we are told the characteristic form of the Veda: "The Yajur-Veda is brown-eyed, slim-waisted, big-throated, big-cheeked, black-footed, dusky, born of the family of Kaçyapa." If there is (as may be the case) real meaning hidden under these apparently senseless epithets, it escapes my discovery.

Once more, the vedāṅgas and upāṅgas are rehearsed: the former, in the usual number and with the usual names: the latter, as anupada, ānupada (?), chandobhāshā, mīmāṃsā, nyāya, and tarka—the first two of these last are elsewhere called pratipada and anupadu (see Weber's Indische Studien, iii.260–261, and the St. Petersburg Lexicon).

With this, in W. B., the Tribhāshyaratna ends; but G. M. O. have an added passage, the bearing of which is not in all points quite clear to me. It begins with stating that he who reads the Veda thus accompanied by the uṅgas and upāṅgas, and with knowledge of the characteristic form and family, becomes purified. A verse then follows, in which it appears to be laid down how far the rules of the Prātiśākhya have force: namely, as regards other texts, and passages which are not the subject of sūtras and are of human authorship (?). By way of illustration, nine passages are quoted, not one of which is to be found in the Sanhitā proper, although five are from its endings of sections, or the summaries of words with which the divisions of sections (half-centuries, kāṇḍikās) conclude: they are pra nakshatrāya devyāya (G. M. omit dēryāya, and O. begins anaksh-), sa im mamāda mahi karma kartave (O. omits karma: Tāittirīya-Brāhmaṇa ii.5.8⁹; Rig-Veda ii.22.1), māhī-saptadagend'vasyurātīh (from the ending of iv.4.12), apī-sīda-mithunay ashtāu ca (from the ending of vi.5.8), and asmīns-tanuva-stuhi-pinākam (from the ending to iv.5.10): in these the rules are said not to hold good; and siṅhe vyāghra uta yā prdākāu (Tāittirīya-Brāhmaṇa ii.7.7¹; Atharva-Veda vi.38.1; Kāthaka xxxvi.15), dvādaśa 'gnishtomasya stotrāni (O. stotroni), ātmanāparā-nish-pra-śukraśocishā (from the ending of vi.4.10; G. M. stops at pra), and uśmasi-posham ekānnarīṅcatig ca (ending of i.3.6; G. M. stop at posham), in which the rules are said to hold good. So much as this, now, seems clear: that the first two quotations in each class are given as coming from some other Vedic text than the Tāittirīya-

Sanhitā (I should guess that they would all prove to occur in the Brāhmaṇa or Āraṇyaka), and that the first class are offered as containing cases of combination at variance with the rules of the Prāticākhya, while in the second class these rules are observed throughout. Thus, in the first example, vii.4 would require naksh- after pra; in the second, v.12 would require im 'amāda; in the third, the s of sapta should be sh by vi.2; in the fourth, the i of mīthunī should remain unchanged by x.18; in the fifth, osmīn is not included among the words which by vi.14 have an increment of s before t. In the other class, on the contrary, agnishtomasya follows vi.2, nish pra is by viii.24 and 35 (see the comment to viii. 35, where the passage is quoted as illustration), and uḥmasī by iii. 13; the first example has nothing but cases under the general laws of enphony. I conjecture, then, that the na in the second line of the introductory verse is to be amended to ca; and that we are instructed that the rules of the treatise are followed, outside the Sanhitā proper, only according to the nature of each particular case, or even by arbitrary choice. If there is any definite system according to which the phonetic peculiarities of the Sanhitā are observed or neglected in putting together the endings of sections and other divisions, I, at any rate, have not been at the pains to study it out, and the work belongs rather to an editor of the Sanhitā than to an editor of the Prāticākhya: it seems somewhat strange to find the prolonged i of uḥmasī retained in the ending, while the uncombinable character of the final of mīthunī is neglected.

There can be little question that the passage here treated is an appendage to the proper text of the Tribhāshyaratna, which, with the Prāticākhya, takes in general (the only exception is at viii.35) no account of the subdivisions of anuvākas.

By way of conclusion, the remark is added that the repetition of the final words of the rule indicates the end of the treatise. This is not to be approved, for the repetition is simply that which is made at the end of every chapter, and so shows nothing more than the conclusion of the chapter.

CONCLUDING NOTE.

It seems desirable to present here, at the end of the work, a discussion and exposition of certain points which could not be connectedly or fully treated in the notes upon the rules.

A first important question is that of the relation of the Prâṭiçākhyā to the known text of the Black Yajur-Veda, or to the Tāittiriya-Saṁhitā.

In considering this question, it is impossible to separate entirely the Prâṭiçākhyā itself from its commentary. The former does not quote passages in its rules, but defines situations or specifies words, singly or in combination. Sometimes, indeed, either of these virtually amounts to the citation of a passage; but, in the great majority of cases, only the commentator can inform us what are the passages had in view. For example, we may regard eshtah (viii.18) as in effect a reference to i.2.11¹ and vi.2.2⁶; but the words cited in viii.8 (as abibhar, akar, punar, pitar) are indefinite in their indications, and it would be impossible to say that any given passage in the Saṁhitā in which one of these words occurs either was or was not contemplated by the makers of the rule. I shall therefore present in connection with one another the evidence derivable from the text itself and that from the comment.

There are four words or parts of words specified in the Prâṭiçākhyā-text which are not to be found in the Tāittiriya-Saṁhitā: they are stanutar (viii.8), carshan (xiii.13), jīgivā (xvi.13), and jighāsi (xvi.18). It is very remarkable, however, that each of these is a kind of reflex or varied repetition of another word preceding it in the same rule: thus, we have sanutu stanutah, carman carshan, jīgivā jīgivā, and jigāsi jighāsi. And this, taken in connection with the fact that all of them appear to be in themselves unguanine, never having been found, so far as I am aware, in any Vedic text, and being, at least in part, impossible or highly implausible forms, is sufficient to stamp them as probable corruptions, blundering intrusions into the Prâṭiçākhyā, and of no force to prove that the latter was made for a text that contained them.

The cases are much more numerous in which the commentator declares the Prâṭiçākhyā to have in contemplation phrases not to be found in the Saṁhitā. They are nearly all of this kind: in iv. 11, viçākhe is declared pragraha; now the word is divided in pada-text, vi-çākhe, and çākhe is by itself a pada (according to i. 48); and therefore, unless there were some other çākhe not a pragraha in the Saṁhitā, it would be enough to cite çākhe alone in the rule; hence, as the citation of bhāgadhe (p. bhāga-dhe) just before implies that the maker of the rule had in view such a word as uda-dhe, whose dhe was not pragraha, so the citation of viçākhe is declared to have in view such a word as sahasra-çākhe, not a pragraha, "in another text." The phrases thus quoted from outside the Saṁhitā by the commentator are as follows: under iv.11, tas- mint sahasraçākhe, ūrdhve çastre pratishṭhite, brahmasāme pratishṭhite, agnidhrte, and prathamaje; under iv.12, paçuçrapaṇī (or bhasmaçrapaṇī); under iv.15, tum (or tām) āhurī hvayante (or rā-cayati), hūti punar (or manar) juhōti, and huti tasmād vivāh (or evāh); under iv.37, indrāgnī havāmahe; under vi.5, pramatis te devānām; under xi.3, as beginning of an anuvāka, dhātā derebhyo 'surān; under xi.16, gayasphāno 'gnishu. All this, in my view, is false and arbitrary interpretation; the Prāṭicākhya is less careful to limit itself to the minimum citabile than the commentator would fain have it, and it quotes, for example, the whole word viçākhe instead of -çākhe alone, simply because çākhe occurs as pragraha only in that word.* The same implication is appealed to by the commentator under xi.9,15, xii.3, xvi.12 (though without actual citation of phrases), to explain away what would otherwise be inaccuracies in the Prāṭicākhya; nalam plovam is given under xiii.16, in the course of the unjustifiable exposition of that rule; and brahmāṇ, though found in the Sanhitā, is credited under xv. 8 to another çākḥā. I do not regard anything in this whole class of cases as authorizing us to suppose that the Prāṭicākhya had in view a text including anything not found in the Tāittirīya-Sanhitā.

Next, as to citations made in the commentary as if from the text to which the Prāṭicākhya relates, but not found in the Sanhitā. And here I have first to report a few phrases which are among those occurring only in the manuscripts that came last to my hands, and which escaped my notice when preparing for my last search through the Sanhitā, so that I have not looked for them (not having had the courage to undertake the long and tedious quest through the Sanhitā a fourth time for so little). They are achā-vākah (xiv.5), uccā ratnam ayajantu (ii.49), tasmād varāpam (xx.3), dārgyaṇ hi (xxi.16), naç cid ati (xiv.10), prāgnāti (xiv.9), and brhaspati sārāpate (xiv.10). Respecting several of these, it is doubtful whether they are not mere corruptions of phrases actually found and referred. Then there is kaviçastah (xvi.2), instead of which, by an error, I sought and found kaviçastāh. There remain, of quotations hunted for but not discovered, the following: adya vasu vasati 'ti 'ndram eva (x.10: O. only), anv enum mātā (xx.1: Weber refers me for this to Çāṅkh. vi.17.2 [?], Ācval. iii.3; also Āit. Brāh. ii.6), ahorātre pārçre (viii.7: only W. and [?] O.: found in Tāitt. Ār. iii.13.2), uta gravasā prthivīm mitrasya (v.12: only G. M.), upārçhuty askandāya (x.9: only G. M.), catuṛhotā (ii.25: Tāitt. Br. ii.2.3²), brahmāudanam pacati (x.7: Tāitt. Br. i.1.9³), yaç chandasām (xiv.10: O. only), yā prāci dik (iv.33: W. B. O.), varshābhyah (xiv.16: but I am not certain that I did not satisfy myself with varshyābhyah and omit to search for this), varshyebhiḥ (xiv.16: O. only, and it reads varshebbhiḥ), gitikanthāya svāhā (xiii.11: only G. M.), and sa nah parshat (xxiii.17: Rig-V. i.99.1 et al.).

Along with these may properly be reported the few phrases which are quoted by the comment, confessedly or impliedly from outside the text contemplated by the Prātiçākhyā. Thus, we have under xviii.1 the beginning and concluding words of the Tāittirīya-Brāhmaṇa and the Tāittirīya-Āraṇyaka (that is to say, of the latter, the concluding words, āi 'va tapāti, of the fifth prapāthaka, with which, accordingly, to the apprehension of our commentator, the whole treatise appears to have ended); under xxiv.6 are given (by G. M. O.) dvādaçā 'gnishtomasya stotrāni, pra nakshatrāya devyāya, sa im mamāda mahi karma kartuive (Tāitt. Br. ii.5.8⁹ etc.), and siñhe vyāghra uta yā prdākāu (Tāitt. Br. ii.7.7¹ etc.); in a quoted verse under xxi.6 is read ṛtasya dhūrshadam (Tāitt. Br. i.2.1¹² etc.); and the comment to xix.3 has yo 'pām pushpam veda.

Finally, we note that the comment gives, under xviii.1, a word, bandhuh, which ought to form the conclusion of the Sanhitā, by its own count, but which is lost in the known manuscripts.

In all this, again, there is no satisfactory evidence that the Sanhitā of the Prātiçākhyā or its commentators was other than the one we know. The missing citations are in part found in a minority of the MSS.; in part, they are perhaps corruptions; in part, they are likely to have been taken by an error of the quoter's recollection from some other Tāittirīya-text—and the remainder, if there be a remainder, is too scanty to prove anything.

When we come farther to inquire whether any part of the Tāittirīya-Sanhitā as it exists was not before the authors of the Prātiçākhyā, we seem to be brought to the same negative result. There are, to be sure, here and there points in the text which the rules do not cover, but we have reason only to wonder that in executing so immense and intricate a task as that undertaken by the Prātiçākhyā there should have been so few oversights. These, so far as they have been discovered, have been pointed out in the notes; I recapitulate them here. The word rakshā (p. rakshāh), at i.4.24, should have been exempted in some way from the operation of rule iii.8, which requires its ā to be shortened when separated from the following word. Devī, at vi.1.77, is made pragraha by the strict letter of rule i.61 (see under i.59), though the passage in which it occurs is not one to which that rule was meant to apply. In the rehearsal of cases of elision or non-elision of initial a (chapters xi. and xii.), there are a couple of cases which the commentator is driven into attempting to provide for by forced and false interpretations of the rules (see under i.61 for ye 'ntarikshe at iv.5.11², and under xi.3 for ye aparishu at i.4.33); and I have noted beside (under xii.8, at the end) only so agnih at v.2.3³ as unaccounted for thus far (its companion ease, ūrdhvo asthāt, is read first in an ukhya-passage, at iv.2.14, as Prof. Weber has pointed out to me; and so agnih may yet find a like solution). And in the enumeration of cases of interior ñ (see under xvi.26), two compound words appear to have been overlooked, snādushaṇsaduh (iv.6.6³) and strī-shaṇśadam (ii.5.1⁵).

I would repeat here, what I have already said, that my testing of the precise adaptation of the Prātiṣākhya to the Saṁhitā is not absolute, since I possess neither an index verborum to the latter nor a pada-manuscript, and my results will probably admit of rectification in some points—but I trust not to any such extent as should invalidate the general conclusion.

This conclusion is, that the Prātiṣākhya probably contemplates the same text, neither more nor less, as that which constitutes the Tāittirīya-Saṁhitā, the only śākhā left us (unless the Kāṭhaka be regarded as another) of the many which formerly represented the Black Yajur-Veda. The name Tāittirīya-Prātiṣākhya, then, is both a convenient and a suitable one to be applied to the treatise.

If, however, this name be understood as implying that the text-book emanates directly from the Tāittirīya school, its propriety is much more questionable. Besides the numerous teachers and “holders of śākhās” referred to in the rules, whose names in some cases are related with those of traditional schools of the Black Yajus (see Weber’s notes to the Caranavyūha, in his Indische Studien, iii.256 ff.), three schools are mentioned by name, those of the Mīmāṃsakas (v.41), Āhvarakas (xxiii.14), and Tāittirīyas (xxiii.15, 16). Now we do not expect the text-book of a school to name that school; its rules are those which apply “here,” “with us,” and only outsiders need specification; besides, the Tāittirīyas are represented as holding a doctrine which is not that of the treatise itself, although it is deemed of consequence enough to be set forth with a detail elsewhere unknown. We are far from fully comprehending as yet the origin, nature, and relations of the “schools” of Vedic study and their accepted texts or śākhās, or the causes which have preserved to us so few of the latter, and of the school-treatises or prātiṣākhyas; but we must of course assume that there were various degrees of difference among the śākhās, and that some were only infinitesimally unlike some others. And it is perhaps possible to point out certain minor points, in which the orthoepical form of the Tāittirīya-text as recorded differs from that to be inferred from the Prātiṣākhya.

Among these points we are not allowed to reckon the retention of h before surd gutturals and labials and before sibilants (against ix.2), nor of n before palatals (against v.24) and l (against v.25), nor the omission of t (required by v.33) between t and s, nor of the various duplications and insertions and aspirations taught in chapter xiv., since these are matters on which we are to expect discordance between theory and practice. Nor would it be safe to make anything of the consistent and emphatic acceptance in the Saṁhitā of anusvāra as an alphabetic element, while the Prātiṣākhya wavers (see under ii.30) between regarding it as such and as a mere affection of the preceding vowel. Of more consequence is the division of the sections or anuvākas in the recorded text into fifties of words, or kandikās, which causes the disappearance of more than one specialty of reading expressly prescribed in the treatise (e. g., of the i of uḡmasi, at the end of i.3.6¹: see under iii.

13). The retention of the final v of av and āv (from o and āu) before a vowel is also against the letter of rule x.19, and in accordance with a dissident opinion quoted in x.21. The kampa of a circumflex accent followed by a circumflex, consistently made in the Sanhitā, is only mentioned in the Prātiçākhyā (at xix.3) as taught by some authorities, nor is the form of the doctrine taught in full and clear accordance with the practice followed. And it is very questionable whether the prescription of nasalization of a final protracted a (xv.8) is not merely reported by the treatise as made by certain specified teachers. These are small matters, and few, and a degree of doubt, perhaps, hangs over them all; but they are worthy of notice, as being all that we have on which to found any discordance between the Sanhitā of the manuscripts and that of the Prātiçākhyā. While, on the other hand, the points of accordance, even in matters which are most specially characteristic of the Tāittiriya-text, are very numerous and important.*

Of course, the existence of other forms of the text besides the ordinary saṁhitā is assumed by the Prātiçākhyā. Such a work without a pada-text at least as its foundation would be a thing inconceivable. Our treatise does not give, as the others do (see add. note 1 to the Ath. Prāt.), formal rules for the construction of any of the other texts; its nearest approach to doing so is in the third chapter, where (see note to iii.1) it teaches us what final or initial vowels, long in saṁhitā, are to be shortened whenever the word in which they occur is thrown out of saṁhi with its next neighbor—a form of statement which applies to krama and jaṭā text as well as pada. The occurrence of such terms as pada, nāpāda, īṅgya, avagraha, implies also the familiar usages of the pada-text; and the employment of iti is directly alluded to in iv.4 and ix.20, and indirectly assumed in the use of ārsha in ix.21 and x.13. What were the limits to the use of iti in the pada-text held by the school from which the Prātiçākhyā proceeded does not appear: its combination in the extant pada with the prepositions (thus pré 'ti for pra, vī 'ti for vi, and so on—and without restriction to the ten words which alone are allowed by the Prātiçākhyā, at i.15, to count as prepositions) does not come to light anywhere either in the text or commentary. Nor does the treatise chance to show whether its pada treated the īṅgyas or separable compounds after the same manner as the extant Rik and Atharvan texts—writing simply upa-āyavaḥ, for example—or as the extant padas of the Yajur-Veda (including that to the Tāittiriya-Sanhitā) and the one assumed by the Atharva-Prātiçākhyā (see note to Ath. Prāt. iv.74)—writing upāyava ity upa-āyavaḥ. The commentator, however, accepts and follows the latter method. Reason has been found (under xx.3) for questioning whether in the pada-text belonging to the makers of the Prātiśākhya the peculiar rule followed by the known Tāittiriya pada-text as to the accentuation of its separable words was of force. The latter text is of a very peculiar, not to say an anomalous, character in many respects; in these it is supported by the Prātiśākhya, so far as the latter goes (I will instance as examples only the treatment of yojā and evā, and other cases noticed under iii.15, of nīcāl, v.8, and of ekāikayā, v.19): whether it does not contain other peculiarities which are ignored by the Prātiśākhya, and which consequently prove it not to be the one which this presupposes, I cannot say; but, from an item or two of information received from Prof. Weber, I imagine that it does so. The question will, at any rate, be cleared up by the discussion of the Tāittiriya pada-text which Weber, as I rejoice to learn, intends to add to his transliterated edition of the Sanhitā, now going through the press.

* I have pointed out under rule ii.25 that the peculiar Tāittiriya orthography of such words as suvar, tanuvā, aghniyā finds no occasion for mention in the Prātiçākhyā; nor is the very strange change of a final labial in certain words to a guttural (as in tristug indriye, ii.4.112; tristug yājyā, ii.6.25; tristugbhīh, v.1.45) noticed anywhere; I presume (I have omitted to obtain distinct information upon the point) that in every such case the pada-text also has the guttural—which would take the whole matter out of the sphere of the Prātiçākhyā.

I attribute it only to a (very unusual) awkwardness of statement on the part of the Prātiśākhya, that it appears to leave a part of the words ending in an original o out of the category of pragrahas (see under iv.7), and so to deny them the right to be followed by iti, as they are in fact followed in the known pada-text.

The krama-text ("word-krama") appears to be mentioned in rules xxiii.20 and xxiv.5, and more unequivocally in xxiv.6 (all of them, however, of suspicious authenticity as original parts of the Prātiśākhya: see below); but it is only three times quoted in the comment (under vii.2, ix.17,20), and so makes but a small figure there as compared with the jatā. Examples from the latter are given under iii.1, v.33, viii.8,12,16,35, ix.22, x.9,10,13, xi.9,16,17, xii.7, xx.2, and sometimes in considerable number and at great length; and once (under xx.2), where the commentator has occasion to mention the various kinds of text, he specifies saṁhitā, pada, and jatā, ignoring the krama altogether. This seems strange, inasmuch as the jatā is regarded* as a secondary form of krama, and founded upon it; but the simple explanation appears to be that the krama brings up no questions of sandhi which do not arise also in saṁhitā and pada, and so needs no special attention where only methods of sandhi are taught; while the inversions of the jatā bring new elements into contact, and so create new cases of combination which require to be settled. If we may trust the commentator's interpretation, rules viii.12,35 are given expressly for cases that arise only in jatā-text; under viii.16, he commits an obviously false explanation in order to reach a jatā-ease; under v.33, he makes a sandhi which the Prātiśākhya certainly never intended, because it is required by the letter of the rule, in a case which the makers of the treatise had apparently overlooked; under xi.16,17, the jatā is resorted to, apparently with reason, for counter-examples to justify the form of statement adopted in the rule. The weight of evidence, upon the whole, is decidedly in favor of the assumption that the peculiar jatû combinations were had in view by those who constructed the Prâtiçâkhyâ—or, at least, by those who brought it into its present form. I would add, that it seems to me not unlikely that the term vikrama (in the sense of kramavikrti) signifies the jatû-text in rules xxiii.20 and xxiv.5.

The names of the divisions of the Sanhitâ, kânda, pragña (not prapâthaka), and anuvâka, are found only in the commentary (see Index); respecting the absence of the subdivision of anuvâkas into kândikâs see above, p. 427 (also under viii.35 and xxiv.6, where this division is acknowledged by the commentator). But the Prâtiçâkhyâ itself gives names to certain parts of the Sanhitâ; which names, for the sake of convenience, I will put together here, with a reference to the rule under which the part designated by each is stated (for further details of their occurrence, see the Index): they are agni (iii.9), ishti (iv.52), ukhya (ix.20), graha (ix.20), prshthya (ix.20), mahâprshthya (xi.3), yâjyâ (iii.9), rudra (xi.3), vâjapeya (xi.3), vikarsha (xi.3), viharya (xi.3), and hiranyavarûya (ix.20).

A marked feature of the Prâtiçâkhyâ is its frequent citation of authorities by name. The list of names has been repeatedly put together by students of the Prâtiçâkhyâs (in Weber's Indische Studien, iv.77–8, may be found notices respecting the historical and geographical indications derivable from them), but ought not to be omitted here also. It is as follows (including the cases of mention in the commentary, distinguished by an added *):

- Âgniveçya, ix.4.
- Âgniveçyâyana, xiv.32.
- Âtreya, v.31, xvii.8.
- Ukhyâ, viii.22, x.20, xvi.24.
- Uttamottariyâ, viii.20.
- Kândamâyana, ix.1, xv.7.8c.
- Kâundinya, v.38, xviii.3.4c, xix.2; (stharûa), v.40c, xvii.1, 5c.
- Kâuhaliputra, v.40c, xvii.2; (Kâuhaleya, xix.4c, xxiii.17c).
- Gâutama, v.38.
- Pâushkarasâdi, v.37, 38, 40c, xiii.16, xiv.2.3c, xvii.6.
- Plâkshâyana, ix.6, xiv.11.17, xviii.5.
- Plâkshî, v.38, ix.6, xiv.10, 11c, 17, xviii.5.
- Bâdabdhikâra, xiv.13.
- Bhâradvâja, xvii.3; (Bharadvâja, v.40c).
- Mâcâkiya (or Mâyikâya), x.22.
- Vâtsapra, x.23.
- Vâlmiki, v.36, ix.4, xviii.6.
- Çânkhyâna, xv.7.8c.
- Çaitâyana, v.40, xvii.1, 3c, 4c, 7, xviii.2.
- Sâmkrtya, viii.21, x.21, xvi.16.
- Hârîta, xiv.18, 19c, 20c, 21c, 22c.

Of the three schools cited, the names have been already given (above, p. 427). And we have besides âcâryâh quoted in i.46; eke âcâryâh in v.30, ix.5, xiii.3, xiv.3, 25; eke simply in i.47, ii.19, 27, 47, v.39, viii.19, xi.19, xiv.33, xv.2, 6, xviii.1, xix.3, xxi.13; pârve in xv.9; and sarve in xviii.7.

The questions which all this array of authorities is called in to help settle may be classified as follows:

- I. Matters of phonetic theory, with others of a general nature.

The nature of the tone of a circumflexed syllable, i.46-7; with this is combined an uncertainty of view of the Prāticākhya itself, expressed in rules 44-5; there is nothing else like it in the treatise; perhaps we may best assume that rules 44-7 are a later intrusion. The mode of production of anusvāra and svaṛabhakti, ii.19. The quality of the a-element in āi and āu, ii.27. The phonetic character of h and ḥ, ii.47-8. The nature of the combination of e or o with (elided) ā, xi.19. The occurrence of lingual l, xiii.16: this the comment vainly endeavors to make out an accepted doctrine of the Prāticākhya. A denial of the enclitic circumflex, xiv.32-3. Nasalization of final vowels, xv.6-8: the comment treats rule 8 as the direct teaching of the text-book. Accent of protracted vowels (?), xv.9. Correction of the final theme-vowel of neuters in as, is, us in the nom. pl. before ñ, xvi.16. Utterance of āi final in a single case, xvi.24. Degrees of nasalization, xvii.1-5. Utterance of accents and alphabetic sounds generally, xvii.6-8. Kampa between two circumflex syllables, xix.3-5. Use of the term yama for the nasal counterparts, xxi.13. Utterance of the syllable om, xviii.1-7. Yama-tones held by certain schools, xxiii.14-19.

II. Matters of sandhi or euphonic combination.

1. The most important cases in this division are two or three in which the views of different authorities are reported without any clear expression by the treatise of the opinion held, or the rule to be followed, by its school. Thus, with regard to the combination of a final mute with an initial h, v.38-41; where, indeed, the view first stated, as that of certain specified teachers, is doubtless to be regarded as that of the Prāticākhya, notwithstanding the equivocal way in which it is put forward. Again, at ix.1, the dropping of final h before a sibilant followed by a surd mute must probably in like manner, though referred to the authority of a single teacher, be taken as a binding rule. And it is hard to believe that rule x.19, prescribing the invariable omission of final v, was not meant to be modified by x.21. That the treatment of anusvāra as a distinct consonantal element is put by xv.2-3 upon certain dissidents, must not be looked at by itself alone; it stands connected with the general equivocal attitude assumed by the Prāticākhya with reference to this vexed question in phonetics (see note to ii.30). Once more, the mode of duplication in groups beginning with l as reported in xiv.2-3, with reference to the authorities who teach it, seems to be acknowledged by a later rule (xiv.7) as binding: this interpretation, however, is not free from doubt.

2. In all other cases, the Prāticākhya is liberal enough to record the opinions of respected authorities upon points as to which its own teachings are distinctly opposed to theirs. Thus, as to the treatment of m before y and r, v.30 and xiii.3 (the repeated mention of this shows it to be regarded as a view entitled to the most respectful consideration); the combination of p with ç and of n with ç before a consonant, v.36-7; the sandhi of eṣṭar with rāyah, viii.19-22; the treatment of h before an initial consonant, ix.4-6; the utterance or omission of final y and r, x.20-23; the insertion of a surd mute between spirant and mute, xiv.10-11; aspiration of a mute before a sibilant, xiv.13; duplication in certain specified cases, xiv.17-22, 25-8 (but the comment treats 28 as the direct prescription of the authors of the treatise); and vikrama accent after pracaya, xix.2.

Thus it is evident that, while this arraying of discordant opinions is a quite distinctive and a very interesting feature of our Prātiçākhyā, it does not, except to a very limited extent, detract from the character of the latter as a consistent and positive record of the views of a school of Vedic study. Nor is it fairly to be brought into any relation to the peculiar character of the Black Yajur-Veda, as a text of which the constituent parts had been gathered together more miscellaneous, and less fully fused into conformity, than the other Vedic texts. No text could be so definitely constructed, and be made the object of so thorough and systematic study as the setting up of a text-book like the Prātiçākhyā evinces, without assuming an established character, and being as authoritatively handed down and as accurately learned as any Vedic text.

It is by no means improbable that a part of these citations of authorities have been interpolated in the Prātiçākhyā after the latter ceased to be a mere body of practical rules for the guidance of a school, and, in virtue of its thoroughness and comprehensiveness, gained more the character of a phonetic "treatise" on the Black Yajur-Veda, and was used in other schools than that which originated it. The commentator (as will be pointed out below) uses the citations as a cover under which to put upon the treatise certain doctrines which do not properly belong to it; and in other hands it may have undergone a like distortion in other directions.

Accretions of other kinds to the original text of the Prātiçākhyā are plausibly to be presumed in various places. All the metrical rules (namely xvii.8, xxii.14,15, xxiii.2,14-15,20, xxiv.5,6) are to be set down without much question as unauthentic; they are proved such by their character not less than by their form; and several of them are found in other parts of the Prātiçākhyā literature. We may include in the same category, indeed, with considerable show of reason, the seventeenth and eighteenth chapters, and all that follows the twenty-first, on the score of content alone: a part of their matter is inferior repetition of what had been given before; a part deals with subjects, and in a style, unsuited to a Prātiçākhyā. That there is room at least to suspect the intrusion of rules in other parts of the work has been pointed out here and there in the notes: at this place, I will merely refer to certain rules which are put in strangely out of place, interrupting the natural connection of passages: such are i.25-7,60. vii.13,14, xiv.12-3, xv.6-9, xvi.24, xxii.3-8; of these, only vii.13,14 are indispensable parts of a treatise like the present.

Another notable characteristic of our Prātiçākhyā is its sparing use of technical terms belonging to general grammar, consequent upon its refusal to deal with words or classes of words according to their grammatical character, its laborious definition of its subject-matter in the Sanhitā by position and surroundings merely. There are but two cases of its departure from this method: namely, its use of alopa at xiii.15, and of saṅkhyāsu at xvi.25; and in neither one is its success precisely of a character to make us wish it had gone farther in the same direction. This peculiarity renders impossible any profitable comparison of its phraseology with that of other grammatical works.

The general character of the Prâtîçākhyā is that of an earnest, sensible, consistent treatise, thoroughly worked out and dealing with its proper task with completeness and accuracy, and confining itself quite strictly to that task. There is no labored feebleness and artificial obscurity, as in parts of the Vājasaneyi-Prâtîçākhyā, nor any inclusion of matters pertaining to general grammar, as in the Atharva-Prâtîçākhyā. It has its minor inaccuracies and inconsistencies, its obscurities of anuvṛtti inseparable from the sūtra-style, and its rules that seem to defy interpretation: but these are inconspicuous blemishes; no one of the other works of its class is more thoroughly respectable throughout.

Turning, now, to the more special consideration of the commentary, we have to note, as the most important point, a break of continuity between it and the Prâtîçākhyā. The commentator is not the recipient of a certain tradition, that gives him surely and precisely the import of the rules which he has to expound; the text-book has come down to him as something authoritative and sacred, indeed, yet in some points obscure, so that he is in doubt as to what it means; in others imperfect, so that it needs emendation; in others not in accordance with the views held by him and his school respecting the text, so that these have to be interpreted into it.

Thus, in the first place, the instances are frequent in which, to his own interpretation of a rule, he adds a different view held by other interpreters: either without naming them (as under i.19,21, xiii.16, xiv.5,11, xvii.5, xxiii.7), or referring to one of his special sources and predecessors (as under ii.19,33), or setting off against one another the views of two of these, Vararuci and Māhisheya (as under ii.14, iv.40, viii.19,20,22, xviii.7). In a large proportion of the instances, it is true, the difference of opinion is upon some utterly trivial point, turning on the interpretation of a tu or the like, and only illustrating the hair-splitting tendencies of the native exegetes; but in some cases it is of more consequence, and once goes so far as to question (under viii.20) whether an authority referred to is Uttamottariya or Dvāvuttamottariya. Again, where a rule is really obscure, the commentator has sometimes, palpably, nothing more than guesses to give at its meaning, and ventures two or three of them (as under ii.2, xiv.22, xv.9, xix.5, xxiii.17), among which it would be hard to choose the least acceptable; or, if he gives but one (as under xi.19, xviii.4, xxiii.18,19), it is no less unsatisfactory. There are yet other cases in which what seems to be the evident meaning of a rule is misapprehended and distorted, without reason (as under ii.52, iv.4, v.29, vii.11, xix.3). Occasionally, false interpretations, of every degree of violence, are committed, for the purpose either of correcting an oversight or inaccuracy of the Prāṭiśākhya (as under i.61, iii.1, viii.16, xi.3, xvi.26), or else of imposing upon the latter a doctrine which it was not intended to teach, but which is held by the commentator and his school (as under i.58, xiii.4, xxi.14,16). For this last purpose, too, advantage is sometimes taken of the citations of varying opinions so liberally made in the rules; the dictum of the quoted authority is declared to be approved in usage, or is even imposed upon the Prāṭiśākhya, to the setting aside of what the latter really prescribes. Thus, Pāuṣkarasādi's doctrine of the conversion of l to d (xiii.16), which belongs neither to the Prāṭiśākhya nor to the Sanhitā, is accepted; and the duplication of consonant-groups beginning with l which is ascribed (xiv.3) to certain unspecified teachers; and Plākṣhi's mode of treatment of a spirant before a first mute (xiv.17), which has as further result a misinterpretation of xxi.16; and a part of rule xiv.26, respecting the duplication of l; and rule xiv.28, to which a strange interpretation is given, prepared for by a yet stranger one of xiii.4; and rules xv.2,3, which require anusvāra instead of nasalization of a vowel; and the nasalization of a final protracted a (xv.8); and two rules (xviii.1,6) from among those which concern the utterance of om; and rule x.21, as to the retention of final v, is given the preference over 19, which requires its omission; and the first rule (v.38) as to the combination of initial h with a preceding mute is ratified; and, in the variety of opinions respecting the circumflex tone, one (i.46) is selected for approval. In the few cases where the commentator does not express himself as to whether a rule is ishṭa or anishṭa (they are ii.19,27,47-8, xi.19, xix.2, xxi.13, xxiii.14-9), there may be question whether he means to have it regarded as approved, or thinks the matter of no consequence either way. There remain the majority of cases, in which he stands by the Prāṭiśākhya, rejecting the intruded doctrine (for further details, refer to the words ishṭa and anishṭa in the Sanskrit index).

Besides these more serious cases of misapprehension or intended modification of the teachings of his text-book, the commentator is not free from the ordinary and characteristic weaknesses of his craft in India: from feeble and puerile expositions, from attempts to find a wonderful pregnancy of meaning in some innocent particle or unintended difference of expression, from groundless etymologies, and the like; to these attention has been directed in the notes, and they are not of consequence enough to be recapitulated here.

For determining the personality of the commentator we have no data whatever, and for his place and period we have only the references to other authorities, which, though too few and indefinite to yield any statable result, need to be put together in this note. The three earlier commentators on whom the work is avowedly founded—namely, Vararuci, Māhishēya, and Ātreya—are repeatedly appealed to, especially (as has been pointed out above) in the settlement of difficult or controverted points (for the details, see index). Vararuci is a name very common in grammatical literature; to identify our commentator with any other of the various individuals who have worn it would doubtless be daring in the extreme. Nor does Ātreya, probably, stand in any definable relation to the grammarian of that name who is (see p. 430) twice quoted in the Prātiçākhyā itself. From Pāṇini, rules are directly quoted under ii.12, iii.9, v.1, xiii.16, xiv.4, xxiv.3; and the pāṇinīyāh or the vyākaraṇa are farther referred to under i.15, 53, 57, ii.47, xviii.1. Pāṇinean terms are, further, nuñ, i.60, x.22, nic, ii.17, hal, ix.24, yar, xiv.4, and lyap, xxi.14. The Mahābhāshya is professedly quoted under ii.7, v.2; but the passage given is actually from Kāiyyata's gloss. A definition is taken from the Amarakoṣa under i.1. Kāuhaleya is quoted under xix.4, xxiii.17; and the Kālanirṇaya under xviii.1. The Brāhmaṇa of the Vajasaṇeyins is referred to under xiv.33, and extracts from the Mahābhārata and various Purāṇas are set forth under xxiv.6.

But the authority most often appealed to is the "Çikshā," by which the commentator intends a very different work from the pāṇinīya Çikshā, and one much more comprehensive. He takes extracts from it, of a verse, or part of a verse, or more than one verse, under i.1 (three times), ii.2, xiv.5, 28, xix.3, xx.12, xxi.1, 15, xxii.13, xxiii.10, 17. Among these extracts are (under i.1, ii.2, xxi.1, xxiii.10) several passages which are found also in the pāṇinīya Çikshā; and among the metrical extracts which are now and then given without specifying their source (under xiv.23, 26, 28, xix.3, xxi.1, 6, 15, xxiii.17, 19, xxiv.6) are likewise one or two (under xxiii.17, 19) which occur in the same treatise. That the commentator is inclined to regard his Çikshā as of higher authority than the Prātiçākhyā itself was pointed out under xx.12; that it was a work specially appertaining to the Tāittirīya-Saṃhitā may be inferred with probability from the words which it cites (under xxi.15) in illustration of the varieties of searabhakti.

INDEX OF CITATIONS

MADE IN THE COMMENTARY, FROM THE TĀITTIRĪYA-SANHITĀ.

THIS Index contains the references reported above in the body of the work, as made by the commentator to the fundamental text. If, however, a cited word or passage is reported as occurring more than once in the text, reference is given only to the first occurrence. It has been found impracticable to carry out any scheme of distinction of the value of the citations; and any one using the Index will have to turn back to the notes in order to determine whether a given passage is quoted merely as an example of some general class, or as one that was more or less probably had directly in view, as example or counter-example, by the makers of the treatise; whether it is a unique phrase, or one more than once repeated, or even a word of frequent occurrence—and so on.

ADDITIONS AND CORRECTIONS.

PART of these emendations are due to Prof. Weber, who has called my attention to them in private communications. A few slight misprints, of obvious character, are not noted here.

p. 2, l. 25. The MS. used by Weber was another (No. 504) in the same collection, containing only the text (incomplete) of the Prātiçākhyā.

p. 3, l. 1. Dr. Rost's description of these MSS. has not yet appeared. It appears, however, that the rules of the Prātiçākhyā are read interspersed in the commentary also, as well as prefixed to it in a body (with separate paging).

p. 3, l. 4. The differences of reading in the Prātiçākhyā text itself are more numerous than is here stated. They have been pointed out in the course of the work (either in the notes on the rules, or in the various readings to the comment)—namely, as occurring (with here and there an addition, omitted in its proper place) in i.16, ii.17, 51, iv.11, 39 (T. W. ahne, for 'hne), v.13, 20 (G. M. çakāraç, for -rañ: a mere blunder), vii.8 (G. M. yayush, for yayuh), 12, viii.8 (T., it should be added, has dropped both sanuta and stanuta), 13, 35, ix.21, 22, x.11 (T. W. B. O. anunāsikam, for 'nun-), 13 (G. M. -pā usiparo budhniyā jyā ā pūshā aminanta ārshe, which is perhaps the more acceptable reading, since it gives the uncombinable finals their uncombinable quality in the rule also), 22, xi.16 (G. M. adubdhisa and ashādhaç, with unelided a), 17 (G. M. ahniyā mā 'mbāli), 18, 19 (G. M. repeat the whole rule, instead of its last two words only), xii.4, 9 (T. O. asmin, for tas-), xiii.4, 13, 14 (see farther on), 15, xiv.3, 8 (G. M. upāsargac ca pitha: a blunder only), 13, 32, xvi.1, 5 (G. M. çañstān anant—a blunder), 7, 13 (G. M. omit pāpā in the rule, as well as its example in the comment; but they give the word in the rehearsal at the beginning of the comment), 16, 19, 22, 26, xvii.2, 4, xviii.5 (T. svaritaç ca pl-), xx.9 (G. M. substitute in the text-MS. rule xvii.6, except the word pāushkai asādeh), xxi.5, 6, 14, xxii.7 (W. O. also have -shakaç in the rule, but not in the comment), xxiii.2, 6, 10, 12, 14, 20, xxiv.4. The reading adopted for rule xiii.14 is that of T. G. M. (save that T. has shtha for shna, and rāvṇa, with virāma under the v; and G. M. have rāviṇṇa in the text-MSS., and rāvāṇṇa in the MSS. with comment); W. gives ṛṇṇ shan shtha mṇa rāvṇ (with virāma under both v and a); for O. the collator has noted nothing; B. reads ṛṇ shan shna mṇa rāvṇ grīvṇa. Other evident copyists' errors occur, of too little account to be worth notice.

A reading has been adopted contrary to the authority of all the MSS. at ix.1, 20 (where the MSS.-reading is ikāraukārap-), xi.1, 17. The writing of iṅgya for iṅgya was noted under i.48.

p. 9, l. 16. The commentator, as will be seen under xxi.14, interprets out of existence the nāsikya as an independent element.

p. 11, l. 7. The structure of r is defined by the commentator under xxi.15.

p. 18, l. 12. The commentator refers to some "different reading" (perhaps in his Çikshā? there is no trace of it in the Prātiçākhyā), beginning pra parā 'pa sam, but declares it to have to do only with the addition to all these words of iti (in the padu-text, namely, which writes e 'ti for ā, ape 'ti for apa, and so on) and not to their receiving the name upāsarga. I still fail to see any reason for the limitation of the class to half its usual number.

p. 23, l. 13. Delete the hyphen at the end of the line.

p. 33, l. 16. One may conjecture that rule 43 formerly concluded the treatment of accent in this chapter, and applied to all the three kinds of accent; but, rules 44–7, on the circumflex, being later interpolated, the connection made it necessary to understand this also as applying to the circumflex alone.

p. 34, rule 46. The same example (from iii.3.111) is quoted by the comment under this rule as under rules 43 and 47.

p. 37, l. 19. Compare under rules xvi.26, 29, where this claim is distinctly made. But it is not entirely well founded, for there are cases where combinations of sounds which are padas are quoted as padāikadeças: thus han in vii.11, pā in xvi.2, hi in xvi.13, etc.

- p. 42, ll. 28,32,43, read iv.23 (for iv.25).
- p. 46, l. 3. Read (in part of the edition) alteration for nasalization.
- p. 82, last line. Restore (in part of the edition) the lost figure 6 before na, at the beginning of the line.
- p. 83, l. 2. The passage is found at iv.1.5¹.
- p. 87, rule 5. For aghā, in rule and translation, read adyā; and the example, on the next page, is adyācāvāt (p. adya-cvāt). The St. Petersburg lexicon (in the Appendix) has this word in its proper form, but I unfortunately overlooked it.
- p. 88, l. 28, and p. 99, l. 5. No division is made of prāṭṛāgo in pada-text.
- p. 96, l. 28. Read kah for kāh (in part of the edition).
- p. 101, l. 20. I have little or no doubt that the interpretation here suggested is the true one.
- p. 103, l. 7 from below. To is not an independent word: see the St. Petersburg lexicon, s. v. totah.
- p. 104, l. 24. So far as the vocatives in o are concerned, the existing pada-text appears to accord with the Prāṭicākhya: we have them with iti, as pragrahas, for example, at i.3.8¹, 147; 4.27, and without iti at i.2.132; 4.39. But o. uo, upo, and pro are followed by iti wherever they occur (for to, see the preceding correction), although this is not authorized by the Prāṭicākhya.
- p. 110, l. 32. The pada-text divides dyāvā-prthivī.
- p. 121, ll. 23,24. Read (in part of the edition) āindrāgnī and indrāgnī.
- p. 123, l. 18. Insert the omitted example trīṇī vrotī vidathe untar eshām (ii.1.115).
- p. 124, l. 12. Read (in part of the edition) pātum for patam.
- p. 132, l. 15. But note the case reported under i.59 (p. 43).
- p. 138, l. 13. Read (in part of the edition) nicā (for nīcā).
- p. 153, l. 27. I have omitted part of the passages in which t occurs before sh, namely vi.6.11¹, 2; vii.2.87. It should have been added, too, that the Sanhitā furnishes no example of n before sh.
- p. 157, l. 23. The citation is from vi.3.3¹, as under the two preceding rules.
- p. 160, l. 24. This is not correct, so far as the existing pada-text is concerned. I was not aware at the time of writing the note that that text treated the avagraha-pause as suspending the continuance of accentual influence (see p. 369, first marginal note). The application of the rule, however, is as stated, compound words having been already provided for by rule 2.
- p. 167, l. 14. The peculiarity of accentuation referred to in the preceding correction would allow of these examples being brought under rule 4.
- p. 173, l. 20. Read -parāṇuttayī.
- p. 176, rule 11, translation. Read havanā.
- p. 179, l. 12. The suggestion of punarukti here is not well-founded, the sphere of action of the rules in this and in the thirteenth chapter being different.
- p. 183, l. 10. Ahorātre pārve is found in Tāitt. Āraṇyaka, at iii.13.2.
- p. 193, ll. 9,10. References should have been given for the words ahorātrābhyaṁ and ahorātrayoh; the former is found at ii.1.73 et al., the latter at vi.1.3¹. Adhishavane occurs only at vi.2.11⁴.
- p. 194, l. 14. The reference for rukmo antur is iv.1.104-5 et al.
- p. 199, l. 9 from below. The pada-text leaves brhaspati undivided, so that the combination does not come within the ken of the treatise at all.
- p. 199, l. 13 from below. Read (in part of the edition) ii.1.57 for ii.1.57.
- p. 205, l. 14. The omission of h before a spirant followed by a sonant consonant, here referred to as a doctrine held in schools of the Black Yajus, is practised in the manuscripts of our treatise and its commentary to a degree far beyond what can be regarded as merely accidental. G. M. observe it almost without exception, and it prevails also in the others.
- p. 209, rule 7. Doubtless aḥsario is to be understood here as an adjective, qualifying visarjanīyah understood, 'h completed to aḥ,' as the comment clearly intends. This also removes the difficulty of anuṣṛī spoken of on pp. 210-11, so far as the implication of visarjanīyah is concerned.
- p. 216, l. 2. Read is for does.
- p. 218, l. 5. The example paṇin etc. occurs first at i.5.2¹.
- p. 222, l. 12. Read (in part of the edition) gne vimin (for -mān).
- p. 224, l. 4. Read Also for Nor.

p. 232, l. 26. I have noted here all the cases in which the saṁhitā-text shows dhā, mā, or pā before asi; it appears, however, from Weber's edition of the Sanhitā, that a part of them have h in pada-text after the ā.

p. 233, l. 11 from below. Read (in part of the edition) prape 've (for -pū).

p. 265, l. 5. The combination ūrdhvo asthāt is in fact read first at iv.2.14, in an ukhya-passage.

p. 265, l. 10. There is, however, a case in which a is omitted according to the general rules, when by the letter, though not the spirit, of i.61 it ought to be retained; see under i.61 (p. 47).

p. 273, rule 12. I should doubtless have done better to adopt the reading vaṇi-jāya (for bān-), in rule, version, and example.

p. 291, l. 24. Achāvākah is found at vii.1.55.

p. 296, l. 9. Read h̥ksh̥ (by ix.3); and this would change the treatment of the group, since h (i.9) is not a spirant.

p. 301, l. 3. Read h̥ksh̥, h̥ksh̥, h̥ksh̥ (by ix.3); so that jihvāmūliya occurs only in the four remaining groups.

p. 302, l. 23. I can give no reference for varshabhyah, the reading at vii.4.13 being varshyābhyah svāhi 'varshyābhyah.

p. 303, l. 9. I was heedless enough here to overlook the fact that a spirant never stands, according to the rules of this chapter, before either an aspirated surd or a nasal, since a first mute (by rule 9. above) is always inserted in such cases between the two. The groups çch etc., therefore, would be read according to this rule çcch, instead of çcch. The groups in which a nasal originally follows the spirant will be found catalogued under rule xxi.12 (p. 390). The example tasmād etc., below, is therefore no counter-example, and it is G. M. that are in the wrong in so calling it; it is to be read taspmāt, according to Plākshi etc., instead of tasspmāt (or, with yama, tassp̄māt).

p. 304, l. 5. See also under xxi.16.

p. 308, l. 6 from below. Read dhakāre for -ra.

p. 315, l. 10. Prof. Hadley's paper may be found printed in full in the Transactions of the American Philological Association (vol. i., 1871, p. 1 ff.).

p. 334, l. 7. Read vii.5.152 (for vii.5.142).

p. 336, l. 7. "Verbal forms"—that is, of course, all excepting r̥ishi.

p. 354, ll. 17, 25. See p. 426. Prof. Roth's MS. also ends with samudrah; he calls my attention, further, to the passage in the Bṛhad-Āraṇyaka (i.1.2). samudra evā 'sya [i. e. ayasya] bandhuh samudro yonih.

p. 356, l. 3. For dhṛta as synonym of pracaya, see below, under xxiii.17 (p. 412).

p. 364, l. 24. And accordant, it may be added, with the practice followed in the Vājasaneyi-Saṁhitā, where there is no added figure, and no prolongation of the vowel.

p. 369, marg. notes, l. 6. The anulāta-mark under çu- (the second time) has fallen out.

p. 373, l. 1. Read i.2.51 (for i.2.52).

p. 386, l. 18. The e sign has broken off in the saṁhitā-reading of agne.

p. 387, l. 7. I have considered this point more fully in a paper on the Sanskrit accent in the Transactions of the Am. Philological Association (vol. i., 1871, p. 20 ff.).

p. 414, l. 4. Read (in Devanāgarī) kramavik-, for kramivak- (altered in the type, by some mishap, after the last correction).

p. 425, l. 29–30. Achāvākah is found at vii.1.55.

p. 428, l. 37. But see, for the commentary, the additional note above to i.15 (or p. 18).

p. 429, l. 26. The krama-text is also quoted under ix.24 (p. 224) by O. alone.

p. 438, last line but one. Read xvi. for xxvi.

AMERICAN ORIENTAL SOCIETY.

Proceedings at Boston and Cambridge, May 16th, 1866.

THE Annual meeting was held at the usual place (the American Academy's room, in the Athenæum building, Boston), on Wednesday, May 16th, at 10 o'clock, A. M. In the absence of the President, the chair was taken by Dr. Jenks, the only Vice-President present, but was by him relinquished to Dr. Anderson, who conducted the deliberations of the meeting.

After the reading and acceptance of the minutes of the last meeting, the Committee of Arrangements announced their proposed programme for the present session, which was, on motion, ratified by the Society. After the noon recess, from 1 to 4 o'clock, the Society would re-assemble for hearing communications at Prof. Peabody's in Cambridge, and would adjourn at about 8 o'clock, in order to accept an invitation to a social gathering at Mr. L. R. Williston's.

2. Librarian's Report.

The accessions to the Library, though not so numerous and valuable as last year, had been important. Besides many continuations of series, 34 new printed works and 3 manuscripts had been received. The names of the donors were read, and the donations briefly described.

3. Report of the Committee of Publication.

The second half of Vol. viii of the Journal was reported as completed, and in process of distribution to the members. The Committee were unable to state when the printing of the next volume would be begun.

4. Report of the Directors.

The Directors appointed the next meeting of the Society to be held at New Haven, in October, and designated Professors Salisbury and Green and the Corresponding Secretary as a Committee of Arrangements for it.

They recommended for election as Members of the Society the following persons:

as Corporate Members,

Rev. Nathaniel G. Clark, D.D., of Boston.
 Rev. Oliver Crane, of Carbondale, Pa.
 Mr. Richard J. Haldeman, of Pittsburgh, Pa.
 Mr. Charles W. Zaremba, of St. Joseph, Wisc.

as Corresponding Members,

Rev. J. G. Auer, of West Philadelphia, Pa.
 Mr. Hyde Clarke, of Smyrna.
 Prof. Constantine Tischendorf, of Leipzig.

whereupon, ballot being taken, they were declared duly elected.

The Corresponding Secretary presented a list of the Members who had deceased since the last annual meeting:

CORPORATE MEMBERS.

Prof. Charles Beck, of Cambridge.
 Rev. David Green, of Westboro, Mass.
 Rev. Edward C. Jones, of Philadelphia.
 Dr. Joseph E. Worcester, of Cambridge.

CORRESPONDING MEMBERS.

Rev. Henry Ballantine, of Ahmednuggur, India.
 Rev. J. Edwards Ford, late of Sidon, Syria.
 Rev. C. C. Hoffman, of Cape Palmas, W. Africa.
 Rev. Homer B. Morgan, of Antioch, Syria.
 Rev. Samuel A. Rhea, of Orûmiah, Persia.

HONORARY MEMBERS.

Prof. Friedrich Rückert, of Coburg.
 H. M. Pawarendr Ramesr, Second King of Siam.

Of Dr. Beck—one of the oldest surviving members of the Society (he was elected in May, 1843, within a few months of its origination), for many years a Vice-President, and always one of its most active friends—an eloquent eulogy was pronounced by Prof. George M. Lane, of Cambridge, embracing a history of his life, an account of his literary labors, and an estimate of his character as a scholar and as a man.

Dr. S. H. Taylor, of Andover, and Mr. Charles Folsom, of Cambridge, also expressed in a feeling manner their sense of the loss which the Oriental Society, the community of American scholars, and the public at large, had sustained by the death of Dr. Beck.

Mr. Folsom farther set forth the services rendered to learning by the eminent lexicographer Dr. Worcester, and paid a merited tribute of respect to his memory.

Rev. E. Burgess and Dr. C. Pickering, of Boston, spoke in recognition of the labors and virtues of the veteran Indian missionary Rev. H. Ballantine.

Dr. R. Anderson, of the American Board, performed the same office toward his former colleague, Rev. Mr. Green, and the missionaries whose names are included in the list.

The Corresponding Secretary added a few words respecting some of them, and spoke more particularly of the renowned Orientalist and poet, Rückert, describing an interview which he had with him in 1852.

The election of officers being next in order, Mr. Folsom of Cambridge, Dr. Taylor of Andover, and Prof. Packard of New Haven were, in accordance with custom, appointed a Nominating Committee to make up and propose a ticket. To them was referred a communication from Prof. Salisbury, of New Haven, referring to the unwillingness with which he had accepted the office of President, to which he was elected three years before, and positively declining a re-election. The Committee presented the following candidates, who were then duly elected by ballot :

President —Pres. T. D. WOOLSEY, D.D., LL.D.,	of New Haven.
Vice-Presidents { Rev. WILLIAM JENES, D.D.,	" Boston.
{ Hon. PETER PARKER, M.D.,	" Washington.
Corresp. Secretary —Prof. W. D. WHITNEY, Ph.D.,	" New Haven.
Secr. of Classical Section —Prof. JAMES HADLEY,	" New Haven.
Recording Secretary —Mr. EZRA ABBOT,	" Cambridge.
Treasurer —Prof. D. C. GILMAN,	" New Haven.
Librarian —Prof. W. D. WHITNEY,	" New Haven.
{ Rev. RUFUS ANDERSON, D.D.,	" Boston.
{ Mr. A. I. COTHEAL,	" New York.
Directors { Prof. J. J. OWEN, D.D.,	" New York.
{ Dr. CHARLES PICKERING,	" Boston.

Mr. Folsom accompanied the report with remarks upon the withdrawal of Prof. Salisbury, which he was requested to commit to writing. This being done, those remarks were, on motion, formally adopted by the Society as an expression of its sentiments, and ordered to be entered upon the records of the meeting. They were as follows :

"When the Committee accepted their appointment, it was with the belief that they should find their duty limited to the indication of a successor to our late lamented Vice-President, Dr. Beck; and it is with deep regret that they have yielded to an understood necessity of naming for the office of President some other than the present incumbent. Not that they have hesitated for a moment whom to propose, if there must be a change.

"But the actual President of the Society so early began, and has so long continued, to contribute much of the best labor of his scholarly life to enriching the pages of the "Journal," and, in all its pecuniary exigencies, has taken such liberal care for its publication, that we have rejoiced in the hope of seeing him long at the head of an institution he has done so much to foster and adorn.

"As the Committee are happy to learn that the President's retirement from his present office is not owing to reasons of health, they propose that the Society do not relinquish him from the corps of its officers, feeling assured that in no condition will his personal efforts or other means of influence be withdrawn from that department of learning which he has hitherto so signally served."

The following communications were made:

1. Rev. M. A. Sherring, English missionary at Benares, being introduced to the meeting by Dr. Anderson, gave, by request, an account of Benares, as one of the chief religious and literary centres of India, and of its antiquities, which he had for many years been engaged in exploring.

2. Prof. Geo. E. Day, D.D., of New Haven, made a brief written communication, which was read by the Corresponding Secretary, respecting the Syriac version of the Revelation of St. Paul, of which the translation had been published in the last volume of the Journal. He explained the circumstances connected with the transmission to this country of the manuscript, which had been, at his own suggestion, searched out and transmitted to him by the late Rev. D. Stoddard. He then pointed out that the impression under which the Society had published the translation—namely, that the long-lost Revelation referred to by some of the Church Fathers had been now for the first time recovered—appeared to have been an erroneous one. On visiting Prof. Tischendorf in Leipsic, last summer, he had found him “just then engaged in preparing for the press a Greek text of the same apocryphal book, which he had discovered in Italy in 1843, and which he did not doubt was the original work referred to by Augustine and Sozomen. The volume in which it is contained, entitled “Apocalypses Apocryphæ Mosæ, Esdræ, Pauli, Johannis, item Mariæ Dormitio” (Lipsiæ, 1866, 8vo), has just been received in this country. Dr. Tischendorf, it seems, had given an account of the contents of this Revelation of Paul in the “Theologische Studien u. Kritiken” for 1851. He still holds the view he there expressed, that the book was probably composed in the year of the death of the emperor Theodosius (A.D. 395), but now hesitates to fix upon Palestine as the place in which the author lived. On comparing the Greek text, as given in two different manuscripts, with Dr. Perkins’s translation of the Syriac text, he pronounces the Greek form undoubtedly the purer and more ancient. Considerable additions, together with transpositions and other changes, have been made in the Syriac version. Occasionally, however, the Syriac text appears to supply some deficiency in the original Greek. The Syriac additions (as translated into English), together with other variations, Dr. Tischendorf has given in notes at the foot of the page. As the matter now stands, we may regard the recovery of this part of the apocryphal literature of the New Testament as more complete than if either the Greek or the Syriac text alone had been published.”

3. Specimens of the recently printed Turkish Commentary on the Koran, by Mr. John P. Brown, of Constantinople; read by the Corresponding Secretary.

Mr. Brown’s letter, accompanying this paper, is dated January 16th, 1866, and reads as follows:

“I send you a translation of the 1st and 112th chapters of the Koran, made from a very interesting work which has recently been printed here, under peculiar circumstances. You are aware that the Sunnee Moslems have always held that it is sinful to print the Koran, and even to attempt to translate it. Many commentaries, nevertheless, exist; some of them, probably, printed, though mostly to be found only in manuscript. It is said here that the Sultan, having become aware that the Christians possess the Bible in each of their own languages, while the Koran remains in Arabic, and therefore unknown to the masses, ordered that a concise version should be printed in Turkish, under the title of a "Commentary." It is styled "A Translation (called Mewâhib, 'Gifts') of the Commentary called the Mewâhib, 'Escorts,' by the Member of the Divan of the Sublime Porte, Ismail Ferakkh Effendi." The title Mewâhib, 'Gifts,' may also denote that it is printed mostly for private distribution; though it is, at the same time, actually for sale. I have a copy for the Oriental Society.

Most of the versions of the Koran are open to criticism, and I have not found one which does justice to the ideas of its author. Translated literally, and restricted to the words of the original, without some necessary license, a version gives but little satisfaction; and to explain the definition by notes is tedious. In making my literal translation of the Turkish definition, I have not examined any existing translation, to see how far the two agree with each other. It would be of interest to translate the whole of this work, as I am sure that it would throw some more light upon the ideas of the able and talented man who, for the purpose of withdrawing his fellow-men from idolatry, imagined so many sublime verses. I have selected the two chapters mentioned, as they are the basis of his particular creed, or belief, respecting the Deity."

The translation of the two brief chapters, and of the commentary upon them, is expected to be given in full in the next volume of the Society's Journal.

4. On the Origin of the English Possessive Case, by Prof. James Hadley, of New Haven; read by the Recording Secretary.

The paper of Prof. Hadley was a review of an essay on "The English Possessive Argument," by Serjeant James Manning, of Oxford, Eng., published in the Transactions of the Philological Society (London, 1864). Mr. Manning holds that the Anglo-Saxon genitive was given up in the 13th century, and its place supplied by of with the accusative; but that, for the possessive relation, a special form was then introduced, such as "father his book," "mother his gown," "children his plaything," which gradually passed into "father's book," "mother's gown," "children's plaything." Against the common view, which identifies the s of our possessive with that of the A.-S. genitive, he argues that the latter was not applied to feminines and plurals, and that it was used for many relations which are not expressed by our possessive. But Prof. Hadley referred to examples of grammatical forms (as the s of plural nouns in French and Spanish) extended to classes of words that once excluded them, and of forms (as the Latin perfect indicative active in all Romance languages) restricted in the range of meanings that once belonged to them. He examined the constructions of our possessive which Mr. Manning regards as inconsistent with its genitive origin. In "Cæsar's crossing the Rubicon," we have only the ordinary use of a genitive to denote the subject of an action. In "John and Walter's house," the possessive s is added to "John and Walter" taken as a complex whole: compare eth in "three-and-twentieth." The same explanation applies to "King of England's crown:" compare ism in "Church-of-England-ism." In "a servant of my brother's," Lowth regarded "brother's" as depending on "servants" understood—an explanation which fails for "that wife of my brother's:" it is better to regard the genitive here as dependent on a general idea of "belongings," "that which belongs," the same idea which is evidently understood in "all mine is my brother's." Positive arguments for his own view Mr. Manning draws from the popular dialects of modern Germany, and from the usage of Semi-Saxon and early English writers. But while the common German says "des Vaters sein Buch," he says "der Mutter ihr Kleid:" if our English possessive were of the same nature, we should have, not "mother his gown" (according to Mr. M.'s theory), but "mother her gown." That the Gothic reflexive seins and the Latin reflexive suius mean her and their as well as his, proves, at most, only a possibility that his might be so used in place of her: that it was actually and currently used in this way, there is no sufficient reason for believing. In almost every instance where it seems to be used, his refers to a word like wife, maiden, child, which in Anglo-Saxon were neuter, not feminine. Mr. Manning gives great prominence to a comparison between the two manuscripts of Layamon's Brnt, in the first of which, written about 1200 A.D., the genitive expressed by his is rarely, if ever, met with; while in the second, written perhaps sixty years later, such forms are of common occurrence. Even here, in examining the first 9000 lines of the poem, Prof. Hadley had found, from common nouns, about eighty genitives with inflectional s, and only two expressed by his: from proper names of place, thirteen with inflectional s, and two expressed by his: even from proper names of persons, where the genitives expressed by his are numerous, there are nearly as many with inflectional s, and the two forms are freely and capriciously interchanged. In the Ormulum, written by a very careful scribe at a time not earlier than the second text of Layamon, the form with his is never once used. And although this form is often seen in old English writings, and down to the beginning of the last century, yet it appears, on the whole, as an occasional—and, seemingly, a merely orthographic—variation of the inflectional genitive—a variation suggested by a false, though plausible, etymology, and favored by the general confusion of early English orthography.

In connection with this paper, Prof. Whitney referred to another and wholly new account of our possessive suffix, given in the "Reader" for Sept. 24, 1864, in the form of a critique upon Mr. Manning's essay, under the signature of Th. G. [Prof. Goldstücker]. Its author accepts as satisfactory Mr. Manning's disproof of the relationship between the suffix in question and the ancient genitive-ending, but regards the former as a mere connecting-link between the name of the possessor and the thing possessed, hindering them together into a kind of compound. Prof. Whitney combated this view, as in a high degree far-fetched and fanciful, and attempted to overthrow the arguments by which it was supported. There is no more difficulty, he claimed, in supposing the retention of a true synthetic form along with the elaboration of an analytic substitute for it in the case of John's son and the son of John, than in the case of I loved and I did love. The position of the possessive before the thing possessed is no more fixed in the case of a noun than in that of a pronoun, as his or her, which no one would think of denying to be ancient genitives. And the s in such German words as Hilfsstruppen, Liebesgabe, is really a genitive-ending, or introduced after the analogy of such; precisely as is the s of nachts, formed after the analogy of abends, morgens, etc.

5. On the Beginnings of Indo-European Speech, by Prof. W. D. Whitney, of New Haven.

This paper was intended to meet the objections of those who are unwilling to receive the prevalent belief respecting the character of the germs of the languages belonging to our family—namely, that these are radical syllables, indicative of action or quality—and who hold that the first words must have been, rather, signs for concrete things. The fundamental error with such persons is that they confound the primum cognitum and the primum denominatum, which are, in fact, entirely independent of one another. Without doubt, the synthetic apprehension of concrete objects as such preceded the analytic apprehension of their qualities; but no language-making was possible until analysis had begun. It is impracticable to make a sign directly designating a complex existence; we can get hold of it only by its distinctive qualities. All the processes of word-making, throughout the later history of language, are based upon this principle, and the earliest must have been of the same character. The writer argued at some length against the doctrine that thoughts are impossible without words, and that general ideas are not conceived by beings inferior to man; and he endeavored to set forth and illustrate the characteristic differences between the mental action of man and of the lower animals. It was because all language-making is a devising of intelligible signs, to be used in communication between man and man, for ideas which have been conceived and for which expression is desired, and because an intelligible sign, uttered or acted, can only body forth an act or quality, that the first utterances must have directly meant the latter, and have been applied by a secondary process to designating the beings to which these belonged.

6. On the Origin and Antiquity of the Hindu Astronomy, by Rev. E. Burgess, of South Franklin, Mass.

Mr. Burgess defended at considerable length the originality of the Hindu science. His arguments were briefly controverted by Prof. Whitney.

No farther communications being offered, the Society adjourned.

Proceedings at New Haven, October 24th and 25th, 1866.

PURSUANT to adjournment, the Society assembled on Wednesday, October 24th, at 3 o'clock, P. M., in the Library-room of the Sheffield Scientific School of Yale College, at New Haven.

The chair was taken by the President, Pres. Woolsey of Yale College.

The minutes of the preceding meeting were read by the Recording Secretary and approved.

The Committee of Arrangements reported the order proposed by them for the present meeting: that the literary session be adjourned at about 6 o'clock, till 9 o'clock on Thursday morning, and that the Society accept the invitation of the Corresponding Secretary to meet socially at his house on Wednesday evening. The report was accepted, and the order adopted.

The Directors announced that they had designated Wednesday the 15th of May, 1867, as the day on which the next Annual meeting should be held in Boston, and had appointed Prof. Peabody of Cambridge, with the Recording and Corresponding Secretaries, a Committee of Arrangements for that meeting.

They further recommended for election to membership, as Corporate Members:

Rev. William H. Fenn, of Portland, Me.
Mr. Henry M. Pierce, LL.D., of New York.
Rev. Thomas C. Pitkin, D.D., of Buffalo, N. Y.
Dr. Ernst Schmid, of White Plains, N. Y.
Rev. James R. W. Sloane, of New York.
Mr. E. Bailey Smith, of Middletown, Conn.
Gen. A. von Steinwehr, of Wallingford, Conn.
Mr. Albert B. Watkins, of Fairfield, N. Y.

and, as Corresponding Member:

Dr. Adolf Bastian, of Bremen.

The correspondence of the past half-year was next presented, and read in part. Among the extracts read were the following:

From Rev. E. B. Cross, dated Toungoo, May 17th, 1866:

"I enclose to you a paper which I have prepared on the Karens and their language. In 1853, I gave the Society, by request, an article on the traditions and religious beliefs of the Karens.* A great deal which was then unknown in regard to the different tribes of this remarkable people has since been discovered.

"I have dwelt on the peculiarities of Karen grammar, without entering into extended comparisons with the grammars of other languages. It will be seen that this is plainly a member of the general family of languages of Farther India; and the distinctness of its peculiar features might almost entitle it to claim the place of typical language of the family. The philosophy of its grammar is essentially different from that of the grammars of the West. It may be safely said that, if an intelligent and competent scholar should reduce the Karen grammar to its true system, without taking western grammars for his model, nearly the whole nomenclature of the science would be changed.

"I have by no means exhausted the subject, either of the general characteristics, or of the number and peculiarities of the dialects of this language. The gospel is advancing among the Karen people, and revealing new tribes and new varieties of speech.

"But this people are interesting not solely by reason of the variety of dialect exhibited by them. Like the Jews of heathen Greece and Asia Minor in the times of the Apostles, the Karens are the lodging-place for the beginning of the gospel."

From Rev. H. H. Jessup, dated Beirut, Sept. 19th, 1866:

"I take pleasure in sending you, for the Society, the first volume of Mr. Butrus Bistany's new Arabic lexicon, the Muhit el Muhit. Mr. Bistany is going on with the publishing of the two remaining volumes as rapidly as possible. The price to non-subscribers will be four pounds sterling for the three volumes. I think you will be pleased with it."

From Hyde Clarke, Esq., dated Smyrna, July 7th, 1866:

"What is going on in these districts is chiefly in the way of illustration. For the Troad, Mr. Frank Calvert has communicated to me a new memoir, with his latest observations, which I publish in Murray's Handbook for Turkey, with other observations. The Baron Paul Des Granges, of Athens, a photographer of eminence, has just visited me on his return from the Troad, where he has taken numerous views for the new work of the learned Dr. von Halin, the Austrian consul at Syra, who has lately taken up that region. Mr. R. Poppleton Pullane, an archeologist of reputation, has just arrived here. He is charged with a mission from the Dilettanti Society to excavate on the site of the temple of Apollo Smythius, near Assos, in the southern Troad.

"It may be mentioned, as a curious confirmation of ancient traditions, that during the spring the fields in the neighborhood of Pergamus have been ravaged by hosts of mice. The Smynthian Apollo was the foe of mice. These vermin have this year done much harm to Turkey.

"On the Lydo-Assyrian monuments of our district I have already communicated to you the latest news.

"In the Ephesus district Mr. Svoboda has continued to take numerous photographs, and has proposed to me the publication of a joint work. I hope he will next take Magnesia ad Mæandrum. He has also executed fourteen views for a work on Ephesus proposed by Mr. J. T. Wood, an architect employed on excavations by the British Museum.

"M. Ernest Renan, I understand from his communications, will in his next volume embody his observations made during his investigations at Ephesus. I examined at his request the church of St. John, and obtained further evidence. My opinion is that this church and the great mosque are identical.

"I have not found anything in my late explorations of the Ephesus district. I spent some time fruitlessly on the question of the Roman roads beyond Ariziel, one the main road from Ephesus to Magnesia ad Mæandrum, and the other, perhaps, a road from the Panionium to Magnesia.

"Mr. Wood thinks he has discovered the shrine of St. Luke at Ephesus, but this opinion rests on no good evidence.

"Mr. Svoboda has photographed Aidin, the ancient Tralles."

From the same, under the same date:

"I send you the Revue Archéologique of Paris, with a memoir by Messrs. Georges Perrot and Edmond Guillaume on the Pseudo-Sesostris of Ninfi. It gives some of the most recent opinions of the learned world on the Lydo-Assyrian monuments of Asia Minor, with many notes of my own, and will put the Society in possession of the present state of this new and important subject, which involves a modification in the ancient history of Asia Minor.

"I differ from the learned authors as to the road from Sardis to Smyrna and that from Ephesus to Phocæa, as referred to by Herodotus, and I think I have informed the Society of my last year's explorations. It is quite true that the present monument is off the road from Sardis to Ephesus; but this is only an error of Herodotus, and I doubt if he ever saw the monument. The present is not the first attempt to represent the pass in which the monument is as the road from Ephesus to Pho-

ca. But I doubt the identification, for the following reasons: The pass in question does not appear to represent a main road. If treated as the road from Ephesus to Phocæa, the traveller would, on reaching the plain of Cassuba or the Ninfi Chai, have a troublesome route to Phocæa, either all the way around by Magnesia ad Sipylum and the valley of the Hermus, or crossing the difficult pass of Kavakli Dereh (the present road from Kassuba to Smyrna), and so along the Boornabat plain.

"There is another well-defined pass leading off the Ephesus road at the foot of the Takhlatu mountain by the villages of Takhlatu to the village of Achiklar, right into the Boornabat plain. At Takhlatu are such large remains as are only to be explained by a well-frequented route. I now conceive that the second Sesostris is to be sought for at the back of the mountain on which is the first.

"I may observe that on the cliffs near Ephesus are some niches as well-defined as those of the Pseudo-Sesostris or Niobe."

From the same, under date of June 18th, 1866:

"The receipt of the Pseudo-Sesostris has been already acknowledged by the Society, and I have since sent the photograph of the Niobe. I now send the photograph of the newly discovered colossal head near Smyrna, found by Mr. Frederick Spiegelthal, and photographed by Mr. A. Svoboda. This monument is on a smaller scale than the others, and does not embrace the whole figure. I consider it, however, as belonging to the same general group, and class it as Lydo-Assyrian. It is about one mile from the Caravan Bridge, and the same distance from the Baths of Diana (Hulka Boonar), on a part of the Boojah range, in the valley of St. Ann or the Meles, opposite Mt. Pagus. It is on the cliff or wall of an amphitheatral opening, partly quarried, and, as I think, partly natural, and which has doubtless been used as some kind of theatre.

"The head is carved on a projecting knob of limestone, and Mr. Svoboda's photograph shows the best side of the figure, but the necklace is not so well defined on that side as on the other. The nose, left eyeball, and mouth are marked and injured by musket-balls, some of them fired by shepherds within the last few years. The large ears we consider to represent horns. The necklace is well cut, and consists of oblong discs strung together. What by others are considered as a human arm and hand I rather look upon as the paw and claws of a beast.

"On each side of the head, down below, are large rock-cut tombs, one of which, to the left, consists of two chambers, and is inhabited by a beggar. The neighboring amphitheatral formations also show signs of tombs.

"We continue our researches, in the hope of finding the other Pseudo-Sesostris described by Herodotus. In this month, Mr. Spiegelthal has made a most interesting discovery, namely of a reproduction or replica of the well-known Pseudo-Sesostris of Nymphæum, described in my former paper. It is close by on the same brook, but lower down on the margin of the brook, and obscured by brushwood.

"Mr. Spiegelthal affirms that it is colossal, like the other, and has the same details, lance, bow, etc., but that the face is more injured. He has arranged for me to examine it.

"Mr. Georges Perrot has called my attention to a rock-cut monument mentioned by Mr. Hamilton as near Isbarteek (Sparta tes Pisidias), in the interior, and I had despaired of getting any account of it; but fortunately an archaeologist has proceeded there, and I have applied to him."

After the reading of the correspondence, communications were declared in order.

1. On the Niobe of Magnesia ad Sipylum; and, On the newly discovered Lydo-Assyrian Monument of Smyrna; by Hyde Clarke, Esq., of Smyrna.

These two brief papers were read by the Corresponding Secretary, in connection with the letters of Mr. Clarke on the same and kindred subjects, given in full above. Each was accompanied by a photograph of the monument treated of. Mr. Clarke expresses his opinion that the Niobe is altogether an artificial work, against those who hold that it is a natural formation, or such a formation touched up and per-fectured by artificial labor. Besides the tomb near the other monument now occupied by a beggar, spoken of in the letter, Mr. Clarke says that in the adjoining hollow are evidences of rock-cut tombs blocked up with masonry, which he is hoping to explore.

These papers bear date of May 3d, 1866.

2. On the Formation of the Chinese Language, by Rev. E. W. Syle, of Pelham, N. Y.

Mr. Syle gave a succinct account of the characteristic features of the Chinese, and of its mode of writing, illustrating his remarks by reference to written documents. He described the process of learning the written language practised in the native schools, and thought that the absorption of time and mental effort in the task of acquiring and handling an instrument so unmanageable and burdensome was one of the main causes of the comparative stagnation of the Chinese mind.

3. Rev. S. H. Calhonn, D.D., of the Syrian Mission (at Abeih), explained the present position of affairs in the neighborhood of his field of labor, and described various journeys which he had made in and about the chain of Lebanon, speaking more particularly of his visits to Baalbec, and of the aspect of the ruins there.

The Society met again at 9 o'clock on Thursday morning, in the same place.

Before the reading of communications was resumed, the Corresponding Secretary brought once more to the notice of the Society the subject of the Bopp Fund, first presented before them a year ago, and read from the last circular of the Committee (dated May 16th, 1866) their proposal as to the disposition to be made of the income of the fund (which now amounts to 8000 thalers): it is to be applied to "the support of a young scholar, of whatever country, who shall have already completed his university studies, in order to the continuance of the same, wherever it may be; as also, to the bestowal of prizes for completed scientific labors, or to the support of scientific undertakings—in all cases, of course, only within the departments cultivated by Prof. Bopp, of Sanskrit philology and comparative grammar, with special reference to the Indo-European family." The Secretary stated that the American subscriptions to the fund now amount to two hundred dollars, which sum he hoped would be yet farther increased.

The Secretary also read, from the last-received number of the Monatsberichte of the Berlin Academy, an account by Prof. Lepsius of his recent discovery of a bilingual (hieroglyphic and Greek) monument at Tanis in Egypt, longer than the celebrated inscription of the Rosetta stone, and in a perfect state of preservation. He pointed out the exceeding interest and importance of the discovery.

4. On the Chinese Musical Notation, by Rev. Mr. Syle.

Rev. Mr. Syle explained the method in which the Chinese managed to indicate musical tones, their length, and their accent, and in which the combination of the tones with the words intended to be sung to them was made. He further characterized the Chinese gamut and the style of the national music. His explanations were fully illustrated with charts and other documents.

5. On the Cedars of Lebanon, by Rev. Mr. Calhonn.

The speaker described his visits to the celebrated grove of these trees, so well known by the accounts of travellers, and gave a very interesting description of its situation and aspect, with details respecting the age and mode of growth of the trees. He also spoke of other groves of the same tree upon other parts of the same range.

6. On the Classifications of Languages, by Prof. W. D. Whitney, of New Haven.

This paper was stated to be mainly an extract from a general treatise upon language and its study which the writer had now in press. The classification of languages into families, on the ground of proved or probable descent from a common ancestor, was first succinctly sketched, and the evidences on which it reposes were reviewed, being shown to be in part correspondences of material, in part morphological correspondences, or analogies of structure. The less certain and satisfactory character of the latter kind of evidence was alluded to. The morphological classification, depending upon style of structure only, was then set forth—the division of human tongues into monosyllabic and polysyllabic, into isolating, agglutinative, and inflective, and so on. The defects of this mode of classification were pointed out: as its inequality, there being but one genetic family in the isolating class (the Chinese etc.), and two in the inflective (Indo-European and Semitic), while the great mass of languages was agglutinative; the heterogeneity of its classes, there being differences of structure between the two inflective families, as also between certain of the agglutinative families, hardly, if at all, less important than those which separate the great classes; and its indistinctness, certain languages constituting transitional forms between one class and another. Müller's distinction of "family," "nomadic," and "state" languages was criticised. Schleicher's scheme of formal notation for the characteristic features of linguistic structure was explained and illustrated. Classification by general value as means and instrument of expression was also spoken of, the various and diverse items of value which have to be taken into account in making out such a classification were pointed out, and the difficulty of the task indicated. Finally, the superior value and importance of the genetical method was shown; it is the first and directest object at which the comparative philologist aims, it furnishes the necessary foundation of all the others, and with its establishment are directly connected those more general ethnological conclusions which form so conspicuous a part of the interest of linguistic science.

7. Rev. Mr. Syle exhibited a number of Chinese pictures illustrating the national superstitions, especially those connected with the doctrine of transmigration, and accompanied the exhibition with oral explanations.

8. On the Karens and their Language, by Rev. E. B. Cross, Missionary in Farther India; read by the Corresponding Secretary.

Mr. Cross's letter accompanying this paper has been given above.

The paper begins with an account of the name "Karen," which Mr. Cross explains as signifying 'first, aboriginal,' and regards as indicating the belief by the Burmans that this was the race of original possessors of the soil. Their language was first reduced to writing, by the missionaries of the American Baptist board, about thirty years ago, in two principal dialects, the Sgau and Pgho (Pwo, Sho), of which the former is looked upon as the especially typical language of the race. The grammatical and lexical works in which they have been already treated are mentioned, and Mr. Cross then proceeds to draw out his own independent statement of the peculiarities of Karen speech, treating first of the spoken alphabet, including the five (or six) tones which, as in the other monosyllabic tongues, are used to help the variation of meaning of the words, then taking up the means of expression of grammatical relations, by the means of affirmatives or adjunctive words. Into the details of the statement it is impossible here to enter. The clannishness and segregation of the tribes of Karens, and their necessary consequence, the great variety of dialects, are spoken of, and an enumeration of many of these dialects is given, with indication of their relations and respective importance—it being stated, however, that there are not a few tribes of which the names only are known.

By way of appendix, Mr. Cross reports a Karen tradition respecting the origin of their race, in two versions, as given by the Sgau Karens and by the eastern Bghais, two extreme members of the race. It represents them to have come from the west, along with their brothers, the Chinese, and to have been left behind by the latter. The Bghai tradition speaks of a metal plate as left by the departing Chinese for their ancestors, and of this plate Mr. Cross remarks: "The book, or brass and gold plate, spoken of in this tradition, is still in existence. It is said by a trustworthy and learned Karen, Rev. Quala, who has seen and examined it, to be a thin lamina of metal, of a very dark color, and smooth and shining; and one end seems to have been cut off, so as to destroy some of the letters. The letters are said by Quala to resemble those of the Hindustani, and to be entirely unlike the Burmese. The same authority states that the Red Karen King, Kaiphogyee, who holds this plate, has also in his possession five ivory plates, in shape and size like the ordinary Burmese palm-leaf strips, or about two feet in length by two and a half inches in width, and covered with the same kind of characters."

After the reading of this communication, the Society adjourned.

Proceedings at Boston and Cambridge, May 22d, 1867.

THE Society met at the usual time and place, and was called to order by the President soon after 10 o'clock.

After the reading of the minutes of the last meeting, it was voted, in accordance with the recommendation of the Committee of Arrangements, to adjourn the morning session about 1 o'clock, to re-assemble at 4 o'clock, at Dr. Peabody's, in Cambridge, and to adjourn at 8 o'clock, in order to accept an invitation kindly tendered by Dr. Peabody, to take tea socially with a few friends at his house.

The Librarian made a brief statement respecting the additions to the library and cabinet during the past year, and said that the full acknowledgments would be printed along with the Proceedings at this meeting (see below).

The Committee of Publication reported that, owing to unfavorable circumstances, nothing had been issued from the press by the Society during the past year; it was hoped that the printing of Vol. ix of the Journal would soon be begun: the Tāittiriya-Prāṭiśākhya, text, commentary, translation, and notes, was expected to occupy a considerable part of it, as already some time since announced. In view of the intermission of any issue of the Journal since the last annual meeting, the Committee had recommended that no annual assessment be levied upon the members for the year 1867-8, and this recommendation had been considered and approved by the Directors, and was, by their authority, presented to the Society for acceptance.

Hereupon, on motion, the recommendation was accepted by the Society, and the assessment for the year suspended.

The Directors announced that they had appointed the autumn meeting to be held in New Haven, on Wednesday, Oct. 16th, 1867, unless the Committee of Arrangements—Prof. Salisbury of New Haven, Mr. Cotheal of New York, and the Corresponding Secretary—should see reason to fix on some other day in the same month. Also, that they had designated Prof. Hadley of New Haven and Mr. J. H. Trumbull of Hartford, with the Corresponding Secretary, a committee to examine, at the request of Prof. Henry, Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, an ethnological essay by Mr. L. H. Morgan of Rochester, on systems of consanguinity, and to report upon its worthiness to be accepted for publication by the Institution.

The following gentlemen, recommended by the Directors, were elected Corporate Members of the Society:

Rev. Edson L. Clark, of Guilford, Conn.

Mr. John Fiske, of Cambridge, Mass.

Prof. Charles M. Mead, of Andover, Mass.

Announcement was made to the meeting, by the Corresponding Secretary, of the Society's loss by death during the past year of three of its members, Rev. Dr. William Jenks of Boston, Rev. Dr. William Goodell, late of the Constantinople mission of the A.B.C.F.M., and Mr. Theodore Dwight of Brooklyn.

Rev. Dr. Anderson, of Boston, gave a sketch of the life and labors of Dr. Jenks. With him, as much as, or more than, with any other person, originated the idea of the American Oriental Society, one of whose Vice-Presidents he had been from its inception in 1842, although now long prevented by deafness from taking an active part in its deliberations. He was born in 1778. He held for some years the Professorship of Oriental and English literature in Bowdoin College. His chief literary work was the compilation of the Comprehensive Commentary. He was a man of profound learning and extensive reading, and his private library, thirty years ago, was reputed one of the best in New England.

Dr. Parker, of Washington, also spoke of the services rendered by Dr. Jenks to various departments of learning and philanthropic effort.

Rev. Dr. Clark, of Boston, paid the merited tribute to the worth of the venerable Dr. Goodell, who had finished his missionary labors in the East a year or two since, and returned to pass a brief remnant of life among his friends at home.

Rev. Mr. Syle, of Pelham, N. Y., spoke briefly and with much feeling of the character of Mr. Dwight, his devotion to every good work, and his services as for a long time Secretary of the American Ethnological Society.

Out of the remarks of Dr. Parker grew a discussion of the recent progress of western ideas and institutions in China and Japan, in which, besides himself, Rev. Mr. Syle, and Rev. Dr. Pitkin, of Buffalo, took a part.

Mr. J. S. Ropes, Dr. Clark, and Prof. Hoppin were appointed a committee to nominate officers for the next year. Pres. Woolsey desired to decline a nomination for re-election as President, but was prevailed upon by the general remonstrances of the members present to withdraw his objections. The following ticket was offered by the committee, and elected without dissent:

President —Pres. T. D. WOOLSEY, D.D., LL.D.,	of New Haven.

Communications were next called for.

1. Rev. N. G. Clark, D.D., Secretary of the A. B. C. F. M., read extracts from a letter lately received from Rev. O. P. Allen, Missionary at Kharput, relative to certain ruins in Kurdistan, north of Diarbekir. The letter bears date of Nov. 5th, 1866. Mr. Allen says:

Our road to-day leads out of the valley in which Harro is built, and we come out upon the highlands of the Diarbekir plain. We are now entering the Koordish speaking region. We stopped awhile at Hashtar, an Armenian village of fifty or sixty houses, where they know only Koordish. Passing by Bulbal and Atsha and other villages, we reached Farkin early in the afternoon. This was once a large city. It was surrounded by a wall which is still standing, being broken down in only a few places. The foundation is built of round stones, but the upper portion of huge hewn stones. The Armenians of the place all speak Koordish, and know scarcely anything of Christianity. This will be one of the first places to occupy as an outstation. We went over some of the ruins, having with us Consul Taylor's pamphlet giving an account of his explorations. We first went to the southeastern corner, where is a stately pile of ruins, said to have been built by St. Marutha over the graves of the christian martyrs slain by the Persian king Shapur. It was once a beautiful building, and seems intended rather as a monument than for a church. The outside walls and some of the pillars and arches are still standing. Other columns two and a half feet in diameter, of porphyry, beautifully polished, had fallen. The capitals of the columns are singular, looking exactly like a basket of wicker work set on the top of a column. These were finely carved from a softer kind of stone. There are many other buildings near this, but so broken down that we could not determine what they were. The ground about the monument church is thickly laid with grave stones. Passing on around the eastern end, the wall is double, and in a good state of preservation. There are many inscriptions, but none of very ancient date, it is said. An extensive ruin at the north-east corner looks like an old palace. Considerable space inside the walls is cultivated. At the western side is a beautiful mosque, which, from an inscription read by Mr. Taylor, seems to have been built in the year 624 of the Hejira or 1213 of our area, by Modhuffer ed Deen Ghazi, nephew of Selah ed Deen, or Saladin, as he is usually called. The most interesting ruin was an old christian church which seemed much older than the mosque. Its walls, 3 feet thick, are made of large blocks of hewn stone. Three sides are standing. The two gable ends show that it had a slanting roof, like the Grecian temples. A portion of the eastern wall is semi-circular, to form a space for the pulpit or altar. This space was frescoed, probably, as the stones are fitted to hold the plaster. Above this is a beautifully carved cornice. The capitals are the real Corinthian, carved in stone. Its interior width is 75 feet, its length 108 feet, its height to the eaves about 30 feet. But we could not examine the ruins as we would gladly have done, as we had only a couple of hours where one would need to spend weeks to examine all there is to be seen. Another object of interest is a watch tower, about 100 feet high, some distance from the present walls, said to have been built by Saladin's nephew. It overlooks a valley in which an enemy might have approached the city unobserved but for this tower. The present ruins appear to have been built since the christian era, but the mounds and scattered stones outside the city indicate a much earlier date. Some geographers suppose this to be the ancient Carcathiocerta.

Out of the remarks upon this paper grew a discussion respecting the advisability and value of archaeological, literary, and scientific investigations made by missionaries in their various fields of labor. Part was taken in the discussion by Dr. Anderson, Dr. Pitkin, Rev. Mr. Syle, Mr. Ropes, and Prof. Whitney. The opinion was unanimously expressed that such investigations, undertaken and carried on as opportunity offered, in the intervals of missionary work, were of very high importance in their bearing on the culture and freshness and activity of mind of the missionary himself, on his relation to the people and conditions among which his lot was cast, and on the general public—both in the way of direct enlightenment, and by attracting attention, admiration, and sympathy to the missionary cause and its representatives. Reference was made to the immense amount of valuable contributions to knowledge which had been brought before the world by missionaries, to their abundant labors in connection with this Society, as recorded in its Journal, and to the honorable estimation in which American missionaries were held everywhere by reason of these and other similar labors. It was thought that only the narrowest and least enlightened apprehension of the missionary work, could find ground for aught but praise and satisfaction in the literary and scientific activity of the missionaries.

2. On the Niobe of Mt. Sipylus, by Rev. H. J. Van Lennep, D.D., Missionary in Syria of the A. B. C. F. M.; read by the Corresponding Secretary.

Dr. Van Lennep first rehearses the myth of Niobe, turned to stone upon Mt. Sipylus, as related by Homer and the other classic writers. He then gives a description of the mountain and its surroundings, and goes on to describe a journey which he made near it last autumn, in the course of which he observed and visited the remarkable and ancient work which he regards as Niobe's image. The situation is about five miles east of Magnesia, upon the highroad which skirts the mountain, and at the first casé. There is a pond at the base of the mountain, and directly above it, about four hundred feet up, is an artificially smoothed wall of rock, in which is sunk a double niche, containing the colossal bust upon a pedestal, cut in very high relief—the whole much defaced, but still plainly recognizable. The rock is a hard white marble, with occasional blue veins, and one of these veins "begins at the region of the eyes, covers the lower part of the face, trickles down the neck and breast, and, falling upon the pedestal, there divides into two broad streams, which flow down to the platform beneath, perfectly representing the pouring of a dark-colored flood of tears."

Mr. Van Lennep quotes the passages of Pausanias, Strabo, etc., referring to the Niobe, and argues that their descriptions are applicable to this monument.

He also encloses a sketch of the monument and its immediate surroundings, taken from a little distance at its left.

3. On the old Egyptian Chronicle, by Dr. Charles Pickering, of Boston.

Dr. Pickering presented some of the main features of this document, with chronological conclusions of his own founded upon it.

Hon. J. D. Baldwin pointed out that the chronicle in question was by the best authorities, such as Lepsius, regarded as spurious, and that he fully concurred in their opinion.

4. On the rendering of the word God in Chinese, by Pres. Woolsey, of Yale College.

This was an essay on the Chinese equivalents for our word God which have been used by Christian missionaries. A historical account was first given of the terms adopted by the Catholics, from Ricci's time until the settlement of the disputes in relation to that matter at Rome near the beginning of the 18th century. Then the views of the Protestant missionaries in China were noticed, the decision of the American Bible Society in favor of Shin and against Shang-ti in 1850, the continuance of a part of the missionaries to use Shang-ti in their versions, and the rise in recent years of an opinion on the part of some very able translators in favor of Tien-chu. A comparison was then instituted between these three terms. It was claimed that Tien-chu—the term adopted by early catholic teachers and authorized at Rome—had no shade of heathenish or pantheistic thought attached to it, and was well understood through China, as the term in use to denote the supreme object of christian worship. At the same time it was admitted that Tien-chu was not properly a translation of the original words used for God in the Bible. The term Shin was next examined, and it was shown from printed statements of Messrs. Hartwell and Peet, as well as from the testimony of other missionaries, that it is far too vague to take the place of God in general, although, as most concede, it cannot be wholly dispensed with. Next, Shang-ti was discussed at considerable length, in connection with the disputes of the Jesuit and other Catholic preachers, and with the Chinese religious philosophy. The essay of the honest and able Jesuit, Langobardi, who condemned Shang-ti and strove to show that the Chinese were atheistic (or, as we should say, pantheistic) in their view of the universe, not only in modern times but from the very origin of Chinese speculation, was cited with approbation. The opinions also of modern writers on philosophy, of Schelling, and especially Wuttke in his Geschichte des Heidenthums, were made use of to corroborate the position taken by the author of the essay, that Shang-ti, as properly denoting heaven personified, a conception of naturalism and of pantheism, was an unsafe representative of the scriptural idea of God. On the whole then, Shang-ti being condemned, and Shin as a leading term pronounced too vague and general, Tien-chu had the preference given to it.

Extended remarks were made upon this paper and its subject by Dr. Parker and Rev. Mr. Syle, both of whom agreed with the writer in his definitive rejection of Shang-ti, but thought more favorably than he of Shin, and less favorably of Tien-chu.

5. On the views of Prof. Key and M. Oppert respecting Sanscritic and Indo-European Philology, by Prof. W. D. Whitney, of New Haven.

In this paper Prof. Whitney defended the current methods and commonly accepted results of comparative philology against the attacks of Prof. Key (in the Transactions of the Philological Society of London, 1862-3) and M. Oppert (in the Annales de Philosophie Chrétienne for 1866). He began with pointing out the nature and grounds of the dependence of general linguistic science upon Indo-European philology, and of the latter upon Sanskrit study, the limits to this dependence, and its liability to misapprehension and exaggeration by incautious or ill-informed students. The faults of detail which Mr. Key indicates in the work of particular scholars, as Müller and Bopp, do not affect their general philological method, and if his own basis of scholarship had been so extended as to embrace a good knowledge of Sanskrit, he might have been able to criticize their work from a higher point of view, separating its sound from its unsound portions, and duly estimating both. While many of his objections are well taken, others are insufficiently founded, and cannot be maintained. M. Oppert's assault is one of much more serious intent, but much weaker substance and result. He fully accepts the Boppian method, even going so far as to maintain that Bopp has exhausted the whole field of linguistic science, leaving nothing of consequence for others to do after him: but its conclusions he allows to be grammatical only, refusing them any value as historical or ethnological data; he strongly condemns also the introduction of any elements of the new historical philology into the methods of classical instruction. His conception of the scope, bearings, and condition of the science is as far as possible out of the way. He is not a general skeptic as to ethnological connections, as might be expected from his denial of the accepted sources of information respecting them: on the contrary, he puts forth the most detailed and definite statements about the derivation and composition of the Indo-European races, in general and in particular; but they are mere dicta, resting upon no assignable basis, and in no small part explainable as the conversions of doubtful or half-understood hypotheses of linguists, drawn from linguistic data, into absolute facts. A main, if not the main, object of the essay is to deny that there is any race-connection, any tie of common descent, between the various nations speaking the branches of Indo-European language: the author does not attempt to disprove the connection, but treats it as a palpably unsound and absurd dogma; but his allusions show that he regards the exceptional propagation of the Latin and Arabic as, by their analogy, sufficiently accounting for the extension of Indo-European language over half a world of heterogeneous tribes. The analogy, however, is a wholly insufficient and inapplicable one, as was attempted to be shown by an inquiry into the causes of the spread of Latin and Arabic, and an indication of their absence in the ancient history of Indo-European speech. M. Oppert's essay is, from its beginning to its end, a tissue of misrepresentations, unwarranted assumptions, and unsound inferences, and cannot but seriously damage his reputation as a linguistic and ethnological scholar.

6. On Chinese Chronology, by Rev. E. Burgess, of South Franklin, Mass.

Mr. Burgess, basing himself mainly upon the discussions of the subject in the introduction to the last volume of Dr. Legge's edition of the Chinese Classics, attempted to show the unauthentic character of the accepted Chinese chronology in its earlier period, previous to the time of Confucius.

After the reading of this paper, the Society adjourned, to meet again in New Haven in October next.

Proceedings at New Haven, October 16th and 17th, 1867.

The Society was convened by notification, on the day appointed at the last meeting, and in the same place as last year—namely, the Library-room of the Sheffield Scientific School of Yale College. The President took the chair and called the meeting to order at 3 o'clock.

The minutes of the last meeting having been read by the Recording Secretary and accepted, the Committee of Arrangements gave notice that the Treasurer of the Society, Prof. D. C. Gilman, invited the members to come together at his house in the evening, for a social gathering, at which, however, it was arranged that a single paper, that of Rev. Dr. Thompson, should be read. The invitation was accepted, with thanks, and the meeting so ordered.

The Directors announced that the Annual meeting for 1868 would be holden in Boston, on Wednesday, May 20th, and that Mr. Joseph S. Ropes, of Boston, with the Recording and Corresponding Secretaries, had been designated as Committee of Arrangements for it.

The following gentlemen, proposed and recommended by the Directors, were chosen Corporate Members of the Society :

Prof. Edward B. Coe, of New Haven.

“ D. Stuart Dodge, of New York.

“ E. P. Evans, of Ann Arbor, Mich.

Mr. Michael Heilprinn, of New York.

Prof. Ammi B. Hyde, of Meadville, Pa.

The Corresponding Secretary presented the correspondence of the past six months, extracts from which are given below.

Among the numerous letters of excuse from members unable to be present was one from Rev. J. G. Auer, dated from the Mission House of the Protestant Episcopal Church, at West Philadelphia, saying that his time of service in this country was now ended, and he was just leaving for his mission-field in West Africa, where he hoped to arrive about Christmas. He sent with the letter copies of the Grebo prayer-book and the Grebo-English dictionary of Bishop Payne, just published.

Another, of similar tenor, from Rev. G. W. Wood, of New York, was accompanied by an Armenian prayer-book, of which Mr. Wood writes—

“ The book is in the Modern Armenian language, and is the revised prayer-book issued by that party in the Armenian church which desires a reform in that church. It is put forth by those who reject the Protestant name; yet, by its omissions and positive teachings, it is a decided approach toward the Protestant faith.”

Dr. S. Wells Williams, under date of Peking, March 12th, 1867, says—

"You will be interested to learn that the Nestorian monument at Si-agan-fu in Shensi has been recently visited by two foreigners, English missionaries, who found it in a good state of preservation, on the whole; the building in which it formerly stood, or in whose wall it was embedded, was in utter ruin, and the tablet remained upright, exposed to the weather. Mr. Lees and Mr. Williamson were quickly directed to the place, for the people knew the character of the inscription, and had no trouble in getting impressions of the engraving. It is a great and thick slab of black marble, and shows signs of the effects of the weather.

"The region around Si-ngan is now almost destitute of population, its inhabitants having fled to escape the horrible cruelties and exactions of the insurgents and Mohammedans during the last three years, who are still ravaging the country south of the mountains toward Hankau. Another Bible agent, Mr. Wylie, has just reached Peking from a journey across from Hankau through Kaifung, and narrowly escaped the hands of these marauding bands.

"I have just received the Society's Proceedings for 1865, which are very interesting. The notice of Mr. C. W. Bradley contains a just tribute to a very energetic and liberal promoter of Oriental studies. It was, however, Mr. Reed, our minister, who induced him to come up to the Pei-ho; I do not remember that Mr. Bradley had much intercourse at that time with Lord Elgin. Mr. Reed, too, sent him with the Treaty to Washington in July 1858, and he returned soon to China. The expedition was not in the winter, at which time ice covers the stream. Mr. Reed was also the means of getting him placed on the Commission of Claims, which were all settled in six weeks; it was the refusal of the government at Washington to pay what all regarded as his just salary for this work as Commissioner that led him to resign.

"My spare time is all employed in the revision of my dictionary, or I would try to send something for the Society."

Dr. J. Muir, of Edinburgh, writes under date of July 10th, 1867—

"I sent you some time ago Prof. Goldstücker's summary in the Examiner of his reply read in the winter to my paper on the interpretation of the Veda. Lately I wrote to Dr. Rost to find out if the article in extenso was yet in type, as I was naturally desirous to read the author's propositions in detail. But I was informed that Prof. Goldstücker was reserving the paper till he should be able to complete it by the addition of his proofs. When, then, if ever, the article is to see the light, must be left for the future to clear up; but I really wish he would let us have it, and show how he is going to demolish all his adversaries.

"Prof. Aufrecht is working steadily at his vocabulary—or concordance, as he calls it—of the Rig-Veda, having already sent his vocabulary of the Atharva-Veda to the press. Max Müller, as you will have become aware, is about to bring out a new translation of the Rig-Veda. He has been in rather weak health, but, I am glad to learn, is better now.

"I have been working all winter at a new edition of the first volume of my Sanskrit Texts, on Caste: it is partly printed, but will not be ready for at least another six months. It is very much enlarged."

Dr. W. F. A. Behrnauer, of Dresden, writes from Leipzig, June 12th, 1867—

"I send you my programme of the Oriental Photolithographic Album, destined to be printed in Leipzig, Paris, and Beyroot; with a proof. Have the kindness to print it in your Journal."

The Corresponding Secretary read the chief parts of the detailed (manuscript) prospectus, as follows:

Section III. The four Turkish works composing this section are of a historical and scientific character, with appendixes, translations, and biographies. Their special description, as well as that of the Nineveh slabs whose photolithographic representation constitutes the IVth Section, is omitted here.

From Rev. D. D. Green, Missionary of the Presbyterian Board at Hang-chau, China, comes a finely executed impression of a Chinese monument, with accompanying letter (dated May 7th, 1867), and translations:

"Enclosed please find a rubbing from a tablet in one of the monasteries near this city. It is a representation of the Goddess of Mercy, with her hundred hands, ready to do good to all. The inscription above the image is a Buddhistic chant, and contains so many foreign words that but few Chinese scholars can read it. Of the inscriptions under the image I send you a version. It is very unsatisfactory, but the best I can do with my present knowledge of the Chinese, in connection with the manifest ignorance of Chinese teachers as to the doctrines of the Buddhists. I send you this as an acknowledgment of the receipt of a copy of the Proceedings of the American Oriental Society for 1865, read about Jan. 1st, 1867."

The commemorative part of the inscription reads as follows:

"In the reign of the emperor Giin-long, in the fiftieth cycle, during the spring, in [the city of] Vu-ling [i.e. Hang-chau], one having a good and believing heart sculptured this image of the Goddess of Mercy, and the sacred chant over it, and erected the tablet in the Dzin-z monastery, which is situated in the plain south [of the lake to the west of Hang-chau], in the hall of the god of longevity, by the favor of the Goddess of Mercy, the god presiding over the great present, and Buddha, whose ages cannot be numbered—to whom belong blessedness of community, in hope of the original unity without the least diversity. For the purpose of celebrating the praises of the pure perfection, these three chants were most carefully prepared. On examination, it is found that these three chants were anciently handed down from their author Wang, of the district city of Kyia-ding. His honorary title was Dzao-an, and his name was Zwiün-yiao."

Mr. Green adds a note or two:

"The monastery was first built during the Tsin dynasty, a few years before the beginning of the Song. The buildings have been repeatedly burned down, and again built up, sometimes by imperial patronage, but more often from funds collected by the priests. The place is now in ruins, like most of the temples in this vicinity, destroyed by the Tai-ping rebels. The tablet, however, is still standing.

"The date given in the inscription as that of the erection of the tablet is about A.D. 1795. The author of the verses lived about eight centuries earlier: the exact date could be ascertained, if access were had to the hien-ts of his native place. The chants show that during the Song dynasty (A.D. 960-1280) scholars of no mean pretension were Buddhists."

The following communications were presented at the different sessions of the Meeting:

1. On the Routes and the Chief Articles of Commerce from the East to Europe during the Middle Ages, by Pres't T. D. Woolsey, of New Haven.

President Woolsey spoke of the route which led from India, by the Persian Gulf and the Euphrates, to Babylon, and so to the Mediterranean, and by the Red Sea to Egypt, and especially to Alexandria. These were ancient routes, and the trade passing through them was principally in the hands of Constantinople, although Venice at an early day shared in it. Venice dealt even in Christian slaves with the Mohammedans. The Popes long tried in vain to prevent commercial intercourse with these enemies of the faith. From Constantinople the route of trade lay especially up the Danube, by Vienna and Ratisbon, and thus penetrated into the regions of northern Europe.

During the crusades, so long as the avenue by the Persian gulf and the Red Sea were controlled by hostile Mohammedan powers, it became necessary to adopt another more expensive and circuitous route, requiring much land-carriage and several transfers of freight. This route led up the Indus, across the mountains on beasts of burden, thence by the Oxus, and so to the Caspian Sea. This, which was an ancient route, was now adopted by Venice and Genoa. From the Caspian it took especially the direction of the Volga, to a place called Zarizyn, thence across the country to the Don, where, at the river's mouth, in the town of Tana, now Azov, both Venice and Genoa had commercial privileges, and the former had a consul from the end of the 12th century. Afterwards an important entrepôt for Genoa was Theodosia, now Kaffa, in the Crimea.

When, in 1258, the Mongols under Hulagu Khan overthrew the Caliphate of Bagdad, Egypt being still hostile, it became possible to take the path by the Persian gulf and the Tigris to Bagdad, and so through the Mongol dominions to the west. Two subordinate routes—one across the country to Tauris (Tabris) and the Black Sea, the other via Tabris to the north-eastern corner of the Levant—sent the productions of the Orient into Europe. The important marts of the Italians on the Black Sea and the coast of Cilicia were noticed. The trade also of the Christian kingdom of Jerusalem was illustrated by reference to a chapter of the Assises of the Burgesses' court of the kingdom of Jerusalem," in which the tariff on eastern products is carried out into a multitude of particulars.

After the crusades were over, the Popes having now softened down their prohibitions of commercial intercourse with Mussulmans, the Venetians made arrangements with the rulers of Egypt, by which they were enabled to engross the trade with the east along its most convenient path through the Red Sea, and this continued until towards the end of the Middle Ages, when the Portuguese found out a cheaper and better way of communication.

The principal products of the east imported into Europe were then spoken of, especially silk, until its manufacture was introduced into the Byzantine empire under Justinian, and from thence into Sicily and Italy. Of sugar also, and of the sugar refineries on the Tigris, whence the knowledge spread, not only westward with the cultivation of the cane, but eastward to India and China, an account was given, which was based on Ritter's valuable illustration of that subject in his great geographical work.

2. Translation of the Siamese Work entitled Bre-Temīya-Jātak, a life of Buddha in one of his previous existences, by Dr. A. Bastian, of Bremen; presented by the Corresponding Secretary.

The Buddhists, Dr. Bastian says, distinguish five hundred and fifty lesser Jātakas, and ten principal ones, treating of the life of Buddha in his various existences anterior to the historical one. The whole, collected together, form the Nibat, thirty books of which have been translated out of Pali into Siamese by Bana Dammapiyat. The Temī Jātaka is the first of the ten principal ones; the last, which relates the saint's life next preceding his being re-born as Gautama Cakyamuni, in Kapilavastu, being entitled the Vesantara, or the Mahā-Jāt, 'great Jātaka.'

This, like so many other Indian biographies, begins with telling of a king (sovereign of Vārānasi, 'Benares'), who lives long childless, until the merits and prayers of one of his numerous wives move Indra to come to the relief of the royal pair. The god's regard falls upon Bre-Borom-Bodhisatr, who, since his previous existence as a king of Benares, had spent 10,000 years in hell in expiation of his misdeeds committed in that capacity, and then had lived long in heaven in reward of his good deeds, and now, his debt and credit being both cancelled, was just ready to be born once more. Indra proposes that he choose for his next life the condition of son to the present king and queen of Benares, and promises that it shall tend to the further perfection of his merits. He assents; and five hundred other inhabitants of heaven, whose time is nearly up, are also despatched below to be born as his contemporaries and playmates. Sixteen wet-nurses are provided for him by the delighted king; the good points which led to their selection are fully detailed. The Brahmans prophecy all manner of good-fortune for him, and give him the name Temīya.

When a month old, he chanced to be sitting in his father's lap when the latter pronounced sentence of torture and death on four malefactors. This offense against mercy, which the king will have to expiate hereafter by the torments of hell, startles and alarms him. He reflects on his own past history, and perceives that for such acts during his previous reign he had suffered almost endlessly in hell-fire, and that, if he allows himself to grow up a prince and become again a king, the same or a worse fate awaits him anew. He resolves, therefore, for the purpose of evading the royal dignity, to feign himself lame, deaf and dumb, and stupid; and he rigidly carries out his vows, emaciating his body by abstinence from his natural food. Now commences a series of severe tests, in which his unfortunate five hundred comrades have to share, intended to try whether he cannot be made to act like them, and to exhibit the desires and capacities suited to his age. But the prince, reflecting on the torments of hell, so much greater, bears all the tests unflinchingly, and shows an utter impassiveness. Deprivation of food, temptation by cakes, sweetmeats, fruits, playthings, and other sensual pleasures, alarms of fire, of wild elephants, of arms, of terrible noises, of darkness, distress by flies, by stench, by heat—all are fruitless. When he has thus reached the age of sixteen, his father again consults the Brahmans, who confess that their former prognostications were lies, and now advise that he be sent away and buried in the cemetery of spectres. But the queen intercedes, and, in fulfillment of an old promise made her at the time of the child's birth, extorts a cession of the royal authority to him for the space of seven days, and, during their continuance, lavishes upon her son her entreaties that he will have pity on her, give up the part she is sure he is acting, and show the powers he possesses. This also failing, he is carried out, in accordance with the directions of the Brahmans, to be killed and hidden away. But while the king's charioteer, charged with putting him to death, is digging his grave, he tries and finds himself possessed of superhuman powers, receives consecrated garments from Indra, and preaches the law to his intending murderer till the latter is fully converted, and desires to join him in a hermit's life in the forest. He refuses the proposal, and sends the charioteer back to the palace with the apparel he had worn and the tidings of his condition. The king and queen, the court and army, come out to see him in his hermitage, are also converted by his preaching, and, forsaking the capital, take up a religious life. The same fate befalls five other kings with their armies, as they come in succession with the intent of warring upon Benares. "There was room enough for all these recluses, and for more to come. The elephants were turned loose in the jungle; the horses returned to their wild condition; the royal chariots decayed and fell in pieces, mouldering in the forest. Gold, silver, precious gems, and jewels were strewn about and covered the ground like sand. And all these Bre-Dabos and Bre-Dabosi, on the extinction of life, ascended to the upper terraces of the Brahma-world, abiding there together. Those beings which were brute animals, if they had shown themselves of a kind and benevolent disposition toward the hermits, were re-born, on their death, in one of the six heavens, where they enjoyed celestial riches, and all became sons and daughters of divinities, in god-like existence."

3. On the Egyptian Doctrine of the Future Life, by Rev. Joseph P. Thompson, D.D., of New York.

Of this long and elaborate paper, the following are the leading points: The legend of Isis and Osiris, which was but a spiritualizing of the yearly phenomena of nature in the Nile valley, lay at the foundation of the Egyptian doctrine of the future life. The departed soul is called the son of Osiris, sometimes Osiris himself, and repeats in his own course through Hades the various experiences of that divinity. He is furnished also with statuettes which represent the mummified form of Osiris, and coming forth to renewed activity. The sources of Herodotus, Ptolemy, Plutarch, Diodorus Siculus, Empedocles, and a fragmentary account of the Egyptian belief; but our principal source is the "Book of the Dead."

This Book, which Champollion had already designated the "Funereal Ritual," was published entire by Lepsius in 1842, from the text of a hieroglyphic papyrus at Turin, which dates from the twenty-sixth dynasty, or the seventh century before Christ. The most important chapters of the book are found in papyri of a much older date, and also upon tombs of the eighteenth dynasty and sarcophagi of the eleventh. Indeed, fragments of it can be traced back to the age of the third pyramid.

Fragmentary, repetitious, without logical order, it revolves about two central points—the judgment of the deceased after death, and his passage onward through various transformations, unto the highest felicity in the presence and likeness of "the Chief God."

Dr. Samuel Birch, of the British Museum, has published in volume fifth of Dunson's "Egypt's Place in Universal History" the first translation of the entire book. This translation is so extremely literal as sometimes to be unintelligible, while the prevailing mysticism of the book throws a degree of obscurity over its doctrines. Translations of the most important chapters have been made by Vicomte de Rougé, Pleyte, Chabas, Reinisch, Brugsch, and others. Rougé is now issuing a superb edition of the text, illustrated with vignettes, which sometimes furnish a most effective commentary; and Lepsius has just published the fragments of the Book of the Dead written upon the inner sides of the sarcophagi of the Old Empire in the Berlin Museum, under the title Aelteste Texte des Totenbuchs.

The Book teaches that the souls of all men, good and bad alike, continue to exist after death; that they all pass immediately into Hades, a doleful region, full of enemies and terrors, from whose ordeal the righteous cannot escape; here the wicked may be arrested and delivered to some devouring monster, or remanded to earth, for the discipline of animal transmigration, such being the Egyptian idea of metempsychosis. The righteous pass through a form of justification, and then, emerging at the gates of the West, follow the sun-bark in its bright career; they pass through various transformations, each advancing to a higher plane of existence, by the elimination of the mortal and the evil; then follows a solemn judgment-scene, in the Hall of Two Truths, where the heart of the deceased is weighed in the balance against the image of righteousness, and he is compelled to clear himself of each of the forty-two deadly sins, against as many accusers, who dispute his passage. Being acquitted, he enters the Elysian fields, and partakes of the food of the gods; after which he rises by a succession of grand halls and stair-ways to the Empyrean, the luminous presence-chamber of Osiris.

The consummation of blessedness, however, is not absorption into the divinity, for the soul retains throughout its consciousness and personal identity: and moreover, the soul visits the body, which has been so carefully preserved, and this is revived. The book clearly recognizes moral distinctions as the basis of divine judgment in the Hereafter, and the personal accountability of man to a supreme tribunal beyond the grave. There is not only a purgatory for the wicked, but a hell for the finally incorrigible.

Such, in general, is the theology of this remarkable book. The researches of scholars will eventually bring out its minuter shades of meaning, and perhaps reduce its doctrines to a well-ordered system.

4. A Plan for a Universal History, by Prof. Joseph W. Jenks, of Boston; presented by the Corresponding Secretary.

Prof. Jenks states that he has been long engaged upon a work which he proposes to call "History re-read, or an attempt at a simple and instructive philosophy of history," of which he presents the fundamental outline. He claims that man is of necessity the universal type; that humanity in the complex resembles, in nature, progress, and destiny, humanity in the individual; and that, accordingly, the periods of human history correspond with the successive stages in the life of the individual. He hopes to be able to present, in a year or two, a true historic view of the "childhood" of the race, extending from the end of the period of mythology and fable to the time of Abraham, or about 2000 B. C.

5. Critical Notice of Dr. Friedrich Böttcher's Hebrew Grammar, by Prof. George E. Day, D.D., of New Haven.

This grammar was issued last year from the press of J. A. Barth, in Leipzig. It is as yet unfinished, there being a second volume still to appear, which will be furnished with complete indexes to the whole work. The present volume is of six hundred and fifty-four royal octavo pages. Prof. Day recognized and commended the fidelity and care exhibited by the editor, Dr. Ferdinand Mühlen, a pupil of the deceased author, and characterized the work itself as deserving the attention of Hebrew scholars on account of its scientific treatment of Hebrew grammar, and the large number of methodized facts brought together in it. Dr. Böttcher has aimed to produce an exhaustive work, in which all the phenomena of the language should be subjected to the modern rational treatment. His divisions and subdivisions, although sometimes excessive and tedious, exhibit great thoroughness, and an evident mastery of the subject. After speaking favorably of the historical introduction, Prof. Day criticised the plan of the grammar. This volume is divided into two books, the former of which treats of the phonology, the other of the etymology of the language. The syntax is to follow in the second volume. In developing the sound-relations of the Hebrew, the author makes a constant distinction between what he calls "sonitals" and "spiritals," the latter class embracing the semivowels, as Vav and Yodh, and the gutturals, the former the vowels and most of the consonants. On the ground of this distinction, he treats all the inflected words, whether nouns, verbs, or even particles, as either sonantal, guttural, or semi-vocal. The treatment of the verb is quite general, while that of the substantive, which occupies two hundred and fifty pages, is unnecessarily long, in consequence of being burdened with an excessive citation of particulars. The paper dwelt upon a number of special points, in which the views of the author were either accepted or criticised, and closed with an appreciative estimate of the work, as in reality a thesaurus of materials for Hebrew grammar, and a valuable contribution to Semitic philology and to comparative philology in general.*

6. On the Translation of the Veda, by Prof. W. D. Whitney, of New Haven.

One of the leading philological problems of the present day, Prof. Whitney remarked, is to make a translation of the Veda, the Hindu Bible, both on account of its importance as exhibiting the ground-work of Hindu history, and because it is the most ancient existing Indo-European record, and the one that shows us the most primitive attainable phase of Indo-European life and institutions. By the Veda, we mean especially the Rig-Veda, the earliest and most extensive of the four hymn-collections which constitute the kernel of the sacred literature of India—together with such parts of the other collections as are akin with this in character. It has been handed down to us accompanied with a great body of accessory and explanatory works, of which the latest and fullest is the elaborate commentary of Śāyana, made in southern India, in the fourteenth century; in which is summed up the whole learning of the Hindu pandits, as gathered and transmitted by a long succession of generations. By the aid of this, especially, were made the first researches of European scholars into the Vedic language and antiquities. A question, now, has arisen as to the absolute value and authority of the commentary and its more ancient sources; the one side maintaining that it represents an immemorial tradition, and is to be, in the main, implicitly followed by us; the other, that it is the final product of a long-continued course of learned inquiry, and must be freely and searchingly criticized in every item, before acceptance. A number of important articles bearing on the controversy have been published within no long time, and of these Prof. Whitney's paper was mainly an abstract and review.

The first article is by Prof. Roth, of Tübingen, and is published in Vol. xxi. (for 1867) of the German Oriental Society's Journal. It sets forth the general principles bearing upon the point under discussion, the conditions under which a so-called "traditional" interpretation grows up, and the impossibility that it should ever have the authority claimed for it; and points out that the historical circumstances which should make the case otherwise in India are wholly wanting, and that an examination of the interpretation itself shows it to be of the ordinary character—namely, founded only on a grammatical and etymological basis.

Into such an examination of Śāyana's commentary and its chief predecessor, Yāska's Nirukta, the next article reviewed enters in detail. It is by Dr. Muir of Edinburgh, Vol. ii., Part 2 (1867), of the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society. In a peachable fairness, with great industry and learning, with a logical method, it goes over the whole ground, with great fulness of illustration; reaching the conclusion that "there is no unusual or difficult word or obscure text in the hymns in regard to which the authority of the Indian scholiast should be received as final, [for his interpretation accepted] unless it be supported by probability, by the context, or by parallel passages;" and that hence, "no translation of the Rig-Veda which is based exclusively on Śāyana's commentary can possibly be satisfactory."

* At the moment that this abstract of Prof. Day's notice is passing through the press, the first half of the second volume has come to hand. Its first ninety-five pages are occupied with the pronouns and pronominal suffixes, the remaining two hundred and twenty-four pages with the verb. The conclusion of the work is expected to be ready early in 1868.

Of the principles of Vedic interpretation thus established in the abstract by Prof. Roth, and in the concrete by Dr. Muir, a striking exemplification is furnished by Prof. Max Müller, in his article on the "Hymns of the Ganpāyanas and the Legend of King Asamāti" (published in the same volume with the one last spoken of). He selects a set of four hymns from the concluding book of the Rig-Veda, to which the tradition has attached an explanatory legend: he shows how this legend has grown up by degrees, by misapprehension and distortion of epithets and phrases of the hymns themselves, and that neither it nor the version made in conformity with it (and which he gives in full) really belongs to them; ending by giving a true version, founded upon independent study, and a determination of the relations of the parts of the text to one another.

In these three papers, we have the case of the anti-comment party presented from every point of view and with all desirable fullness.

The first European scholar of note to set forth and defend the contrary view was Prof. H. H. Wilson. He, however, had long passed the acme of his scholarly activity when the Veda began to attract attention in Europe, and, though his influence and patronage were freely given to the new study, and were of great importance to its progress, he was never in sympathy with its votaries, nor ever won a right to be called a Vedic scholar. The arguments by which he defends the commentaries show the prejudice naturally engendered by an Indian education, and sometimes involve gross transfers to the old Vedic time of the conditions of modern Hindu literature.

Since Wilson's death, his mantle has fallen upon Prof. Goldstücker of London, author of the fourth and last paper reviewed. This is entitled "On the Veda of the Hindus and the Veda of the German School," and was read before the Royal Asiatic Society early this year, but is not yet published otherwise than in a full and careful abstract (evidently made by the author himself) in the London "Examiner" for February 2, 1867. The title of the paper is in two respects open to criticism. In the first place, it seems to involve a petitio principii—the "Veda of the Hindus" being the object of all parties, and the point in dispute being whether this is to be arrived at by the methods of the modern Hindu schools, or of the modern European. In the second place, the name "German school," upon which the author dwells, and which he claims to borrow from Dr. Muir, is not found in the latter's paper, and is to be avoided, as seeming to appeal to whatever of prejudice may exist in English minds against foreign scholars and methods. At the same time, Dr. Goldstücker endeavors to disprove the existence of any such school, alleging that those who are claimed to belong to it are discordant in their methods and results. He overlooks, however, the fact that it is only with reference to one common doctrine—the non-acceptance as paramount authority of the commentator's interpretation—that they are ranked together as a school at all; and that they all in the fullest manner acknowledge the true interpretation to be attainable only as the final result of more or less discordant individual effort. Indeed, it may with much more truth be claimed that there is but one school of Vedic study in Europe, with Prof. Goldstücker as its opponent; since it is not known that any other Vedic scholar of eminence shares his views. And whether even he is its opponent on principle has been made doubtful by Dr. Muir, who shows that in his Dictionary he not infrequently criticises unfavorably and rejects Sāyana's version. It becomes, then, merely a question of personal capacity between the one side and the other; whether the right to deviate from the native authorities is to be confined to any person or persons, or restricted within the limits which these shall prescribe. Of course, each scholar must exercise his independence under responsibility, and he who, on a foundation of insufficient learning and judgment, attempts to translate the Veda, will render himself liable to be contemned and laughed at; there is doubtless temptation to over-confidence on the one side, as to a comfortable and labor-saving submissiveness on the other; yet all hope of progress is bound up with the former method. Prof. Goldstücker, in justification of the alternative versions so often given by the commentary, proposes to recognize them as originating in and held by different native schools: but, in so doing, he distinctly assents to the fundamental doctrine of his opponents—that these versions are the products of learned study, not of authoritative tradition. He declares that the determination of the grammatical cognateness of Vedic passages (upon which he assumes the independent interpretations of the other party to be founded) is a peculiarly difficult problem, which has not yet been broached, much less settled. This claim requires farther explanation to make it intelligible: but, meantime, we are justified in going on to interpret simply by aid of the comparison of parallel passages—about which, certainly, there is no question, and it is the method successfully employed in every other language and literature besides the Vedic; not only as between authors of the same age, but through all the periods of every literature.

The principles of the "German school" are the only ones which can ever guide us to a true understanding of the Veda. We have within our reach precisely the same means of research which the Hindu schools had—namely, a knowledge of the classical Sanskrit and of modern Hindu institutions, and if our command of such knowledge is in some respects inferior to theirs, the deficiency is much more than made up by the superiority of our method of research, and by our possession of a critical and historical spirit which was denied to them.

7. On Recent Geographical Explorations in the Hindu-Kuh Range, and its Vicinity, by Prof. D. C. Gilman, of New Haven.

Prof. Gilman gave an abstract of the results of several works which have appeared within no long time past, treating of this interesting region, especially of the alleged wanderings and observations of an anonymous writer, brought to light by the Russian traveller, M. Veniukof, and recently printed in the London Geographical Society's Journal—the authorship of the original document having been called in serious question by French geographers. He exhibited maps of the region, and pointed out how it was being approached from more than one side by geographical exploration and discovery.

Rev. Cyrus Byington, for nearly fifty years a missionary among the Choctaw Indians, being present, gave, by request, some account of the progress of civilization and religion in that community during his presence with them, and described, partly in answer to questions, some of the striking peculiarities of their language.

Proceedings at Boston, May 20th, 1868.

The Annual meeting of the American Oriental Society was held in Boston, on Wednesday, May 20th, at the usual hour and place. The President being absent, the chair was taken by Rev. Dr. R. Anderson, Vice-President. The day was very stormy, and the attendance of members unusually small.

The minutes of the preceding meeting (at New Haven, Oct. 1867) were read by the Recording Secretary and approved. Reports from the retiring officers were then called for.

The Treasurer's report was presented, in his absence, by the Recording Secretary. It showed the income and expenses of the year to have been as follows:

The accounts, having been audited by a committee of two, appointed for that purpose, were accepted.

The Librarian presented a list of donors during the year to the Society's collections, and gave oral explanations of the character and value of the donations made. To the catalogue of the Library have been added 41 new titles, besides one manuscript title.

In behalf of the Committee of Publication, a report was made by the Corresponding Secretary. There has been no issue of the Journal during the past year, owing mainly to the lack of suitable material. Preparation of the edition of the Tāittiriya-Prāṭicākhyā and its commentary, the Tribhāshyaratna, which work has been intended and expected to occupy a part of the next volume, has been delayed by unforeseen and unavoidable circumstances. The delay, however, was to turn out greatly for the advantage of the work, since new and very important manuscript material has been recently secured. Besides a collation of the (imperfect) Oxford MS., obtained through the kind offices of Prof. Müller, a copy and collation of two other manuscripts, recently discovered in the library of the Royal Asiatic Society in London; has been secured. Information of these was sent to Prof. Whitney by Dr. R. Rost, Secretary of the Roy. As. Soc., last autumn; and the copy and collation has been made, with his kind coöperation and aid, by Dr. Julius Eggeling, a German scholar now residing in England, to whose generous and friendly devotion the work will be greatly indebted for its completeness. The manuscripts referred to have been for many years in the possession of the London Society, but, being written in the southern Indian characters (one in Malayalam, the other, on strips of palm leaf, in Grantha), they have until now escaped identification and notice. Their assistance will render it possible to furnish a satisfactory text of the commentary, which it is accordingly proposed to add in full to the treatise and notes. There is no reason to believe that a half-volume will not be ready for delivery to the members by the next annual meeting, and the other half-volume in the course of 1869.

The Board of Directors announced that the autumn meeting would be held in New Haven, October 14th, and that Mr. Cothcal of New York, with the Recording and Corresponding Secretaries, would act as a Committee of Arrangements for it.

They also gave notice that they had appointed Prof. Salisbury and Rev. Dr. Clark to aid the Corresponding Secretary in endeavoring to secure a more extended and active participation of American Missionaries in the work of the Society; and had committed the lists of members for revisal to Professors Salisbury, Hadley, and Whitney, with directions to report at the next annual meeting.

Two gentlemen, recommended by the Board for election to membership, were balloted upon, and duly elected, namely:

Prof. John B. Feuling, Madison, Wisc.

as Corresponding Member,

Rev. Charles H. H. Wright, of Dresden.

The Corresponding Secretary called the attention of the meeting to the unusual loss it had suffered during the past year in the death of four of its Honorary Members—namely, Prof. F. Bopp of Berlin, the Due de Luynes and M. Reinaud of Paris, and Raja Rādhakānta Deva of Calcutta. He gave a brief statement of the claims of each of these gentlemen to the respectful and grateful remembrance of Orientalists, entering into more detail respecting the brilliant achievements of Bopp in the department of comparative philology.

Notice was also taken of the death of Prof. C. C. Jewett of Boston, a Corporate Member, Prof. Peabody of Cambridge giving some account of his life and literary labors.

Messrs. Ropes of Boston, Sanborn of Springfield, and Brigham of Taunton, were appointed a Nominating Committee to propose a board of officers for the next year. They presented the following ticket (the same with last year's), which was elected without dissent:

President	—Pres. T. D. WOOLSEY, D.D., LL.D.,	of New Haven.
Vice-Presidents	{ Rev. RUFUS ANDERSON, D.D.,	" Boston.
Secr. of Classical Section	—Prof. JAMES HADLEY,	" New Haven.
Recording Secretary	—Mr. EZRA ABBOT,	" Cambridge.
Treasurer	—Prof. D. C. GILMAN,	" New Haven.
Directors	{ Mr. A. I. COTHEAL,	" New York.

A few extracts were read from letters received since the last meeting. Among them was the following, from Mr. John P. Brown of Constantinople, dated Jan. 24, 1868:

"I see in Trübner's catalogue that my little work on 'The Dervishes' is out and for sale, although I have not yet received a copy of it. I have just had printed, also, in London, a small work, called 'Ancient and Modern Constantinople,' which will soon be for sale. I shall try and send you a copy of each. During the spring and summer months I have been absent, and have done but little in the literary line. I am collecting materials for a 'Life and Times of A'li, the 4th Caliph,' which I hope sometime to publish. This will have a religious rather than a historical character—or rather, will partake of both.

"Dr. Paspati is employed on a large work on 'the Gypsies and their Language, with their Tales and Ballads.' This will interest you, as the roots of their language are Sanskritic. The secret religion of the Gypsies would be of much interest, and may be found in their tales and ballads; but, as yet, no one has taken it up. Dr. Mordtmann of this city has promised to do so, but has not as yet accomplished anything, so far as I am aware."

Only one communication was presented at this meeting, namely On Bell's "Visible Speech," by Prof. W. D. Whitney, of New Haven.

The work in which this new system of phonetic writing is laid before the public is entitled "Visible Speech: the Science of Universal Alphabetics; or, Self-interpreting Physiological Letters, for the writing of all Languages in one Alphabet. Illustrated by the Phonetic Alphabet of the Visible Speech System. By Alex. Melville Bell, etc. etc. (New York: H. Holt & Co., 126.) It begins with an account of the circumstances attending the origination and development of the system, of the attempt made by its author to get it taken up and propagated through the community by the British Government, and the failure of this attempt, of the tests through which it had triumphantly passed, and of the testimony given in its favor by practiced phonetists like Mr. A. J. Ellis. The system is one which cuts loose from all alphabets in present use, and sets up a new scheme of signs, of which every element is intended to be directly symbolic of a physical act, so that each letter represents the whole method of production of the sound it stands for, and is, after the symbolism is learned, self-interpreting. Not only articulate sounds, but almost all audible utterances of which human organs are capable, are claimed to be representable by it: it aims at, and fairly accomplishes, more than any other system ever invented. Prof. Whitney gave an account of the contents of the work, and an analysis and criticism of its signs for sounds. He showed that, while these are exceedingly ingenious, and in the main sufficiently exact, they nevertheless are far from being entitled to all the credit claimed for them. Even in the consonantal part of the alphabet, Mr. Bell's analysis of not a few sounds is faulty, and his designation false; for example, in s, z, th, he either introduces symbols of unreal acts, or omits to symbolize other real acts of articulation, or both. With his treatment of the far more difficult matter of vowel utterance much more fault was found: his whole scheme of classification and description of the vowels was rejected, as being a step backward rather than forward, when compared with the labors of his predecessors. On the whole, it was asserted that Mr. Bell has not in a single point sensibly advanced the science of alphabets, although he has shown superior skill in the art of alphabetization. He is disposed also to overrate the value and usefulness of his invention, imagining that it is going to do away with the difficulties of learning to read, of learning to pronounce a foreign language, of analysing and representing the sounds of unwritten tongues, and the like. Whereas, a scheme of alphabetic symbols is not a scheme of logical symbols, and is not more in any branch of science; it is not a science, but a mere art, and a very inferior one, as a bad one. Its nature is of secondary consequence, and to acquire it is not to master the science. It is to phonetists that Mr. Bell's system must be chiefly valuable, and there seems no good reason why the task of spreading the knowledge and use of it should have been assumed by Government.

The construction of the volume presenting the system was criticized as being far too obscure and difficult. By first giving the physical descriptions of sounds complete, and putting off all illustration to another part of the work, the author has doubtless repelled many who might otherwise have learned to understand and favor the new alphabet.

After some discussion of the subject of this communication, the Society adjourned.

Proceedings at New Haven, October 14th and 15th, 1868.

The Society met, as adjourned, at New Haven, in the Library-room of the Sheffield Scientific School, the President in the chair.

The minutes of the last meeting having been read, the Committee of Arrangements presented their plan for the conduct of the present session, which was, on motion, adopted. The Society would adjourn at about 6 o'clock, in order to accept an invitation from the President, Dr. Woolsey, to take tea at his house. After tea, it would receive a communication from Dr. Martin, and would assemble again at 9 o'clock on Thursday morning, to hear further communications.

The Directors gave notice that the next Annual meeting would be holden in Boston, on Wednesday, May 19th, 1869, and that they had appointed for it the same Committee of Arrangements as last year—namely, Mr. Joseph S. Ropes of Boston, and the Recording and Corresponding Secretaries.

They also recommended the election, as Corporate Members, of the following gentlemen :

Mr. John W. Barrow, of New York.
Prof. Albert S. Bickmore, of Hamilton, N. Y.
Rev. Edward L. Clark, of New Haven.
Mr. Albert F. Heard, of Boston.
Rev. William W. Hicks, of Williamsburg, N. Y.
Rev. William Patton, D.D., of New Haven.
Hon. Elisha R. Potter, of South Kingston, R. I.

Ballot being had, these gentlemen were declared duly elected.

Prof. Whitney, for the Committee of Publication, stated that still another manuscript of the Tāittiriya Prāṭicākhya and its commentary had been furnished for the benefit of the publication to be made of those works in the Journal. It was a copy, made by Dr. S. Goldschmidt, of a manuscript recently sent to Prof. Weber, at Berlin, by Prof. Bühler of Bombay. The Directors had suitably acknowledged the kindness of Dr. Goldschmidt in making the transcription. The work, it was further mentioned, was already in part prepared for the press, and its printing would be soon commenced.

The correspondence of the past six months was presented, and extracts from it were read, by the Corresponding Secretary.

Babu Rāmachandra Ghosha, under date of Calcutta, Jan. 4, 1868, writes ;

“The cultivation of Sanskrit in Europe and America excites a general interest ; it has formed a new era in philology, it has opened the dark vistas of antiquity, and contributed to the establishment of great ethnographical facts. It is highly delightful to see a taste for the study of Sanskrit reviving in Bengal. Seven hundred and ninety-five years ago, the Brahmins of Bengal were so ignorant in the higher branches of the Hindu Śāstras, that King Adisnr had to request the Raja of Kanuj to send down five Brahmins well known for their erudition. Schools of an elementary character may have existed at this time; but no institutions of a higher order were then to be found in Bengal. Now, many schools are found in Hilsilah, Bhātpārā, and Nuddea, where the higher branches of the Hindu Śāstras are carefully studied. Celebrated schools, especially of the Nyāya philosophy, however, had been established long before in Mithila. This prevalence of the Nyāya Philosophy in Mithila can be accounted for by the fact that Gotama established a school at a place not far distant from that renowned city, and the study was kept up by his pupils for a considerable time. The first regular school of philosophy established in Bengal was that of Bashudeva Sarvobhauma. Of the numerous students of that Pandit, the names of three have become known throughout the land. This constellation of bright names is composed of Raghunānanda, Chaitanya, and Raghunātha-Siromani. The first compiled the Smṛiti, whose dictum is now law; the second was the famous Vaishnava reformer; and the third, the genius whose philosophical acumen Bengal, nay India, may well be proud of. Raghunātha wrote a work exposing the fallacies of the several expositions of the Chintāmani, a book written by Gangeshopādhyāya, who had graduated at Mithila. This treatise is a full development of the abstruser parts of the science, as laid down in miniature by Gotama. Nuddea is still regarded as the focus of philosophical learning. A number of geniuses appeared one after another, and the profound works of these mighty minds have shed a glory on India itself. The number of the Pandits in Calcutta who have written treatises on different branches of learning in Sanskrit is very small. Here we have a very small number of men who take any interest at all in the labors of an antiquarian. Babu Rājendralāla has already written several papers on different subjects appertaining to the primeval history of India, but has only reproduced the facts which have long since been brought to light by Lassen and others, in a different garb. Babu Rājendralāla is now engaged in compiling a Prākṛita Dictionary. Prof. Bühler of Puna College has finished his very learned essay on the Asvins, and is now busy with an edition of Gobhila's Grihya Sūtra, with Nārāyaṇa's commentary.

"Having lately had occasion to refer to the Ganes'a Purāna, I found that the author of this has artfully blended Buddhism with the other subjects of his work. The Ganes'a Purāna comprises two Kāndas. Both the Kāndas sanction the worship of Ganes'a. An account of Gritsamada forms a part of this Purāna. Gritsamada was the grandson of Rāja Bhīma of Vidarbha.

"My work on the Vedas is now in the press. When it is published, I shall be very happy to send you a copy of it. My essay on the Aryans is out of print. . . ."

Rev. A. P. Happer, D.D., Pittsburgh, Pa., June 17, 1868 :

"I have been quite interested in looking at the Proceedings of the two meetings as published, which you have kindly sent me with your circular. I have been especially interested in reading the summary of the contents of the paper read by Pres. Woolsey, of Yale College, on the word for 'God,' in Chinese. That is a subject which has engaged great attention in China. The discussion has all been conducted during the twenty-four years of my residence in China and connection with Chinese missions. The question is not, what word or compound term would best represent the idea? That question could be easily settled. But the question is, what word or translation of the Sacred Scriptures, and it is very difficult to decide. What Chinese word is the best to translate Elohim of the Hebrew and Theos of the Greek Testament? When answering the question, no philologist can say that Tien-chu, which is not a simple word, but a compound term, made by the Jesuit missionaries, and which means 'Heaven's Lord,' can in any way be regarded as a translation of Elohim, or Theos, or God.

"As a title of the true God, it may and it is very properly used; but it is so used very sparingly by Protestants, for this reason. By general usage of the Chinese, Roman Catholics are designated 'The religion of the Lord of Heaven,' i.e. Tien-chu kuo; while, by a more general usage of the Chinese themselves, Protestantism is called 'The religion of Jesus,' Ye-su kiao. This usage originated from the Romanists' using that term to designate the true God; while, of course, Protestants in their preaching have principally spoken of Jesus as the Savior of sinners. Protestants here used Ye-wo-wah to represent the proper name "Jehovah" of the true God; as they use Ye-su to represent the name of Jesus. It appears very undesirable that Protestants should be confounded by the Chinese with Romanists. This would be the case if they used Tien-chu. This, however, is a subordinate reason. The chief reason is that that compound term is not a translation for the words in the original languages. Neither is the term Shang-ti a translation of the words in the original; this is also a compound term, originally meaning "Ruler above," or "Supreme Ruler" among gods, as Hwang-ti is the highest ruler among men, and is the name of the Emperor in China. Shang-ti is now also used as the title of an idol—the proper and distinctive name of an idol, as much as Jupiter was.

"While shin may be admitted to be 'vague and general,' yet were not Elohim and Theos vague and general words? Are they not applied in the Scriptures to false gods, to many gods, to male and female gods, to gods of the hills and of the valleys, gods of great dignity and of small dignity, to gods of many divine qualities and gods who had qualities which are not divine—in a word, to all that class of beings which by polytheists were worshipped? And yet, by usage, they are very properly applied, without any derogation to his character or dignity, to designate the only living and true God, "whose name is above every name." The use of these words, thus applied to the true and the false, to the one only God and to the multitude that are false gods, does not produce any confusion, either in Hebrew, Greek, or English.

"Now shin is such a "general and vague" word. It is applied by the Chinese to all the objects of their idolatrous worship, which are represented by idols of wood and stone and paper, and for the worship of which they erect temples, and to worship which they have shrines in every family residence, store, and workshop. There are shin of the hills and valleys, a shin of fecundity, a shin, a goddess, "the hearer of prayer and the most compassionate one who saves from suffering and misery," shin in Heaven, shin on the Earth. The Chinese go to their temples to worship shin. They pray to shin to restore their health. They return thanks to shin for prosperity. There is a shin called the shin of wealth. Now what word in English would translate shin in all these cases? Why, manifestly, 'god, gods, goddess'—and if that is the word that represents all the various objects of false or idolatrous worship, what should be done when we wish to teach that idolatrous people to worship the true God, hut to tell them there is a true shin, whose name is Jehovah, and who is "the Maker of the Heavens and the Earth." Is there any vagueness in such a statement? Does it not avail of all the knowledge which they have of God in general from the light of nature and tradition, and tell them that the Bible teaches there is only one object of proper divine worship?—that Jehovah is therefore the only and the true shin, while all those shin which they have hitherto worshipped are false shin, and they must cease to worship them? Will any other word so definitely state to them the only true object of worship, and so distinctly cut them off from all worship of false gods? Can any person preach to a polytheistic people, without having a word which, like Elohim and Theos and "god," will admit of being applied to one only and to many, to the true and the false, to male and female, etc., etc.? I think not. Can Tien-chu be so used? No, there is only one "Heaven's Lord." It is a title, and cannot be used to translate Elohim or Theos. Try it in the passage "The great goddess Diana" (Acts xix. 35). It would read, "Great Heaven's Lord Diana," which is an absurdity; but "great shin Diana" is as idiomatic in Chinese as "great goddess Diana" is in English. When the teaching of the Bible has driven away idolatry, the now "vague" word shin will be as definite, meaning the one true God, as "God" is in English, or Theos is in Greek.

"The arguments that shin is the true, the proper, and the only word to use in translating Elohim and Theos, are, in my opinion, unanswerable. At the same time, I think that such titles as Tien-chu, Shang-ti, Maker of Heaven, etc., etc., may be properly and wisely applied to Jehovah, to assist in conveying to the Chinese mind the character and power of Jehovah, the one true shin.

"Excuse me for writing so much; I had no such purpose when I commenced."

Then the subject of this letter, Dr. Martin, of Peking, at the invitation of the Protestant missionaries, writes as follows:

"The error is not that Tien-chu was coined by Europeans, and therefore is no Chinese word, but that it is an error. That term is found in the works of Sze Ma-tzu, a Chinese philosopher of the Han dynasty, B. C. 122. It is there applied to one of eight divinities, who is called Tien-chu, the Lord of Heaven, in distinction from Ti-chu, the Lord of Earth, Hai-chu, the Lord of the Sea, etc. The composition of the term is therefore not original with the Roman Catholic missionaries. Nor was its application to the supreme and only God altogether so.

"On a mountain in the vicinity of Peking, a stone gateway, bearing the inscription Tien-chu-kung, 'Palace of the Lord of Heaven,' marks the site of a ruined temple. This might have been taken for the ruins of a Christian church, but for a more extended inscription on an adjacent pillar, which describes the temple as erected in honor of Shang-ti, the Jupiter of the Chinese Pantheon, who is there represented as the God of Nature. The term, in its later as well as its earlier sense, had become obsolete, and to the Roman Catholic missionaries belongs the credit of reviving it in its later and purer signification.

"In the recent movement towards the adoption of Tien-chu, those Protestant missionaries who favored it were influenced by four considerations: 1st, a desire to escape the difficulties besetting the use of the rival terms Shin and Shang-ti; 2d, to find a common ground on which all Christians, Catholic and Protestant, might unite; 3d, to profit by the experience of their Roman Catholic predecessors; 4th, to avail themselves of the advantage derived from the currency which has been given to Tien-chu by the Roman Catholics, and to Chu by the Mohammedans.

"Dr. Happer was wrong in supposing that Tien-chu was to be taken promiscuously for God, god, and gods. It was only used in a special signification, shin being retained for idol gods, and divinity in general. Nor does this use of shin preclude its use in the formula Sheng-shin, for 'Holy Ghost;' shin in the one case not departing more widely from its popular sense, than ghost does in the other."

Dr. John Muir, Edinburgh, July 17, 1868:

"... In preparing the new edition of the third volume of my 'Sanskrit Texts,' I have had my attention drawn again to the Vedānta Sūtras, and to 'Sankara's account of the use made by the rival schools of Indian philosophy of the Vedic texts to support their own views—interpreting them as variously as Christian divines do the Bible. I have had the desire, experienced before, renewed in me of seeing a complete English version of 'Sankara produced; as I think that these Indian speculations, even if they should be found to contribute little or nothing to the true theory of Being and the relation of the Finite and the Infinite (which I should be slow to affirm), are at least deserving of notice, more notice than they have yet received, in the history of human thought. I have recently written to K. M. Banerjee, to see if he can be induced to translate 'Sankara. I also wrote not long ago to my brother (the author of the life of Mahomet), who has lately been appointed Lieutenant-governor of the North-West Provinces of India, and has the Benares College under his control, to ask if he could get any one to complete the late Dr. Ballantyne's translations of the Sūtras, of which only the Sāṅkhya and most of the Nyāya were finished."

Rev. William Tracy, Norwich, Conn., Sept. 3, 1868:

"Just before leaving India last year, I procured a number of small copper coins, most of them apparently of considerable antiquity. There were also among them two small ancient gold coins, and a few silver ones, the latter mostly recent.

"These coins, of which I send you specimens, are dug up from the ruins of ancient towns and villages in the South of India, and their devices indicate the different dynasties under which they were coined; and in some cases, also, the religion dominant at the time. Some appear to be Buddhistic, some Brahmanic, of the Vaishnava sect, and others of the Saiva sect. A few are Mohammedan. I regret that I am unable to give a more definite description of these coins, but since obtaining them I have had neither time nor facilities for making a satisfactory examination of them. If you think they are of enough interest to warrant their being placed in the Cabinet of the Society, please make such a disposal of them.

"I take the liberty, also, of sending a few specimens of pottery, from what I suppose to be ancient Buddhistic sepulchres, such as are found in various parts of India. Some of the best specimens I had procured were entirely destroyed by the carelessness of the native coolies in India. Those which I send have been restored as far as possible; in one instance only a few fragments remain to show the original form of the vessel.

"The only metallic remains found in these sepulchres in Southern India, so far as I know, are in the form of daggers, or sacrificial knives. The oxidized fragments of an instrument of this kind, apparently a dagger, accompany the vessels sent. Similar remains are found in all parts of Southern India, and closely resemble those found in the Buddhist Topes of the Punjab.

"These ancient burial places, as found in Southern India, are of two kinds. The first is simply a large funereal urn, of coarse pottery, from three to four feet in height, pointed at the bottom, and covered with a closely fitting top, within which are deposited various earthen utensils, such as those I send you. These contain small fragments of bones and ashes; and, in one instance, I have found in them the husks of rice, in a good state of preservation. A large slab of stone, five or six feet square, is sometimes placed above the urn, one or two feet below the ground, and the place of burial is indicated by a large circle of stones on the surface. The places of burial were usually selected in a hard and dry gravelly soil.

"The second class of these ancient sepulchres is less common than the first. They are formed of slabs of stone, enclosing a small chamber, and covered by another slab, generally on a level with the surface of the ground. Quite a large collection of these is found about twenty-five miles from Madura, and a few rods to the east of the Trichinopoly road. Some of these are covered with heaps of stones, but most are surrounded with a circle of stones similar to those mentioned above. Some, I found on visiting them, had been opened, probably by some one in search of treasure. One or two, of better workmanship than the rest, were encircled by a carefully built and well preserved platform of stone. The sides were formed of slabs from six to eight feet square, and three or four inches thick; and a similar slab divided the room into two equal compartments. Three or four feet from the top, a shelf of stone, twenty inches wide and three inches thick, ran across the whole length of the tomb. Near the bottom of each compartment a hole, fifteen to eighteen inches in diameter, was cut through the stone, forming a passage into the tomb, which was closed by a flat stone placed over the hole outside. Through this passage, probably, the remains of the deceased were carried to their final resting place.

"One or two of the tombs were almost entirely above ground, and, having one of the sides partially broken out, were used as an occasional place of rest and shelter by the shepherds of the neighborhood.

"From the form of these tombs, I should judge that the bodies were deposited in them without having been burned. No signs of funereal utensils were seen, and my limited time would not allow me to make any fresh excavations.

"Tombs of this description are found in several places in the Madura district—in the mountains as well as in the plains, and also in the districts north of Madras. The present inhabitants have no knowledge of the people who constructed them. One tradition regards them as a race of men who never died, and who were placed in these tombs with a little rice and water in cups for their sustenance. Another tradition is, that in ancient times there lived here a race who were the enemies of the gods, and whose great wickedness led the latter to determine upon their destruction. They first attempted to accomplish this by a shower of fire, but the people constructed these stone dwellings, and thus protected themselves from the fiery storm. Afterwards, the gods poured out a flood of mud and water, which filled their dwellings and destroyed the wicked race.

"This tradition possibly refers to the destruction of the Buddhists, who were always regarded as the enemies of the Brahmanical deities, and who, if other local traditions are true, were persecuted, and finally exterminated, by the Brahmins and their adherents, a few scattered remnants alone having continued in existence till the eleventh or twelfth century.

"Regretting that the remains I send are so scanty, and my information respecting them so meager, I remain, etc."

Annexed to Mr. Tracy's letter is a list of the coins sent, numbering about one hundred and fifty, among them a dozen silver coins and two gold ones. The coins and the remains from the tombs were laid upon the table, for the inspection of the members present.

Mr. Hyde Clarke, London, Sept. 13, 1868:

After giving a statement of the various ethnographical inquiries which he is engaged in pursuing, Mr. Clarke concludes:

"Next season I lay the foundations of a new subject by a course of lectures at the London institutions on Comparative History, or the phenomena common to the history of many nations."

After the reading of the correspondence, communications were called for:

1. On the Study of Alchemy in China, by Rev. William A. P. Martin, D.D., of Peking.

After tracing briefly the connection between alchemy and chemistry, the paper proceeded to its main object, viz: to demonstrate that the origin of European alchemy was to be sought in China.

In support of this view the following considerations were adduced, and illustrated by citations from Chinese and other works.

1. The study of alchemy had been in full vigor in China for at least six centuries, before it made its appearance in Europe. It did not appear in Europe until the fourth century, when intercourse with the far East had become somewhat frequent. It appeared first at Byzantium and Alexandria, where the commerce of the East chiefly centered, and was subsequently revived in Europe by the Saracens, whose most famous school of alchemy was at Bagdad, where intercourse with Eastern Asia was frequent.

2. The objects of pursuit in both schools were identical, and in either case twofold—immortality and gold. In Europe the former was the less prominent, because the people, being in possession of Christianity, had a vivid faith in a future life, to satisfy their longings on that head.

3. In either school there were two elixirs, the greater and the less, and the properties ascribed to them closely correspond.

4. The principles underlying both systems are identical—the composite nature of the metals, and their vegetation from a seminal germ. Indeed, the characters tsing for the germ, and fai for the matrix, which constantly occur in the writings of Chinese alchemists, might be taken for the translation of terms in the vocabulary of the Western school, if their higher antiquity did not forbid the hypothesis.

5. The ends in view being the same, the means by which they were pursued were nearly identical—mercury and lead being as conspicuous in the laboratories of the East, as mercury and sulphur were in those of the West. It is of less significance to add that many other substances were common to both schools, than to note the remarkable coincidence that, in Chinese as in European alchemy, the names of the two principal reagents are used in a mystical sense.

6. Both schools, or at least individuals in both schools, held the doctrine of a cycle of changes, in the course of which the precious metals revert to their baser elements.

7. Both are closely interwoven with astrology.

8. Both led to the practice of magical arts, and unbounded charlatanism.

9. Both deal in language of equal extravagance; and the style of European alchemists, so unlike the sobriety of thought characteristic of the Western mind, would, if considered alone, give us no very uncertain indication of its origin in the fervid fancy of the Orient.

2. Greek Inscriptions from the Vicinity of Amasia, in the Ancient Pontus, by Rev. Julius Y. Leonard, a Missionary of the American Board.

Mr. Leonard gave a brief description of Amasia in northern Asia Minor, where he has resided for several years as a missionary. It was the birth-place of the geographer Strabo, and at an earlier period had been the royal residence of the princes of Pontus. He spoke of the remains of ancient constructions, found in and about it. Greek inscriptions were occasionally met with; several of them were given by Hamilton in his "Researches in Asia Minor." Mr. Leonard himself had copied seven or eight others, which he presented to the Society. Three were from a place called Vezir-Keopren, in the pashalic of Amasia: one was from Ak-Tepe, and two from Avdan-Keov villages (each of them) about three miles distant from Vezir-Keopren. He entered into some details as to the places where the inscriptions were found, the size and shape of the stones, the size of the letters, etc.

Professor Hadley, after stating that he had had only a few minutes to look at the inscriptions proceeded to make some remarks on their appearance. They seemed to be wholly of a sepulchral character. They were all more or less imperfect, having suffered losses, either by the breaking of the stone, or by defacement of its surface making many letters illegible. One or two inscriptions could hardly be made to yield any continuous sense. The most legible was that inscribed on the face of the rock at the entrance of a tomb in Amasia. It was also the most interesting in its contents, being in verse, and consisting of four elegiac distichs, which, however, were obviously rude and faulty in their metrical structure.

Some further account of these inscriptions will probably be given in the Journal of the Society.

3. On Onomatopœia in the Algonkin Languages, by Mr. J. Hammond Trumbull, of Hartford, Conn.

In Dr. Wilson's "Prehistoric Man" (2d edition, p. 56) is given a list of twenty-six names of animals which he regards as of onomatopœic origin, and as illustrating the fact that "primitives originating directly from the observation of natural sounds are not uncommon among the native root-words of the New World." This list has been used by Mr. Farrar (Chapters on Language, pp. 24-5) in support of his averment that, in savage vocabularies, "almost every name for an animal is a striking and obvious onomatopœia." Hence the inquiry raised in this paper as to the actual derivation of the names in question.

Mr. Trumbull premised by saying that, considering our imperfect comprehension of the Algonkin dialects, we could not be expected to refute every assumed and doubtful onomatopœia by a true etymology. Of a part of the words in the list, it can only be said that their origin is not prima facie mimetic. Respecting others, the fact can be proved. Thus koo-koosh, 'sow,' is demonstrably derived, by an adaptation of the name for 'porcupine,' from a root signifying 'sharp,' and it designates 'a bad bristly or prickly animal.' As to pe-zheo, 'wild cat,' forms of which are widely distributed, and used to denote various of the feline animals, there is a bare possibility that it may be imitative, but no more. These are the only names of quadrupeds in the list. Of the nineteen names of birds, four or five are presumably mimetic (including those of the owl and crow), six or seven possibly so, and the rest obviously derivative and significant. Shi-sheeb, 'duck,' like duck itself, comes from a root signifying 'dive.' Pau-pau-say, 'the common spotted woodpecker,' means 'a spotted bird.' Moosh-kah-oos, 'bittern,' denotes a frequenter of marshes. No-no-no-caus-ee, 'humming-bird'—a strange enough onomatopœia!—means 'the exceedingly delicate creature.' Of the asserted mi-met names for 'frog,' one signifies 'diver,' and the other, as it belongs also to the toad, is not likely to be truly imitative. And so on. If only one fourth of a list carefully gleaned from three dialects can be fairly set down as onomatopoeic, how much less is likely to be the proportion of such names to the whole vocabulary of any one tribe?

Mr. Trumbull affirmed that most Algonkin names of animals are descriptive derivatives, and that the few apparent exceptions belong to species which are more often heard than seen, while it is doubtful if any name of a quadruped is purely imitative. To illustrate this, he gave a brief list of names, with their derivations. He further drew attention to certain curious features of Indian nomenclature, especially to the combination of a generic characteristic with specific names; as, for example, certain swimming animals have a common suffix of derivation coming from a root that means 'put the head above water;' others, one that means 'bite;' others, 'scratch' or 'tear;' of plants, some are thus marked as to be eaten green, as nut-bearing, as having eatable roots, and so on. Such a suffix, in the Chippeway and allied tongues, is gun, the formative of the instrumentive participial; the occurrence of which at the end of the name for 'shooting-instrument' has misled Mr. Farrar into affirming (p. 34) that "in some cases the onomatopoeic instinct is so strong that it asserts itself side by side with the adoption of a name" from a foreign language.

At the evening gathering, at Pres. Woolsey's, the Society was called to order, after tea, at about 8 o'clock, and listened to a lecture by Dr. Martin, on the present and prospective relations of China to the Western world. Some of the topics which he treated of and illustrated, may be briefly stated as follows:

It was a mistake to suppose that the Chinese mind is utterly immobile and incapable of change.

China had passed through no fewer than twenty-two dynastic revolutions. Most of these had indeed originated in no better motive than the lust of power, and had left the wheels of the government to run on in their old ruts. But some of them had involved high political principles; as, for instance, that which led to the overthrow of the feudal system, and the establishment of a centralized government, B. C. 240.

The whole mass of the population had more than once been profoundly agitated by what may be called a religious movement; especially when the three prevailing systems rose from small beginnings, and successively made their way to the throne of the empire and a place in the heart of the nation.

Periods of intellectual awakening had also occurred, distinct from these great systems of morals and religion; such, for example, as that which followed the restoration of the ancient classics, after their destruction by the tyrant of Ts'in; such as that occasioned by the invention of paper in the dynasty of Han; the discovery of the art of printing in the dynasty of Tang, and the rise of speculative philosophy in that of Sung.

The movement now in progress involved all three of these elements—politics, letters, and religion.

The liberal policy they had adopted, the Chinese learned in the school of adversity. War, the great civilizer, had been their teacher. The unequal conflict they had waged with the nations of the West had taught them that knowledge is power, and set them on the career of improvement on which they have now entered.

At two places might be seen bodies of troops training in foreign tactics. At four places they had established arsenals, for the manufacture of foreign arms; and at two places they had commenced navy yards, for the building of war vessels.

They were not, however, limiting themselves to learning the art of war. In three of the provinces, schools had been opened under the auspices of the provincial viceroys, for instruction in the languages and sciences of the West; and at the capital, a College had been established, under the patronage of the Emperor, which it was intended to expand into the proportions of a University.

The concluding session of the Society was held in the Sheffield Library at 9 o'clock on Thursday morning.

Prof. Salisbury first gave the meeting an account of a volume of Arabic manuscript written by a slave at the south, which had a few months ago been placed in his hands for examination.

Rev. Hyman A. Wilder, missionary to the Zulus in South Africa, presented, in an off-hand way, some interesting details respecting the language, character, and manners and customs of that people.

Dr. Martin exhibited a roll of the law from the Jewish congregations at Kai-fung-fu in China. It was written on kid skins, neatly sewed together, and measured over one hundred feet in length, by two feet in breadth. He proposed at a future time to say something with regard to its character. The circumstance was mentioned that a much older roll from the same locality had been recently presented to the library of the American Bible Society in New York, by Dr. S. Wells Williams.

The following additional communications were presented:

5. On the Ancient Chinese, and its Connection with the Aryan Languages, by Rev. Joseph Edkins, of Peking; presented by Dr. Martin.

Mr. Edkins complains that comparative philologists have paid less attention to the Chinese than its merits deserve, while those who have treated it have taken generally without question the modern forms of the Mandarin dialect, disregarding the secular changes which the language has undergone. These are to be traced out by the aid of the phonetic elements in the written characters, as interpreted especially by the dialects of the southeastern part of the country. The phonetic re-spelling used in Chinese native dictionaries of 1200 years ago shows the initials and finals in a very different condition from the present, and gives at least 700 separate words, instead of the 532 now in use. The odes of the Shi King, in part from before 1100 B. C., are written in rhyme, which renders possible the restoration in many cases of the pronunciation then usual. The beginnings of Chinese writing were explained by Mr. Edkins, in order to show how the phonetic elements were used to determine earlier pronunciation, and many examples were given in illustration. The application of evidence from the existing dialects was in like manner illustrated. A summary of general results teaches us that the early vocabulary of the language may have contained from twelve to sixteen hundred words, with few or none of the distinctions of tone now prevalent, which have gradually grown up to supplement the deficient resources of expression, the p'ing and ju appearing first, then, after B. C. 1000, the shang, and about the time of Christ the ch'ü; the modern Mandarin, with a fifth tone, since A. D. 700.

Through the whole paper, abundant comparisons are made between words of the Chinese language and words of similar sound in the Mongol and Manchu, and also in various western tongues, including the English.

Prof. Whitney remarked, in criticism of this paper, that, while its attempts at restoration of an earlier phase of the Chinese were highly important and interesting, and the successful prosecution of such researches would bring that language under the consideration of comparative philologists in quite a different way from hitherto, the same value could not be attributed to the author's comparisons of words. Mr. Edkins estimated the difficulties of comparison between tongues of different family far too lightly, neglecting for the western languages the historical inquiries whose necessity he very properly insisted on for the Chinese, and calling attention to verbal resemblances which could in many cases be clearly proved valueless, and in the rest were presumably so. The way was not yet cleared for fruitful comparisons of the kind here essayed.

6. On Recent Explorations in Jerusalem, by Rev. Edward L. Clark, of New Haven.

Mr. Clark pointed out how the investigations of the Palestine Exploration Society have confirmed many of the statements of Josephus which were once held in doubt, and proved the truth of the conjectures of later writers, such as Dr. Gustav Schultz, T. Tobler, and Dr. Edward Robinson. The site of the sepulchre of David on Mt. Zion is shown to be that claimed by the Moslems, but a lower cave contains the actual burial place; and the former approach is found on the western side of Mt. Zion, through a large vestibule of native rock, with the remains of steps, piers, and doors.

The strength of the ancient fortress of the Jebusites is attested by stairs cut on the western face of the hill upon which it stood.

The valley of the Tyropæon is found to be filled with rubbish nearly ninety feet deep, near the southwest angle of the temple walls; and, at that place, the massive pavement is laid bare. At the same time, piers decreasing in size as they are found successively on the west toward Mt. Zion, and opposite the wall whence spring the arches of Dr. Robinson's "bridge," suggest that this so-called bridge may have been a steep, broad stairway, an "ascent" to the holy house from the ancient Xystus. A corresponding break in the wall is noticed by Tobler on the southeastern side, over against the Kedron.

Beneath the temple area, the substructions of walls, piers, and massive arches, many of them as old as the days of Solomon, are found in perfect preservation. The subterranean passages, the stables of the Knights Templars, bearing the marks of the horses' hoofs, and the stairways from the south gate, now closed, were described.

The supply of water from Etham and the "upper pool" were alluded to, and the system of conduits and sewers in the ancient temple, with their cisterns, were illustrated as they are given by Ermets Pierotti, architect-engineer to Surrya, Pasha of Jerusalem.

The water supplies for the district of Ophel, the towers over the "Virgin's pool" and Siloam, and the proofs that Mt. Ophel, rather than Mt. Zion, was the site of Solomon's palace, other points were touched upon. Some facts were added which may have weight in deciding as to the course of the first and second walls of the city.

No further papers being offered, the Society adjourned, to meet again in Boston on the 19th of May, 1869.

Proceedings at Boston, May 19th, 1869.

The accounts were audited by a Committee appointed for the purpose, and accepted.

The Librarian made a verbal report, mentioning the principal donors to the library during the past year, and describing their contributions.

The Committee of Publication announced that the first half of vol. ix. of the Journal was out of the hands of the printer, and ready for delivery to the Members. It was hoped that the other half-volume would be published by the time of the next annual meeting.

The Directors gave notice that they had appointed the autumn meeting to be held in New Haven, on the 20th of October next, unless the Committee of Arrangements should see reason for changing the day.* that committee was composed of Prof. Chas. Short of New York, with the Recording and Corresponding Secretaries.

Further, they recommended to the Society the Election as Corporate Members of

* The day was in fact changed, and the meeting took place on Thursday, the 21st.

 Prof. Edward J. Young, of Cambridge, Mass.
 Rev. Kinsley Twining, of Cambridge, Mass.

and the transfer, from the list of Corresponding to that of Honorary Members, of the names of Hermann Brockhaus, Gustav Flügel, Adalbert Kuhn, Max Müller, John Muir, Adolphe Regnier, Ernest Renan, Rudolf Roth, Friedrich Spiegel, Constantin Tischendorf, and Albrecht Weber. These recommendations were, by ballot and vote, duly accepted and adopted by the Society.

The Corresponding Secretary called attention to the decease within the year of two of the Corporate Members, Rev. Swan L. Pomroy, D.D., of Portland, Me., and Prof. John J. Owen, D.D., of New York, for many years a Director of the Society. Dr. Proud-fit, being called upon, paid an appropriate tribute to the character of Dr. Owen.

The correspondence of the past six months was laid upon the table, and extracts from it were read. Of most interest were a letter from Mr. Alexander J. Ellis, of London, in reference to Bell's system of "Visible Speech" (criticised in a communication presented to the Society at the preceding annual meeting: see the Proceedings of that meeting), expressing and explaining his high opinion of the system; and a letter from Prof. B. Jülg, of Innsbruck (in the Tyrol), from which the following is an extract:

"In 1866 I published (at Brockhaus's in Leipzig) the Tales of the Siddhi-Kür in the Kalmuck language, and, in 1868 (at Wagner's, Innsbruck) the supplementary tales to the Siddhi-Kür and the History of Arji-Borji-Chân in Mongolian. Although I received from the Vienna Academy a subsidy toward the expense of publication, I was obliged to add a very considerable sum out of my own pocket, which can only be covered by sale of the volumes. Of scholars interested in this special department there are but few, and the sale is almost exclusively to the larger libraries, so that I am very far from being reimbursed as yet. Hardly a copy has hitherto gone to America; and I beg that you will use your influence to have at least the original edition in Kalmuck and Mongolian procured by one and another College or University or other public library, where philological studies are pursued."

The Corresponding Secretary commended the works in question to the attention of the members present, as contributions of great and acknowledged importance to an interesting and little cultivated branch of linguistics.

The following gentlemen were next chosen by ballot, upon nomination of a special committee appointed for the purpose, as officers of the Society for the ensuing year:

President—Pres. T. D. WOOLSEY, D.D., LL.D., of New Haven.

The following communications were then presented:

1. On Early Inventions of the Chinese; by Rev. Prof. W. A. P. Martin, of Peking.

Dr. Martin spoke of the various inventions, or discoveries, or applications of the resources of nature, in which China has preceded the rest of mankind, and the knowledge of which has, either demonstrably or probably, found its way to the western world from China. He first referred to tea, as an important contribution to human comfort, and the chief staple of a commerce which has led to important political results. Porcelain and silk were made only in China, until Europe learned to rival or surpass its teachers in these arts. Gunpowder is probably Chinese. The discovery of America is in a double sense owing to China, as the wealth of Cathay attracted Columbus westward, and the magnetic needle, which had been used in China for more than two thousand years, directed his course. Paper-making the Chinese invented in the first century of our era, and printing at least eight hundred years before its reinvention in Germany. Inoculation for the small-pox they had long practised before Europe learned it from the Turks, to whom it had probably found its way from the extreme East. And alchemy, the forerunner of chemistry, was pursued in China, before the Christian era, for the same objects which the early alchemists learned from the Arabs to seek after. The Chinese of the present day have ceased to invent; and while, a few centuries ago, they were in advance of all the rest of the world in the arts of civilized life, they are now, simply by having ceased to progress, as far behind the most civilized nations. Their stagnation is to be in the main attributed to their reverence for ancient times, their absorption in the study of language, literature, and antiquity, with consequent neglect of physical science, and the absence of Christianity.

2. On a Hebrew MS. of the Pentateuch, from the Jewish Congregation at Kai-fung-fu in China, by Mr. John W. Barrow of New York; presented by Dr. Martin.

This is a synagogue roll, written on 112 skins of white leather, in 237 columns, of 49 lines each; it measures 143 feet in length. The skins are in two or three places put together in the wrong order, and one passage, from Exodus xxxviii. 18 to Leviticus i. 6, is wanting. They are generally in good condition, but a little water-stained. The character is clear and legible, though not elegant, and approaches the Spanish type. The text is the Masoretic, and the deviations from the received text are almost entirely mere errors in spelling. The original of which this is a representation must evidently have been of European and comparatively modern origin.

In the 26th chapter of Davidson's "Biblical Criticism" (ed. 1866, pp. 366-70), reference is made to the collation of another synagogue roll from the same source, with similar results. Dr. Lee, in the "Prolegomena in Biblia Polyglotta Londinensis Minora," gives extracts from Kœgler's "Notitiæ S.S. Bibliorum Judæorum in Imperio Sinensi" (Halle, 1805), in which the Kai-fung-fu manuscripts are discussed.

Appended to Mr. Barrow's paper was a detailed conspectus of the various readings of the MS. in question, as compared with the received text.

After reading this paper, Dr. Martin gave, by request, an account of his journey to Kai-fung-fu, his intercourse with the remnants of the Jewish colony there (from whom he obtained the roll forming the subject of the paper), and the conditions in which they now exist.

3. On Ophir and Sheba, by Prof. Joseph W. Jenks, of Newtonville, Mass.

Prof. Jenks detailed the instances of occurrence in the Bible of the word Ophir, with their different orthography, and with their varying representation in the Septuagint. He briefly stated the views which had been put forward respecting the position of the country; and he proposed to harmonize their discordance by assuming that the Hebrew-Syrian fleet of Hiram and Solomon sailed through the Red Sea to rendezvous at some port of southern Arabia; that it there separated, a part going eastward to India, and a part southward to Zanguebar and Mozambique; and that, re-assembling in due time, and adding the valuable articles of traffic of Arabia itself, it returned to Eziongeber laden with the products of three countries. Sheba was claimed to be the region on both sides of the straits of Babelmandeb.

4. On Prehistoric Nations, by Rev. Ebenezer Burgess, of South Franklin, Mass.

This communication was mainly a defense of the current views of ancient history and chronology, founded on the Bible. It opposed especially the opinions of Mr. J. D. Baldwin, as set forth in his recent work entitled "Prehistoric Nations" (New York, 1869).

5. On the Hill-People of Kamaon, India, by Rev. J. T. Gracey, Missionary of the Methodist Board in Central India.

Mr. Gracey explained that what he had to say referred to the general population of the province of Kamaon, not to the Bhotiyas of the mountain passes, nor to such exceptional tribes as the Nathas. These people appeared to be destitute of legends or traditions accounting for their origin. They acknowledged but three castes, Brahmins, Rajputs, and a low degraded class called Doms. Among their peculiar customs is a game called patharimvi, 'stoning,' in which two parties, of about two hundred each, pelt one another with stones, in a valley between hills, which are crowded with spectators; the players defending their heads by aid of a brass-studded skin shield. Polyandry is said to have prevailed formerly, but is now replaced by polygamy, and the marriage-tie is a very loose one. Among the divinities worshipped in the Hills are Goël and Sém, and the goddess Naini. Mr. Gracey gave some details respecting their worship, and related legends told of them. The people have an excessive dread of ghosts; those residing in the mountain passes are propitiated by the sacrifice of a bit of the clothing of each one who goes by.

A vocabulary of about two hundred words from the language of the hill-people of Kamaon, with their equivalents in Hindustani, was subjoined to the paper.

6. On the Competitive Examination-System in China, by Rev. Dr. Martin.

After briefly referring to the practical importance of his subject, and its bearing upon the question of an improved civil service in the United States, Dr. Martin began with speaking of the completeness and elaboration of the Chinese system, of the success with which it attained its object, the drawing in of the ablest minds of the empire to the service of the State, of the general capacity and culture of the mandarin class, and of the essential democracy of a constitution which neither recognized a hereditary aristocracy, nor left offices to be filled by the favorites of the Emperor or his representatives. The origin of the system is referred to the time of Shun (about B. C. 2200), who examined his officers every third year, for promotion or degradation. Under the Chau dynasty (about B.C. 1100), candidates for office, as well as officers, were examined in the six arts of music, archery, horsemanship, writing, arithmetic, and social and public etiquette. About the beginning of our era, under the Han, candidates selected in the provinces for filial piety and integrity were examined at the capital in the arts above specified, and in civil and military affairs, agriculture, and geography. A thousand years later, under the Tang, the present classification of candidates and of officers was already established. Now, the subjects for examination are the same as of old, but, in accordance with the circumstances and spirit of modern times, the mode is prevailingly literary rather than practical. The three grades of candidates are called siu-ts'ai, chü-jin, and tsin-shi, or 'budding genius,' 'promoted scholar,' and 'ready for office.' The trial for the first degree is held in the chief city of each district or hien; about two thousand competitors are present, of every age, and each produces a poem and essays on assigned themes, during a night and a day of close confinement; and the authors of the few best, about one in a hundred, receive the degree of siu-ts'ai. The holders of this title assemble once in three years at the capital of a province, and, after examination on a much wider range of subjects, in three sessions of near three days each, about one in a hundred is again advanced to the dignity of chü-jin. Each chü-jin is authorized to repair the next spring to Peking, to compete with his peers for the first degree, which is won by about three in a hundred. The successful tsin-shi has now open to him the highest offices in the empire, but begins usually as mayor, or sub-prefect, or sub-chancellor, to which place he is appointable by lot—if not first admitted, upon an examination presided over by the Emperor in person, into the highest literary body in the empire, the Han-lin ('Forest of Pencils'), or Imperial Institute. Once in three years the Emperor designates a chuang-yuen, or laureate scholar of the empire.

This system amounts to the most powerful incitement possible to study—more efficient, in fact, than common schools, colleges, and universities; and it wakes the most persistent and energetic labor, continued as long as the powers last. Of a certain list of ninety-nine successful competitors for the second degree, the average was above thirty years of age, while one was sixty-two, and one eighty-three. Nearly all who enter the first examination (many millions) devote their lives to education; and for readiness with the pen and retentiveness of memory are hard to parallel elsewhere. That their education is one-sided, devoted to words rather than things, exclusively literary and not scientific, the fault is not in the system, but in the national standard of knowledge. And the system affords the most powerful lever by which the standard might be raised and changed, under an enlightened central board.

In its political aspects, the system operates as a safety-valve, giving to those who are able and ambitious of distinction the means of receiving it legitimately; it affords a counterpoise to the authority of an absolute monarch; it makes administrators who understand the people whom they have to rule; and it furnishes an immense educated class who are interested in the permanence of existing institutions.

The strict standard of the examination has sometimes been lowered by allowing a greater number of successful competitors, and even, in times of special need, by selling the right to compete in a higher examination without having passed the lower; but, on the other hand, the purity of the system is carefully guarded, and a few years since the first president of the examining board at Peking was put to death for granting two or three fraudulent degrees.

In illustration of the style of the examinations, Dr. Martin gave translations of several examination-papers, or lists of questions given to the candidates to write upon.

After the reading of this paper, the Society adjourned, to meet again in October, at New Haven.

Proceedings at New Haven, October 21st and 22d, 1869.

The Society assembled for its autumn meeting on Thursday, October 21st, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, the President in the chair.

After the reading of the minutes, the Committee of Arrangements gave notice that they had accepted on behalf of the Society an invitation from the Secretary of the Classical Section, Prof. Hadley, to take tea and hold the evening session at his house. On motion, their action in the matter was approved.

The Directors announced that they had appointed the next Annual Meeting to be held in Boston, on Wednesday, May 18th, 1870, and had designated Mr. J. S. Ropes, with the Recording and Corresponding Secretaries, as Committee of Arrangements for the meeting.

They also recommended for election as members of the Society: to Corporate membership,

Rev. Mytton Maury, of Cold Spring, N. Y.

Mr. Nathaniel Paine, of Worcester, Mass.

Rev. William H. Ward, of New York.

Rev. Joseph K. Wight, of New Hamburg, N. Y.

to Corresponding membership,

Rev. Joseph Edkins, Missionary in China.

Rev. John T. Gracey, Missionary in Central India.

The gentlemen thus recommended were elected without dissent.

The Directors also informed the Society that, by a disastrous fire which occurred in the printing office of Messrs. Tuttle, Morehouse and Taylor, on the 21st September last, all the undistributed part of the edition of the half-volume of Journal just published (vol. ix. No. 1), along with the extra copies of the Tāittirīya-Prāṭiśākhya, had been destroyed. The Committee of Publication was now authorized by them to proceed to reprint the work and replace the loss, as soon as should be found convenient: the expense would be, it was expected, not far from two-thirds covered by an insurance of five hundred dollars which had been taken upon the Society's property in the building burnt.

Extracts from the correspondence of the past half-year were read by the Corresponding Secretary; among others, the following:

From Prof. G. Seyffarth, Dansville, N. Y., June 26th, 1869:

" I am about to publish a work entitled "Clavis Aegyptiaca: collection of all bilingual and some other hieroglyphic inscriptions, translated and explained. With the syllabic alphabet in hieroglyphic, hieratic, and demotic characters, and with glossaries and indexes." This volume will contain thirty-four inscriptions, of which the famous one found in the ruins of Pompeii, on the altar in the temple of Isis, will interest the Italians."

From the Rev. J. Perkins, D.D., Chicopee, Mass, Oct. 9th, 1869 :

" I am sorry to be obliged to report myself as confined to my room by protracted sickness, and not even able to use a pen. . . . By another hand I send you two manuscripts, which I beg you to present to the Society's attention at your convenience. They are a brief grammar and vocabulary of the Kurdish language, prepared by the late lamented Rev. Samuel A. Rhea, one of your corresponding members. He had commenced copying the grammar for you before his death. Of Mr. Rhea you already know something. He was one of the most gifted men of all our missionaries. He resided eight years in Kurdistan, a much longer time than any other civilized man ever lived in the country; and, while he made the Nestorians and their language the objects of his special attention, he yet freely mingled with the Kurds also during the whole period. Yet it is to be presumed that Mr. Rhea would not claim for his grammar and vocabulary any merits beyond those of the briefest epitome of the language. I would present these manuscripts to the Oriental Society in the name of his widow. . . . I hope in a few weeks to send you a copy of an admirable memoir of Mr. Rhea [by Rev. D. W. Marsh]."

Mr. Rhea's manuscripts here spoken of were laid before the Society later in the meeting.

From Mr. William Gamble, Superintendent of the Presbyterian Mission Press at Shanghai, dated May 18th, 1869 :

"I shipped by the American Mail of March 20th two boxes of type for you, being the Chinese font ordered some time since for the American Oriental Society. Of the fund collected by Dr. Bradley there will still remain in your hands a considerable balance after paying for what are now sent. If you wish still to expend it in Chinese type, I would advise that, instead of having a larger font, you purchase the matrices for the more common sorts. In this way your font would be much more serviceable, if you wished to use it in printing. The great difficulty in printing Chinese with moveable type comes from our constantly running out of sorts. The total number of different characters in the font is 6000 full body, and 1500 primitives and radicals, which will by combination make a total of nearly 25,000 different characters. The type are in the cases, which are well packed in the boxes, and all you will have to do is to get a small cabinet made for the cases, and slip them into it according as they are numbered. . . . The Chinese and Japanese are commencing to use our method of printing to some extent."

The Secretary explained that the font procured was one of small pica size, recently cut at Shanghai under the direction of Mr. Gamble himself, and highly approved both by Chinese and foreigners for the beauty and delicacy of its style, and its convenience of practical use with English type.*

He was obliged to add that the packing had proved insufficient, and that the boxes had come to hand with most of the cases broken, and their contents in a state of pi, so that the font was not for the moment in condition to be used. The Directors have authorized such expenditure as should be required in order to restore its serviceableness.

From Dr. W. F. A. Behrnauer, dated Dresden, April 7th, 1869 :

"I communicate herewith an account of the Arabic inscription found on the hipogriff of the Campo Santo at Pisa, with a rubbing made by my friend Dr. Detlefsen, during his studies, made in Italy at the end of 1859 and the beginning of 1860."

Dr. Behrnauer refers to the interpretation of this inscription given by M. Marcel in 1839, in the Journal Asiatique, and characterizes it as hardly satisfactory. Lanci's plate, in his "Trattato delle simboliche rappresentanze Arabiche" (Paris, 1845, 4to, vol. ii, pp. 54, 154), is more accurate than Marcel's, but his explanation is also not to be approved: such is the opinion of Mr. Michel Amari, who gives a new reading of the inscription, copied by Dr. Behrnauer and translated as follows: "excellent benediction and high favor, perfect prosperity without envy, and perpetual wealth and unalterable health and happiness, and revenue not diminished for its possessor." Dr. Behrnauer quotes from De Morrona ("Pisa illustrata," Pisa, 1787, vol. i, p. 190-195) some account of the monument. It is 1½ metres (about five feet) high, and 1½ metres (a little over three feet) broad. It is said to have been found under ground while the foundations of the cathedral of Pisa were laid; and was placed as an ornament upon the point of the gable of the cathedral, where it remained until the beginning of the present century. It was somewhat damaged by musket-balls, fired at it while in that position.

* The following is a specimen of it: 人之初性本善

The inscription of this monument has a great resemblance to the other legendary texts which are to be found on monuments of metal, on bowls and on vases, and the like.

The Corresponding Secretary also exhibited a copper fac-simile (electrotyped) of a supposed block-tin coin, stated to have been found, a foot and a half below the surface, at a place in Vermillion Co., Indiana, surrounded by forests but in the neighborhood of so-called "Aztec" mounds; and supposed to be a relic of the "mound-builders." It belongs at present to Mr. John Collett, of Eugene, Vermillion Co., Ind., who is desirous of having its true character determined. The characters on the coin were evidently Arabic, and several gentlemen present, practically familiar with Eastern coins, had no doubt of its being a quite modern Arabic coin, although no one was able to make out the legend. It was generally pronounced to belong to a class of spurious relics of which the West has been somewhat prolific of late.

Communications were now called for, and the following were presented:

1. On a Set of Ancient Chinese Scrolls, containing representations of early Emperors and other distinguished characters, by Dr. Peter Parker, of Washington, D. C.

These scrolls purport to be fac-similes of stones engraved during the Han dynasty (ended A. D. 260). They represent Hwang-ti (alleged date, B. C. 2596), Chuen-heuh Kaou-yang, son of Chang-i and grandson of Hwang-ti (B. C. 2400), Fuh-hi, the inventor of writing, and Tsang-tsing (B. C. 3254), Chuh-tsung, Shin-nung the Divine husbandman (B. C. 3114), Te-yaou (B. C. 2330), the illustrious, "benevolent as heaven, wise as god, whom the people approached as the sun, and looked up to as the clouds," and various other worthies celebrated in the annals of China.

Dr. Parker gave a partial explanation of the contents of the scrolls. The fac-similes are highly valued by the Chinese, and their treatment serves to illustrate the zeal and cleverness of Chinese antiquarians. Scores of the latter have expended study upon them, with results which are recorded on the scrolls, each comment being dated, and having the signature and the seal of its author affixed. The original inscriptions are in part so effaced by time that only portions of the characters remain; but from these the reading has been restored and the sense determined.

A set of the scrolls was presented to the Society by Dr. Parker, who proposed to furnish later a complete translation of their contents, with notes.

2. On the Algonkin name Manit or Munitou, sometimes translated 'Great Spirit' and 'God,' by Mr. J. Hammond Trumbull, of Hartford, Conn.

This paper was introduced by remarks on the difficulty of distinguishing, in the present habits and opinions of the Indians of North America, that which they have inherited from remote ancestors and that which they have derived from foreign sources. In the absence of historical records and reliable traditions, traces of primitive beliefs must be sought in language; and such evidence as language supplies is the more valuable because it cannot be suspected of a European origin, or as of modern invention.

An analysis was given of the name Manit or Manitou, by which various Algonkin nations expressed their highest conception of an existence and a power superior to man's. Manitou (otherwise written Mannittou, Manito, Munedo, etc.) was shown to be formed from Manit, by affixing the representative of the verb-substantive. It means 'Manit is,' or 'it is Manit.' The next step in analysis separates the initial M, which is an indefinite and impersonal prefix, from an-it, a participle of the verb an-eü, meaning 'to be more than, to exceed, to surpass.' The adverbial form, an-ué (in the Massachusetts language), is the sign of the comparative degree, and means 'more, beyond.' An-it does not connote life, spiritual existence, or any moral attributes. One of its uses is in the sense of 'corrupt,' 'rotten,' or 'decayed,' that is, 'gone beyond' or 'more than' the natural and proper state. In this sense the Mass. an-it and an-eik (from the same verb) are used by Eliot; the Abnaki an-ahoué by Rale, and the corresponding al-et, in the Delaware, by Zeisberger.

The primary meaning of Manit was thus found to be, 'Somebody who or something which goes beyond, exceeds, or is more than the common or the normal; something extra-ordinary or preter-natural—not, necessarily, super-natural.' And this was shown to agree with the explanation of the word given by several early writers.

Other Algonkin words were mentioned, having similar meaning but no etymological affinity to Manit; such as the Abnaki Niwesk and Micmac Nizkam. The Dakota wakan, which has been translated 'God, a spirit, something consecrated; medicine,' etc., was derived from the preposition and adverb aka, 'above, superior.' Hence, wakan is as appropriately used to characterize a bad spirit as a good one, or any extra-ordinary natural phenomenon as either.

In a paper printed with the Proceedings of the Am. Philosophical Society for September, 1864, was pointed out the resemblance between the Algonkin Manitou and certain old-world names or titles of the Supreme Being, such as "the Chinese mang taou, Egyptian ma ntr, Latin magnus deus, Greek μὴας θεός, and Sanskrit mahi deva." Mr Trumbull remarked that, with the reduction of manitou to its root an, this resemblance disappears, and with it the mathematical probability, which had been computed as not far from "a hundred millions to one," of the derivation of these names from the same original source. This analysis also deprives of all special significance what Dr. Schoolcraft regarded "as the remarkable fact, that the -edu or -ito of the Algonkin name of God is in sound both the Greek [Latin?] deo and the Aztec teo transposed." Mere verbal resemblance was proved (as Mr. Trumbull believed) in this instance, as it has been in many others, to be valueless as evidence of the genetic relationship of languages.

3. Brief Grammar and Vocabulary of the Kurdish Language, by the late Rev. Samuel A. Rhea, Missionary among the Nestorians of Kurdistan; presented by the Corresponding Secretary.

The letter of Dr. Perkins accompanying this paper has been given above.

In his grammatical sketch, Mr. Rhea goes through with the different parts of speech, explaining their inflections and modes of use; spending by far the most space upon the classification and conjugation of verbs. His vocabulary contains not far from fifteen hundred words, with very brief indication of their meaning, usually limited to a single synonym.

The Secretary read some extracts from the grammar, pointing out the very close accordance between the facts detailed and those of the Persian language. He remarked that the question of publication of the manuscript would of course remain to be determined by careful comparison with the already published data for the Kurdish, which alone could show how much that was new, and an addition to knowledge, was brought to light in it. There could hardly fail to be matter of decided value here; and the collection and working up of it, in the leisure of a laborious life, was an evidence of scholarly taste and devotedness on the part of Mr. Rhea which was highly creditable to him, and could not but add to our sorrow for his early death.

4. Recent Archæological Explorations and Discoveries in Asia Minor, by Rev. H. J. Van Lennep, Missionary of the A. B. C. F. M. in Asiatic Turkey.

Dr. Van Lennep gave a summary account of some of the results of his own explorations in Asia Minor, mentioning at the same time that most of them would be found more fully described and illustrated in a forthcoming work of his, entitled "Travels in Asia Minor," now in process of publication (by Murray, London).

He spoke first of the remains of a very ancient fort on the top of a mountain which is called Star mountain (Yıldız Dağı). Strabo describes a mountain by this same name, asserting that the most valuable treasures of King Mithridates were kept in the castle at its summit, and that it was taken by the Romans. Dr. Van Lennep pronounced Strabo's description to apply closely to this mountain, as regards both its situation and its character. Two streams gush forth high upon its side and flow not far apart; when they reach the base, they turn in opposite directions, pass completely around the mountain, and, uniting on the other side, form what is still called the Star river. The mountain lies between Tocat and Sivas, and the fort is more than eight thousand feet above the level of the Black Sea. It commands a view as far as that sea on the north, and Mt. Argens on the south.

Referring to the sculptures on Yazili Kayah (near the ancient Pterium, one day's journey north of Yuzghat), Dr. Van Lennep assented to Texier's explanation of them, as representing the introduction of the worship of Astarte into Phrygia; but claimed that the youth behind the goddess, whom Texier calls simply a prince, must be recognized as the Cupid of the Greeks. Mr. Layard had equally failed to recognize the child-god in the procession he copies from the carvings at Nineveh. Dr. Van Lennep supported his view by a gem recently obtained by him in Asia Minor, on which is cut an intaglio figure of the Assyrian Astarte, with the three-pointed crown on her head and the star and crescent moon on either side; while behind her, on a chair, sits a child, who is none other than Cupid. This gem was pronounced to be of Assyrian subject and Greek workmanship, pure Greek and Assyrian intaglios being exhibited to illustrate its character.

Next were described the remains of an unfinished Egyptian building at Euyuk, a day's journey north of Yazili Kayah. Its material is black granite, while Grecian monuments are usually of marble. Egyptian sphinxes stand on either side of the entrance, from which a line of sculptured stones extends to the right and left, as in other ancient monuments, both Assyrian and Egyptian. The sculptures seem to represent the erection of the building, and the festivities and ceremonies observed on the occasion. The bull Apis stands on a platform, and sacrifices of goats and oxen are offered to him by the king and queen. The features and hair of nearly all the figures are African.

Farther, the figure of Sesostris was spoken of, found carved on a ledge near the mouth of a pass through Mt. Tmolus, not far from the ancient road from Smyrna to Sardis. This is one of the two figures of the conqueror described by Herodotus.

Finally, Dr. Van Lennep described the interesting remains that lie around Smyrna; especially the old rubbish-heap of ancient Smyrna, where valuable remains are often brought to light by the rains. He spoke of the opening of several tombs of a very ancient date. He also exhibited to the Society various figures or fragments of figures in terra cotta, of the highest artistic merit, which had been found in those tombs or in the soil, and which appear to him to have been originally gilded, and to have represented the household divinities of the ancient Symmriotes.

5. On a Chinese Tablet illustrating the religious opinions of the literary class, by Dr. D. B. McCartee, Missionary of the Presbyterian Board at Ningpo, China.

Dr. McCartee said that the scroll which he exhibited was interesting both as a very favorable specimen of Chinese calligraphy, and as showing the views held by a large proportion of the literary men of China with reference to the popular religion. He went on to set forth briefly the peculiar religious condition of China, explaining that the Chinese as a nation, instead of being divided between the Confucian faith, Buddhism, and the doctrines of Lao-tse, really accept them all, having recourse always to the particular divinity or rite which is reputed to be serviceable in such matters as they happen to have in hand. It has been stated that the literati, or so-called Confucianists, do not worship idols; but this is an error, for the stellar gods Win-chang (Ursa major) and Kwei-sing (polar star) are worshipped by the literary class as such, and by them alone, as the speaker could testify from personal observation, having lived in a temple with these idols for more than a year.

The scroll exhibited was an impression or rubbing from a stone tablet erected in the Ch'eng-Hwang Miau, or 'Temple of the Tutelar Deity' of the Wei-hien or 'district city of Wei,' in the province of Shan-tung, China; and the inscription was in the handwriting of Cheu Pan-k'iau, the Chi-hien or magistrate of the district—a literary gentleman celebrated as a poet, a calligrapher, and a wit, whose "Remains," consisting of poems, pencil drawings, and epistolary writings, have gone through many editions in China. The sentiments expressed in this document clearly mark Mr. Cheu as a disciple of the school of Chu-hi, who may be said to have been the Comte of China. The inscription bears the date of the 17th year of Kien-lung, the 9th of the then current cycle (of 60 years), and the 5th moon (about June, A. D. 1752). Mr. Cheu commences by referring to the Ki-lin, the fung or phoenix, the serpent, and the dragon; to each of which are ascribed bodily members, and distinct personal characteristics. He then speaks of the heavens, as an azure vault, and the earth as a massive clod, and man as the being who, dwelling between heaven and earth, is characterized by certain bodily organs, the faculty of speech, a sense of propriety, etc. But, he asks, how can we suppose Heaven to possess bodily organs like man's, and ascribe to it a personal existence? He says that from the time of the Duke of Chou (B.C. 1130) the name "Supreme Ruler" (Shang-ti) has been applied to Heaven, and that the vulgar have styled it the "Gemmeneous Emperor" (Yuh-Hwang), and invested it with bodily organs, clothing, regalia, and a personal existence; have made images of it, and accompanied them with retinues of followers; and that subsequent ages have regarded it with awe and reverence. He then speaks of the Ch'eng, or wall which surrounds every city, and of the Hwang, or moat which encircles it, and asks why people have personified these as a god, and attributed to this god power over life and death, and jurisdiction over happiness and misery, surrounding (its images) with awe-inspiring objects, so that not only the common people are struck with awe, but even he himself confesses that, on entering the dark recesses of its temple, his hair stands on end, and his frame shudders, as though he stood in the presence of a demon. He quotes an ancient sage who says "these things are what make the people seek to conciliate them" (i. e., the gods), and adds that, unless the ignorant populace have a desire to conciliate the gods, the officers could not trust them (nor control them). After describing the repairs that had been thought necessary, and the expense incurred in making them, and in suitably furnishing the temple, he adds that some might be disposed to question the necessity, or propriety, of expending several thousand ounces of silver in erecting a pavilion and stage for theatrical exhibitions; and asks "Can it be that there are gods who delight in theatrical exhibitions?" He quotes from an ancient tablet an account of a female musician who "delighted the gods" with her performances, and cites from the Book of Odes the following passage: "With lyres and harps and strokes of the drum, welcome the Lord of the Fields;" and then asks, "Is there really a Lord of the Fields? and does he really delight in lyres and harps? If so, who ever heard of him?" He then explains it as being simply the natural way in which people give expression to their gratitude to the gods. He expresses his approbation of this system of instructing (and ruling) the people, devised by the ancients; and says that, since people have sacrificed to the Ch'eng-Hwang (literally 'City Wall and Moat') as though it had a personal existence, why not please it with songs and dances? And as to theatrical representations, he thinks the theatre, as a school of morals, has conferred great benefits upon mankind. All that he would stipulate is that indecent and otherwise unsuitable plays should be prohibited. In summing up, he says that Fu-hi, Shen-nung, Hwang-ti, Yau, Shun, Yü, T'ang, Wen-wang, Wu-wang, the duke of Chou, and Confucius, really did exist personally before they were deified, and there seems to be a propriety in sacrificing to them as though they (still) had a personal existence. But Heaven, earth, the sun, moon, wind, thunder, hills and streams, rivers and mountains, soil and grain, the wall and moat, the corners of the house, the well, and the fire-place, although they have been deified, have really no personal existence, and should not (properly or per se) be sacrificed to as though they had. Yet even the sages from the ancient times have all sacrificed to them, as though they really and personally existed; and he asks, do the deities of heaven enjoy the viands or make use of the utensils used in sacrificing to them? And he replies that, although the sounds, the colors, and the odors and tastes of things in heaven cannot be imitated, yet all these devices are but the modes of giving expression to the feelings of reverence and veneration which naturally arise in the human heart. Hence he concludes that the erection of a tablet to perpetuate the memory of the repairs made upon the Ch'eng-Hwang temple is not an affair of mere local or temporary interest, but is inseparably connected with the doctrines and ceremonial observances of remote antiquity; and since others (whose names he mentions) had liberally contributed funds to defray the expenses, he (the writer) could not be so parsimonious as to grudge a contribution of penmanship to the same object.

Dr. McCartee remarked in conclusion that he had often heard similar sentiments advanced by officers and litterati in China, and it was interesting to observe that the wisest of that ancient nation gave such unequivocal assent to the doctrine that belief in a personal God, who will render to every man according to his work, is both a natural acting-out of the human heart, and absolutely requisite in order to secure good government.

Dr. McCartee further exhibited a set of very fine rubbings, taken from stone tablets set up in a Buddhist temple at Hangchow, and representing, nearly in life size, sixteen of the eighteen Lo-han (Sanskrit arhant), or personal attendants of Buddha. These rubbings he presented to the Society's collection.

6. On the Theory of the Greek Accent, by Prof. James Hadley, of New Haven.

The Greeks distinguished one syllable in each word by sounding its vowel on a higher key: this higher key was represented by the acute accent. The ordinary lower key was not represented in writing. But when it followed the higher key on the same long vowel, it was represented by the grave accent, which then united with the acute to form the circumflex. And when a high-tone ultima, followed by other words in close connection, dropped down to a lower key, it was written with a grave accent instead of the acute. The melodic character of the Greek accent Prof. Hadley illustrated from Dionysius Halic. (de Comp. Verb., 12), who calls the interval between the higher and lower keys a fifth (three tones and a semi-tone). That there was any difference in stress (or force of utterance) between accented and unaccented syllables, is not intimated by the ancient writers: that such difference, if it existed, cannot have been great, is made probable by the total disregard of accent in ancient verse. The question has been raised whether any distinction was made among the lower tones; whether there was any middle tone, intermediate between the highest and the lowest. Some ancient writers speak of a middle tone; but the statements are not so definite as could be wished. G. Hermann (de emend. rat. gramm. Graec.) recognized a middle tone in the grave accent where it takes the place of an acute on the ultima. G. Curtius (Jahn's Jahrb., vol. 72) recognized it also in the grave accent where it forms part of the circumflex. Recently, F. Misteli (Kuhn's Zeitsch., vol. 17), founding on the analogies of the Sanskrit accent, holds that the high tone (acute accent), where it was not final, was always followed by a middle tone. Prof. Hadley set forth a theory based on that of Misteli, but with additions and modifications of his own. In the undivided Indo-European, as in Sanskrit, there was no restriction on the place of the accent; it might fall on any syllable of the longest word. Hence the high tone with the following middle tone might be separated from the end of the word by a succession of low-tone syllables. If now there came to be a prevailing dislike for such a succession, an unwillingness to hear more than one low-tone syllable at the end of a word, the result would be to confine the accent to the last three syllables. This result, as it is found both in Greek and in Latin, may be referred to the time of Graeco-Italian unity. But for the Greek we have to assume also a subsequent restriction; the final low tone must not occupy the whole of a long syllable; if it came upon a long vowel, the first half of that vowel must be sounded with middle tone. Thus "high tone, middle tone, short low tone," became a prevailing cadence for Greek words, and was brought in wherever it could be attained without throwing back the accent. The leading rules of Greek accentuation—no accent allowed before the antepenult; only the acute used on that syllable, and not even this if the ultima is long; an accented penult must take the circumflex if it has a long vowel and the ultima a short one; an accented penult must take the acute in any other case;—all these are explained by this cadence, being all necessary to secure it. As for throwing back the accent to obtain this cadence (or as much of it as possible), one branch of the Greeks, the Aeolians of Asia Minor, did so; whence Aeolic forms like χαλεπος, χαλεπως, λελυκοτες, for which the common Greek has χαλεπός, χαλεπῶς, λελυκότες, with the primitive accent.

The Latin took a different, though analogous course. It allowed the final low tone to have either quantity, but would not allow the middle tone before it to occupy the whole of a long syllable, whether long by nature or position. Hence the cadence, "high tone, short middle tone, low tone," which the Latin procured, or as much of it as possible, in all words, even by throwing back the accent like the Aeolic Greek. In this way all the varieties of Latin accent—legeres, legeret, monères, moneret, legendus, vixit, rēs—may be easily accounted for.

In conclusion, Prof. Hadley referred to the hypothetical character of this theory, pointing out the unproved assumptions contained in it; but remarked that these assumptions are so natural in themselves and furnish so simple an explanation for so many seemingly unconnected facts, that it is difficult to believe them wholly unfounded.

7. On the Order of Words in Attic Greek Prose, by Prof. Charles Short, of Columbia College, New York.

This communication was a verbal account of an Essay which Prof. Short was about to publish. The immediate occasion of the Essay is the republication in this country of Mr. Yonge's English-Greek Dictionary. That work being intended chiefly as an aid to students in Greek Composition, it seemed well to prefix to it something on the order of the words.

Prof. Short stated that, while there were several monographs on this subject by—to single authors or to single points, as by Darpe, Braun, and several commentators on Greek authors had here and there touched the matter, as Stallbaum, Weber, and Rehdantz, yet he was not aware that any systematic treatise upon the subject had anywhere appeared, and he had therefore undertaken to supply such a one as he could. The general subject being large, he had confined himself to the usages of prose, and to one form of that, the Attic.

Taking Xenophon as a basis, he had then carefully examined Thucydides, next the Attic Orators, and lastly Plato. His method had been to gather under each head a very large number of examples from these writers in the order just mentioned, and then to deduce the general law, noting the exceptions, and giving them in classes where this was practicable. When the reason for a particular order appeared, he had in many instances stated it, but his main purpose in the present Essay was rather to develop the laws of order than to discuss them, and by adding the exceptions to show the range within which diversity of order might take place.

Some of the general laws were specified: that the adjective follows the word it qualifies; that the genitive follows the noun it limits, with the curious exception that when the limited noun has the article, the genitive in general relations may stand between the article and the noun, but the partitive genitive, as a law, may not; that the predicate noun, pronoun, or adjective, stands directly before the verb finite, or an infinitive, or a participle either with or without the article; that the Greeks in respect to collocation made no distinction between the objective and the subjective infinitive, putting both alike after the leading word; that the modification of a word having the article intervenes between the article and the word, and that it sometimes follows, both wholly or in part, but only in the rarest instances (except a limiting genitive) precedes them, and that he had observed only one case in which an adverb modifying an infinitive with the article stood before the article, and that in a suspected piece of Xenophon, the Apologia.

In his treatment of the prepositions, he had first given their position with reference to their regimen and then added an elaborate section on a perplexing subject, the omission and repetition of the preposition under various circumstances; and after setting forth the prevailing usage in simple cases, he had considered the complex cases, and shown that the latter could be resolved into the former. He has perhaps discovered a law here not previously observed.

Where various readings existed affecting the matter of order, he had given the variation under its appropriate head and subjoined the name of the Editor who adopted it, and the examples in connection with which such reading was given might be regarded as so much testimony on its behalf.

8. On Prof. Max Müller's Translation of the Rig-Veda, by Prof. W. D. Whitney, of New Haven.

Prof. Whitney said that not more than two or three other Sanskritists had studied the Veda so long and so deeply as Prof. Max Müller, or were in position to furnish so authoritative a version of it. Hence, scholars had been looking forward with eager expectation to his translation, promised many years ago, and of which the first volume has left the press this season. The work as published would not be found in all respects to fulfil the expectations they had formed. Though advertised as one of a series of eight volumes, it actually contains only one seventy-fifth of the Vedic text (12 hymns out of 1017). The bulk of the volume is filled with a variety of material, which, though much of it valuable in itself, would gladly have been spared. The author has taken as his model Burnouf's work on the Āvesta. But the circumstances of the two cases are so different that the model is an ill-chosen one. Burnouf was breaking a path in an entirely new subject. His work was left a fragment, and never could have been made any thing else. Müller has undertaken an impracticable task, that of accounting for and establishing his version of every passage. How incomplete, and open to criticism in regard to proportion, it is, appears from the circumstance that to the first verse translated there is a note of eleven pages on an adjective meaning 'ruddy,' while the making of an accusative plural (or gen. or abl. sing.) the subject of a verb, and the assumption that the sun could be regarded as Indra's horse, were let pass without any remark—and so in other cases, which were pointed out in a detailed criticism of a few verses. To the extension of the work by including a romanized text of the original hymns themselves, and the detailed versions of other translators, objection was taken on the score of want of necessity: since such things can be of service only to a professed Vedic scholar, who must be presumed to possess them in another form. If Müller would give simply his own understanding of the meaning of the hymns, with limited exposition of especially difficult points, he would consult the interests not only of the public at large, but also of his fellow-students in the same department.

The selection of this particular body of hymns (those to the Maruts, or storm-gods) for inclusion in the first volume is unfortunate, since they are among the most obscure and tedious of the collection, and may repel from a study of the Veda some who would have been attracted by a more pleasing first taste.

On the score of his over-abundant introductory and expository matter, Müller claims that his is the "first translation" of the Veda: a claim which few will be ready to admit. Burnouf called his work a "commentary," not a translation, though he had no real predecessor; while Müller has to quote several, one of whom (Benfey) has worked upon the same basis and with the same principles as himself, although doubtless with less thorough preparation. To Müller's method no exceptions can be taken: he utterly discards the native commentators as authority, and founds his interpretation upon grammar, etymology, and the comparison of parallel passages. He is also perfectly fair and modest in estimating the value of the results reached by him; putting forward his version as only a provisional solution of its very difficult problem, and as sure to be superseded by and by, when longer study shall have brought a better comprehension of the whole Vedic antiquity.

9. Notes on a Surveying Trip from the Phenician Coast to the Euphrates River, by Mr. Henry M. Canfield, of South Britain, Conn.

Mr. Canfield had expected to be present at the meeting, and to give an oral account of his trip; but, being unavoidably kept away, he sent instead a brief paper, which was read by the Corresponding Secretary.

Mr. Canfield joined Col. Romer's party, engaged to survey a route for a railroad from the Mediterranean to the Euphrates, in April, 1868. The line surveyed started at the mouth of El Kebir, and followed the road to Hamath nearly to the Nessarieh range. With some difficulty, a practicable route was found through the pass between the Nessarieh and the Lebanon, then across the beautiful fertile plain of the Beky'aa, through the Jebel Homs to Homs, and north-easterly over the desert to Selamieh, the farthest outpost of civilization; then, after extensive exploration reaching as far as Aleppo and Palmyra, through the great Wady in Jebel Assouet nearly to the Euphrates at Sheik Omar or Balis; when difficulties with the Arab tribes put an end, for the time, to the enterprise.

Mr. Canfield describes the Nusairi inhabitants of the mountains and desert as a large-framed race, usually with light hair and brown eyes, laborious, but treacherous and inhospitable; and speaks of their semi-subterranean dwellings, of their customs and religion. He was unable to discover or learn how they dispose of their dead. He calls attention to the square towers, called by the Arabs bourgh, scattered across the whole country to the Euphrates; also to the numerous castles of the middle ages, of which the finest he saw is Kalat el Husn, at the north-western edge of the Beky'aa. This is so immense a structure that it is now inhabited by 5000 people. The desert country beyond Selamiëh is marked in places by groups of broken columns and heaps of ruins; at one point, west of the Orontes and east of Sherbt el-Humun, forming regular streets and squares over a space three miles long and two wide; deserted villages, in various styles of building, are also numerous.

A chief of the Ismaeliyëh was met with who had just returned from a trip to India; showing that the old Assassins have and maintain correspondence with some Indian sect.

Rev. Mr. Blodget, missionary at Peking, addressed the meeting briefly respecting the religion of the Chinese, and respecting the translation into Chinese of the word God.

After this (at one o'clock, Friday noon) the Society adjourned, to meet again in Boston, on Wednesday, May 18th, 1870.

Proceedings at Boston, May 18th, 1870.

THE Society assembled at 10 o'clock A. M., at the rooms of the American Academy. President Woolsey being absent, the chair was occupied alternately by Dr. Anderson and Dr. Parker, Vice-Presidents.

The record of the preceding meeting was read by the Recording Secretary. It was arranged that there should be a recess of only one hour at noon, that the business of the meeting might be finished before evening.

The Treasurer's Report was read, audited, and accepted. It was as follows:

RECEIPTS.
Balance on hand, May 19th, 1869,	$357.53
Annual assessments paid in,	$515.00
Life-membership,	75.00
Sale of the Journal,	18.75
Total receipts of the year,	$966.28
EXPENDITURES.
Printing of Proceedings, etc.,	$43.24
Expenses of Library and Correspondence,	40.64
Paid for binding of books,	21.25
Total expenditures of the year,	$85.13
Balance on hand, May 18th, 1870,	$881.15
	$966.28

The Treasurer also made a statement respecting the condition of the fund for the purchase of Chinese type, provided by the kind offices of the late Hon. Charles W. Bradley. The arrival of the font ordered from Shanghai was reported at the last meeting. Its cost was as follows:

For type (180 lbs, small pica),	$324.00
Type-cases,	12.00
Packing, freight, and insurance,	22.00
Premium on $358 in Mexican dollars,	136.79
Expenses in New York, duty, cartage, etc.,	75.00
Total expense,	$569.79

To meet this, the Treasurer had drawn on Messrs. Baring, Brothers, & Co., of London, with whom the fund was deposited by Mr. Bradley, for £100, which yielded in currency $670.08. The balance, about $100, is deposited in the Townsend Savings Bank at New Haven to the credit of the fund, and about £92 still remains in the hands of Messrs. Barings.

The Librarian excused himself, on the score of other pressing occupations, for having come unprepared with a full Report of the condition of the Library, and gave a brief oral statement respecting the additions made to it during the year. The most important donations had come from the Vienna Academy of Sciences, and from Prof. Fitz-Edward Hall of London.

The Committee of Publication reported that, as authorized by the Directors last fall, they had commenced the reprinting of Vol. ix., Part 1, of the Journal, as soon as the printing office had been restored to working order after the fire; and that the work had since gone on without interruption, but was not yet quite finished. It was intended to proceed with the printing of Part 2, as soon as the other should be out of the way.

The Directors notified the next meeting, as to be held in New Haven on the nineteenth of October, unless the Committee of Arrangements (Prof. Hadley of New Haven, with the Recording and Corresponding Secretaries) should alter the appointment—which they were authorized to do, if it appeared desirable.

The following persons, on recommendation of the Directors, were elected members of the Society: namely,
as Corporate Members,

Mr. Erastus B. Bigelow, of Boston.
Prof. Ferdinand Böcher, of Boston.
Prof. J. Lewis Diman, of Providence, R. I.
Mr. James B. Greenough, of Cambridge, Mass.
Mr. Thomas S. Perry, of Cambridge, Mass.
Mr. Charles T. Russell, of Cambridge, Mass.
Rev. J. Herbert Senter, of Cambridge, Mass.
Prof. Peter H. Steenstra, of Cambridge, Mass.
Prof. Francis Wharton, D.D., of Brookline, Mass.
Rev. Henry A. Yardley, of Middletown, Conn.

as Corresponding Members,

Rev. Albert L. Long, D.D., Missionary at Constantinople.
Rev. Hyman A. Wilder, Missionary in South Africa.

Mr. J. S. Ropes of Boston, Rev. W. H. Ward of New York, and Hon. J. D. Baldwin of Worcester, were appointed by the chair a Nominating Committee, to propose a ticket for officers for the ensuing year; and the following gentlemen, nominated by them, were elected without dissent:

President —Pres. T. D. WOOLSEY, D.D., LL.D.,	of New Haven.
Vice-Presidents { Rev. RUFUS ANDERSON, D.D.,	" Boston.
Hon. PETER PARKER, M.D.,	" Washington.
Prof. EDW. E. SALISBURY, LL.D.,	" New Haven.
Secr. of Class. Section —Prof. JAMES HADLEY, LL.D.,	" New Haven.
Recording Secretary —Mr. EZRA ABBOT, LL.D.,	" Cambridge.
Treasurer —Prof. D. C. GILMAN,	" New Haven.
Librarian —Prof. W. D. WHITNEY,	" New Haven.

Directors	Mr. J. W. BARROW,	of New York.
	Mr. A. I. COTHEAL,	" New York.
	Prof. W. W. GOODWIN, Ph.D.,	" Cambridge.
	Prof. W. H. GREEN, D.D.,	" Princeton.
	Prof. A. P. PEABODY, D.D.,	" Cambridge.
	Dr. CHARLES PICKERING,	" Boston.
	Prof. CHARLES SHORT, LL.D.,	" New York.

While the committee were deliberating, an interesting series of photographs from India and Farther India were exhibited to the members, and briefly commented on, by Rev. J. T. Gracey.

The Corresponding Secretary then announced the losses which the Society had suffered by death during the year; namely, two Corporate Members, Rev. E. Burgess and Rev. Dr. Proudfit (the latter during some years past a Director); and three Corresponding Members; Prof. Romeo Elton, late of Exeter, England, Rev. Dr. Justin Perkins, during many years a missionary in Ormiah, and Mr. William Winthrop, American consul at Malta. He said a few words with regard to each of these gentlemen, briefly setting forth the claims that they had upon the respectful and affectionate remembrance of the Society, as well as of scholars in America and through the world. He spoke especially of Mr. Burgess, who would be remembered in connection with the translation of the Sūrya-Siddhānta published some years since in the Society's Journal, and with whom he had himself for some time been thrown into intimate relations while that work was in preparation and passing through the press. Mr. Burgess returned to this country in 1854, after more than fourteen years of service as a missionary in western India. He died of pneumonia, near Boston, on the first day of this year.

Prof. Hadley gave a somewhat detailed account of the life and literary labors of Dr. Proudfit, and a view of his character as a scholar and as a man.

The eminent services of the venerable Dr. Perkins in the cause of Christian philanthropy and of learning were set forth by Rev. Mr. Treat, Dr. Parker, and others.

The correspondence of the past six months was presented, and read in part. The following are extracts:

From Mr. Freeman A. Smith, Treasurer of the American Baptist Missionary Union, dated Boston, Nov. 9th, 1869:

"Knowing you to be interested in such things, I send herewith a copy from an ancient metallic plate found by Mr. Bunker, one of our missionaries, among the Red Karens, together with a copy of our magazine, where you will see what he writes respecting it."

Mr. Bunker says:

"It has been long known that an ancient metal plate, having strange characters engraven on it, existed among the Red Karens. While at Kontie's village, we succeeded, after much difficulty, in obtaining a sight of the famous plate, and were also allowed to copy it. The plate is composed of copper, brass, and probably some gold. They regard it as very sacred, and guard it with most zealous care. It is supposed by them to possess life, and they say it requires to be 'fed with metal.' I fed it with a piece of silver of the value of about fifty cents, but did not see it eat while I was near. The common people fear its power greatly, and dare not look at it, as they say it has power to blind their eyes. The traditions of most of the Karen tribes point to this tablet, I think, and it may be of very ancient origin. The character in which it is written is quite different from any of the characters in which the languages of the East are written, so far as I have been able to learn."

A copy of the inscription was exhibited to the members present, but no one could cast any light upon its strange characters. The Secretary said that he was hoping to obtain additional information upon the matter from Farther India, to be laid before the Society hereafter. The plate is one referred to in Mr. Cross's paper on the Karens and their language, read at the meeting in October, 1866, and reported in the Proceedings of that meeting (Journal, vol. ix., p. xii.).

From Rev. C. H. A. Dall, dated Calcutta, Nov. 27th, 1869:

"In Bombay, lately, I had the pleasure of meeting Dr. Blau Daji at the monthly meeting of the Bombay Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, and was surprised to hear him say that within a year or so, or as soon as his practice (as a physician) would permit, he expected to visit England and America. I am not very sorry that you are likely to see, yet sooner, Babu Keshub Chunder Sen; of whom you have heard as the eloquent leader of the partly christianized Hindus, the Brahmos. He does not feel settled as to the American part of his visit; but, when calls reach him, as they are sure to do, he will yield to the pressure, and accomplish a visit which I am very desirous that he should make. The presence of these two cultured Oriental gentlemen will, I am sure, make Orientalism dawn on America as never before."

From Mrs. S. J. Rhea, dated Jonesboro, Tennessee, Dec. 5th, 1869; respecting her late husband's Kurdish papers, presented at the previous meeting, giving some explanations as to their character, and expressing her desire to be helpful in any way toward their publication.

From Dr. A. T. Pratt, dated Constantinople, March 16th, 1870:

"... I procured a fine copy of a Cufic inscription some time since and sent it to you; but, together with a valuable lot of coins, it was lost on the way. I am now hoping to send you the stone itself in the course of the summer. ... I have a grammar of the Turkish language of my own, which I hope to forward as soon as I can get an English translation to go with it. During nearly two years past I have been here, engaged on the revision of the version of the Bible made by Dr. Goodell.

Dr. Paspatis is getting out a large work on the Gypsy language, of which I presume you will receive a copy."

Communications being now in order, the following were presented:

1. On the Glagolitic Alphabet, by Rev. A. L. Long, of Constantinople; presented by the Corresponding Secretary.

This was an inquiry into the origin of the Glagolitic character, in which a part of the oldest Slavic literature is preserved, and into its relation to the more usual character, the Cyrillic. Of the two, the Cyrillic is usually ascribed to the Slavic apostle Cyril, who used it for his translation of the Scriptures (about A.D. 862); respecting the other, opinions have been much divided, some attributing its invention to Methodius, Cyril's brother, others to Clement, archbishop of Velitsa in Bulgaria, and pupil of Cyril and Methodius; while yet others regard it as some centuries older than Cyril, and many accept the Dalmatian traditions which would make St. Jerome its inventor. Dr. Long, now, differing from all these, maintains that the Glagolitic was the alphabet devised by Cyril, and was exclusively used in his time, while the so-called Cyrillic, which is no independent invention, but only an adaptation of the Greek alphabet to the Slavic language, was the work of Clement (who died A.D. 916). The various considerations which appear to support this view are detailed in the paper. At the end, the author acknowledges his obligations to P. J. Schaffarik's work "On the Origin and Home of Glagolitic" (Prague, 1858).

Remarks upon this paper, approving its conclusions, were made by Mr. J. S. Ropes.

2. On the Moabite Inscription of King Mesha, by Rev. Wm. Hayes Ward, of New York.

Mr. Ward first detailed the history of the securing of the inscription by M. Ganneau, from the first discovery of the monument by the German Klein. After showing that it was undoubtedly genuine, and dated back to nearly nine hundred years before Christ, Mr. Ward laid before the meeting a transliterated copy of it in Hebrew characters, and the following translation:

¹ I am Mesha son of Chemosh [nadab] King of Moab [the D-] ² ibonite. | My father reigned over Moab thirty years and I reigned ³ after my father. | And I made this high place to Chemosh in Karlah and [this House of Sal-] ⁴ vation because he has saved me from all the attacks and because he has caused me to look on all my enemies. | O [m r] i ⁵ was King of Israel, and he afflicted Moab many days, because Chemosh was angry with his [land]. | ⁶ And his son succeeded him, and he also said, "I will afflict Moab." | In my days he spake thus, ⁷ And I looked on him and on his house, | and Israel kept continually perishing. And Onri held possession of the land (?) of ⁸ Medeba. And there dwelt in it [Omri and his son and his grand-] son forty years. [But] ⁹ Chemosh [restored] it in my days. | And I built Baal-Meon and I made in it ———. And I [besieged] (?) ¹⁰ Kirjathaim. | And the men of Gad had dwelt of old in the land [of Kirjathaim]. And the King of Israel built ¹¹ for him [Kirjathaim]. | And I fought against the city and took it. | And I slew all the [men of] ¹² the city, a spectacle to Chemosh and to Moab. | And I brought back from thence the [altar of Jehovah, and ¹³ put] it before Chemosh in Kerioth. | And I caused to dwell therein the men of Shiran; and the men of — ¹⁴ Sharath. | And Chemosh said to me, "Go and take Nebo from Israel." | [And I —] ¹⁵ went in the night and I fought against it from the overspreading of the dawn till noon. | And I [took it and I] ¹⁶ [utterly destroyed] it, and I slew all of it seven thousand ———. ¹⁷ for to Ashtor Chemosh had [I] devoted [them]; and I took from thence ¹⁸ the vessels of Jehovah, and I presented them before Chemosh. | And the King of Israel [built] ¹⁹ Jahaz and dwelt in it while he was fighting against me. | And Chemosh drove him from [before me. ²⁰ And] I took from Moab 200 men, all told; | and I attacked (?) Jahaz and took it, ²¹ adding it to Dibon. | I built Karlah, the wall of the forests and the wall of ²² the hill (Ophel). | And I built its gates and I built its towers. | and ²³ I made a royal palace, and I made reservoirs for the collection of the waters in the midst of the city. | ²⁴ And there was no eistern in the midst of the city in Karlah; and I said to all the people, "Make ²⁵ for you each a cistern in his house." And I dug ditches (?) for Karlah in [the road to] ²⁶ Israel. | I built [A]roer, and I made the high way to Arnon. I built ²⁷ Beth-Bamoth, for it was ruined. | and I built Bozrah, for it was deserted. And I ²⁸ set in Dibon garrisons (?); for all Dibon was submissive. | And I filled (?) — ²⁹ in the cities which I added to the land. | And I built — and ³⁰ the temple of Diblathaim. | and the temple of Baal-Meon, and I raised up there — ³¹ — the land. | And there dwelt in Honoraim — ³² Chemosh said to me, "Go, fight against Honoraim." | And I ³³ — Chemosh in my days . . . ³⁴ * * * *

Mr. Ward explained that in most points he agrees with either Ganneau, Schlottmann, Dérenbourg, Nöldeke, or Neubauer in their versions and corrections of the defective text. He drew, however, more especial attention to certain matters with regard to which he differed from previous commentators. The latter have made the perpendicular stroke near the end of the third line a mark of division between the sentences. This it cannot be, as the dot which divides the words also appears here, and in no other case are both found together. The stroke can be either γ or κ , and is no doubt the former. This puts a repetition of במק out of the question. The reading suggested, במקדון , seems plausible. The doubtful character at the beginning of the eighth line must be either γ or κ . The feminine form במקד is often used for plain, which is just what we want. The masculine is put in the text. Still in Capt. Warren's impression the letter looks more like γ , which would allow אמן . The suggested emendations for the end of the fifteenth and the beginning of the sixteenth line, and for the seventeenth line, are new. The fac-simile of Ganneau seems to show in line twenty-three a flaw in the stone. The fact that the letters as they stand hardly make sense is an indication that the flaw did not exist when the inscription was made, in which case the scribe would have continued the unfinished word on the other side of the flaw, as is the case in the ninth line of the great Sidonian inscription of king Eshmunazer. But the letters which we have, במקדון , cannot be translated, the last word being neither plural of איש , 'man,' nor anything else imaginable. Schlottmann and others have suggested אשור , 'out-pouring.' This word and its masculine form are only used in the Bible in connection with the geography of the region of Moab, and אשור הירדס of the old song of which we have a fragment in Num. xxi. 15 compares well with the אשור הירדס or אשור הירדס , which even may be preferable, which I would suggest. Such expressions as "troughs of the waters," Gen. xxx. 38, "brook of the waters," 2 Sam. xvii. 20, "well of the waters," "well" or "fountain of waters," "storm of waters," Hab. iii. 10 are frequent in the Bible. The third word in the eighteenth line I read אשור הירדס from Capt. Warren's photographs, which he has misread. The first word in the twenty-second line is read from the photographs as הירדס , giving us exactly the biblical phrase "wall of Ophel."

The language of the inscription is almost pure Hebrew, but with an approach toward the southern Semitic tongues. This appears in the comparative scarcity of quiescent letters, in the plural in Nun, and especially in the Hiphael conjugation, הירדס which has its correspondences in Arabic, Ethiopic, and Assyrian. Another evident example of this is the use of verbs לִי instead of לִי . Thus we have אני and אני for אני and אני . In these cases Noldeke assumes that the final לִי is a personal suffix, and that thus a double object is expressed, as is common in Syriac. But the language shows little assimilation to Aramaic peculiarities, and it is more probable that the root is preserved in these forms in a more archaic shape than in Hebrew.

The form of the characters proves the correctness of de Vogüé's assertion that the oldest Canaanite alphabet was distinguished by its sharp angles. Among the more interesting forms are the γ , which is for the first time found as a simple triangle, like the Greek Δ ; δ which we first find here as a perpendicular crossed by three horizontal lines, which suggest the Greek Ξ ; γ , which suggests the Greek Υ ; κ , which is precisely the Greek Kappa; and α , which is an oblique cross, or X.

The separation of words is found in some other very ancient inscriptions, as in the second inscription of Citium, that of Tucca, and two others.

The lacuna in the eighth line is very unfortunate, as it leaves the chronology in some doubt. Schlottmann is certainly wrong in supposing it possible to make forty years out of the Bible chronology of the reigns of Omri, Ahab, and Ahaziah, which occupied only thirty-one years. If these scriptural figures are correct, and they appear to be, it must be supposed either that Omri began to afflict Moab before he became king while general of Baasha's army, or that the successes of Mesha occurred after the campaigns mentioned in Scripture, and during the latter years of Jehoram. The "round number," which Noldeke, Schlottmann, and others have suggested, would have been thirty instead of forty, if this campaign be referred to the first rebellion of Mesha—even if a round number is assumable on such a monument.

3. Remarks on the Discovery of a second "Rosetta Stone," at Tanis in Lower Egypt, by Hon. J. D. Baldwin, of Worcester.

In this very brief paper, Mr. Baldwin called attention once more to the inscription of Tanis, brought to light by Lepsius in 1866, and published as a "bilingual decree" in the same year the existence of its third, or Demotic, text being not then known. He read from a letter received by him from Lepsius, to the effect that "the original is now in the Museum of Bulak. Its complete disinterment,
